NOW TORIES CLOSE GAP

TORONTO (UPC) — A new Gallup poll shows the governing Liberals are now only one point ahead of the Conservatives, who have a hefty majority in Ontario, which is expected to play a major role in the May 22 election.

The survey, reported late Friday, gave the Liberals 39 per cent of the decided vote, with the Tories unchanged from last month's poll at 38 per cent. The New Democratic Party slipped by one point, to 16 percent. Gallup researchers also said the number of undecided voters had dropped from 39 per cent to 11 per cent in one month. The survey showed the Tories were 10 percentage points ahead in Conservative-governed Ontario, where many experts predict the election will be decided.

It's The Pierre, Joe and Ed Show!

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau, Joe Clark and Ed Broadbent face off Sunday in a national television debate that will provide the only nose-to-nose test of the three federal political leaders in the May 22 election campaign.

A potential audience of six million will score the two-hour contest, and all three leaders plan to combat any pre-event jitters with quiet, non-political weekends.

(Other federal election stories on pages 67 and 68).

The scene is more hectic among the 60 or so television executives, assistants and make-up artists who are staging the show for the CBC, CTV and Global networks from the local CTV affiliate here.

Lecterns on the all-grey set have been bolted down so they can't topple accidentally when the Liberal, Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party leaders are behind them.

Three senior television reporters are worrying over the side-line role they've been asked to play on the show, saying they could end up looking like journalistic patsies.

Producers are scurrying to come up with an opening script for debate moderator David Johnston, 37, recently-named principal of McGill University in Montreal.

And television switchboard operators are gearing up for expected complaints from viewers who would rather watch such programs as the sit-com Three's Company, starring sex symbol Suzanne Sommers, or the historical drama I, Claudius. They've been pre-empted in Ontario by the prime time political special, which will be seen at 5 p.m. in Victoria.

Only viewers who watch French-language television or those with cable connections to the United States will be able to escape the debate.

Communications sage Marshall McLuhan, meanwhile, says the debate won't mean much anyway. What is said on television, he says, "doesn't much matter because the people appear so unreal."

That doesn't deter political strategists for the three leaders, who have been concentrating on television to sell their candidates throughout the campaign and who see the debate as a chance to score important points in advance of the final week-long drive for votes.

Planners in all parties have provided their leaders with detailed briefings on everything from clothes to posture, mulling over fine points of the three half-hour-long debates which will pit Clark against Broadbent, Broadbent against Trudeau and finally Trudeau against Clark.

Two at a time, the leaders will stand behind lecterns less than three feet apart, trading shots, asking questions and making points while the third looks on.

There's a "heavy premium on interaction," says executive director Peter Herndorff of the CBC.

Moderator Johnston will introduce the show, give each leader a three-minute opening statement and turn to the panel of journalists if he feels the debate is bogging down.

Herndorff says the three

Shellfish Pollution Closure For Inlet

Six areas in the Saanich Inlet have been declared polluted and unfit for taking shellfish for the first time on record.

Federal fisheries officer Larry Duke says 90 per cent of the pollution can be blamed on faulty septic fields.

"The water condition hasn't changed overnight but probably built up over the years," Duke says, adding that older buildings and residences with faulty septic fields are the biggest culprits.

Two of the favorite spots for clam-diggers are among the six areas that had warning signs posted on April 25.

One is Mill Bay where the ban extends from Hatch Point southwards to the foot of Frayne Road in Mill Bay. The second is Patricia Bay, where the ban runs from a line between the western boundary of the Union Bay Indian reserve to the foot of Sangster Road.

Deep Cove is considered polluted easterly of Moses Point to Cole Point while Thompson Cove's ban lies easterly between the northern headline of Thompson Cove and Henderson Point.

The sixth area to be put off limits is Cole Bay. There the ban runs between McTavish Road and the small point of land 380 metres to the south of McTavish Road.

Dyke says the requirements are much higher for waters where clams and other bivalve molluscs grow, compared to waters used by swimmers. He says this is because clams and other shellfish siphon through "gallons and gallons of water" daily, building up concentrations of bacteria.

He says a similar situation at the Sooke River Flats several years ago was rectified by removing most of the cause of the pollution, faulty septic-tank systems.

"As an example, the Sooke Hotel spent a fair amount of money," Duke reports.

13-Kilometre Gas Backup

Associated Press

Gasoline lines spilled onto freeways and caused traffic backups up to 13 kilometres long Friday, as California's rationing plan was tested in the pre-weekend gas rush.

The 13-kilometre whopper outside Oxnard, 100 kilometres northwest of Los Angeles, was caused by a spillover onto Highway 101 from a line at a station that turned out to be closed.

It was one of the more spectacular tales of woe told by desperate drivers on the third day of the rationing scheme, which permits motorists to buy gas based on the last digit in their licence plate.

The rationing plan has been adopted by 13 of the state's 58 counties, but those 13 contain about 12 million of the state's 15 million motorists.

Meanwhile in Washington President Carter accused the House of Representatives of "political timidity" for turning down a bill that would have given him power to ration fuel if necessary.

An Associated Press spot check showed that some motorists will find it almost impossible to get gasoline Sunday. Other drivers will find it relatively easy. It all depends on where they live. end supply for visitors.

There have been predictions that the real crunch will come during the Memorial Day weekend.

Nine Die In Fiery Crash

QUESNEL (CP) — Nine persons were killed early today in a fiery two-vehicle crash about 48 kilometres south of this central community, RCMP said.

A car carrying five persons collided with a truck carrying four persons abut 1:30 a.m. on Highway 97.

Police said both vehicles exploded and caught fire.

No names were released. RCMP said the bodies were severely burned, making identification difficult. All the victims were believed to be from the Quesnel area.

Bomb Game Kills 8 Kids

BEIRUT (AP) — Eight Lebanese children were killed and six wounded when a bomb they were playing with exploded in a southern Lebanese village, authorities said today.

The eight victims, ranging in age from 8 to 13, were brothers and cousins from one family, said a spokesman for the provincial governor in Sidon, administrative capital of southern Lebanon. The blast occurred Friday at the village of Babiliyeh, 12 kilometres south of Sidon and 50 kilometres south of Beirut.

The leftist Beirut newspaper As Safir said the explosive was a U.S.-made "cluster" bomb dropped by an Israeli plane during raids earlier this week on Palestinian targets along Lebanon's southern coastal highway.

Government officials in Sidon would not confirm or deny the newspaper report. However, they said Israel planes dropped cluster bombs during their recent raids in the south.

A Cure for Language Headaches

MONTREAL (CP) — If languages are your headache, certain "capsules" now on the market may ease the pain.

Amis MC 400 Translator capsules, each about the size of a postage stamp, slip into what its makers call the world's "first truly portable, hand-held computer" which can translates words and several complete sentences into three languages at a time.

"It's revolutionized travel," says Reg Scullion, Canadian distributor of the MC 400. "With it, you can go anywhere off the beaten track and you don't constantly have to track down the English hotels so you know what you're eating."

The MC 400 resembles an ordinary pocket calculator except for its keyboard display of both letters and figures. It holds up to three language capsules at a time, each containing a basic 1,500-word vocabulary.

More advanced capsules are planned to hold up to 25,000 words — or what Scullion estimates is 8,000 words more than the average college graduate can retain.

"We all know how tedious it can be putting together a sentence out of a dictionary or a textbook," says Scullion. "With the Amis you enter a word or sentence, press a button and there you have the translation.

"There are 50 complete or partial phrases pre-programmed in the computer to speed up the basic communication process."

Commonly used phrases such as "Do you cash travellers' cheques?" and requests for directions appear across the gadget's tiny screen in blue lighting.

Other features include a hold button which prevent proper nouns from being translated and a search button to provide a review of double meanings.

Capsules are now available for six languages: English, French, German, Spanish, Italian and Japanese.

Scullion says a capsule for Russian now is being rushed into production because of a 1,000-unit order from NBC television for reporters covering the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

Plagiarism Stalks Harlequin Heroines

TORONTO (UPC) — The troubled world of the drugstore romance has washed over into real life with the announcement that Harlequin Enterprises Ltd. is suing an American competitor for allegedly plagiarizing five books and publishing them as its own.

Harlequin charged Friday that the course of true love in the pulp novel field had been disturbed by Kim Publishing Corp. of New York and one of its divisions, Macfadden Romances.

Documents filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York allege that Kim Publishing and Macfadden published the five books as "Original Macfadden Romances."

Harlequin said the five alleged plagiarisms involve the competitor's titles The Night Bird's Song, Debut of Love, Love's Tender Path, Light of Love and Blue Sea Interlude.

Harlequin said it has identified two other infringements — The Dark of The Moon and The Bermuda Sunset — which will be included in the suit.

Fred Kerner, vice-president of Harlequin, said in an interview the books were sold in both the United States and Canada. The alleged duplication of plots was discovered by the company's editorial staff in Toronto.

"We recognized plots that were very similar to plots we had done and checking into them we found them the same," he said. "It was a matter of reading both books and comparing plots."

Harlequin produces scores of new titles every year — almost exclusively romances aimed at female readers — which are sold in drugstores and supermarkets.

The legal action, started by Harlequin and its subsidiary Mills and Boon Ltd., calls for damages for copyright infringement, injunctions preventing further distribution of the alleged plagiarisms and impoundment of all copies, costs and attorneys' fees.

"Plagiarism is an act of violence to the creative process," the company said in a news release. "Harlequin will prosecute all persons involved."

Yugoslav Diplomat Getting the Boot

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto-based Yugoslav diplomat accused of harassing Yugoslav-Canadians was ordered expelled from the country Friday, the external affairs department announced.

The department issued a statement saying Mijat Tomic, vice-consul at the Yugoslav consulate general in Toronto, "had used his position in Canada to exert improper pressure on Canadians of Yugoslav origin in order to obtain information and to influence developments in the Canadian Yugoslav community."

The Yugoslavian embassy has been asked to ensure Tomic leaves Canada within seven days, the department statement said.

Jet-Hopping Scientist Carried Plutonium Powder in Suitcase

RICHLAND, Wash. (UPI) — A nuclear chemist violated federal law by packing deadly radioactive plutonium into his suitcase and taking it with him on a five-day cross-county convention trip in 1976.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported in a copyrighted story today that Atlantic Richfield chemist William H. Zimmer stuffed packages containing 0.34 grams of plutonium — the world's most dangerous radioactive substance — into a suitcase and took it on several commercial airline flights before finally delivering it to Intelrad Tech Corp. in San Diego.

Intelrad officials asked him for the transfer papers authorizing shipment of the lethal material from the Hanford Nuclear Reservation.

"What transfer papers?," said Zimmer, who had 25 years experience handling radioactive materials at Hanford, according to the paper.

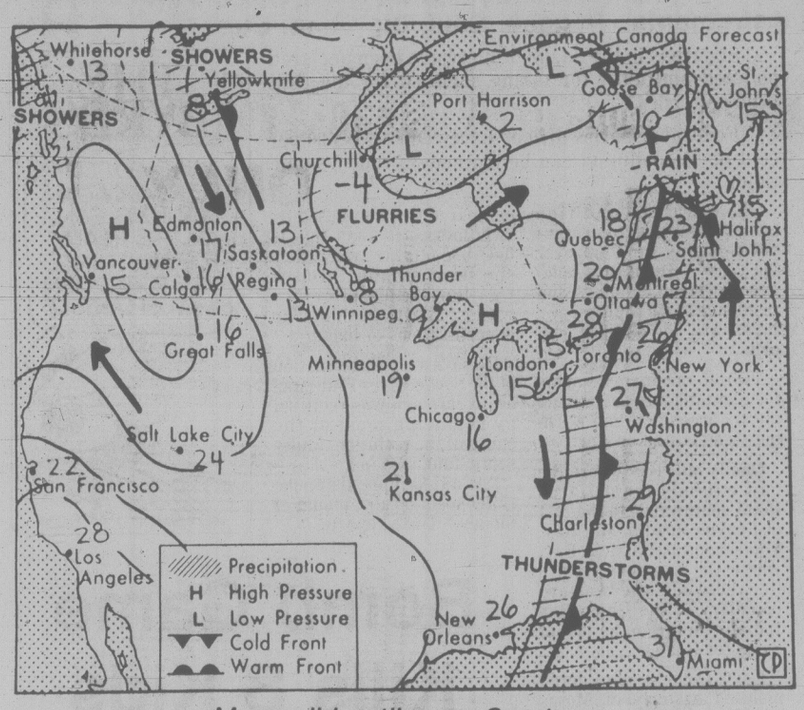
When he returned to Hanford to obtain the necessary papers, Atlantic Richfield discovered the violation, which broke at least 11 Hanford regulations, a federal report said.

The nuclear chemist, now employed by a nuclear contractor in Oakridge, Tenn., was given the choice by Atlantic Richfield of resigning or taking a 90-day suspension without pay.

Zimmer, 49, took the 90-day suspension and then resigned.

Transporting the material on commerical airlines is a violation of federal law and the plutonium, also used for making bombs, was not properly packaged or marked as radioactive material, said the federal report.

The plutonium was powdered, which is most dangerous form to humans, but was closely contained in lead foil and high-impact plastic vials, said the report.



Map valid until noon Sunday

A weakening ridge of high pressure still lies along the B.C. coast. However, weather systems approaching from the Pacific have been intensifying. One system is pushing towards the coast, reaching coastal districts this morning and then continuing east across the interior. The next system will follow in its wake on Sunday. Occasional precipitation accompany these systems on the coast with chance of a shower or two over the southern interior in the afternoon. At the same time isolated showers are forecast over the remainder of the interior.

Blaze Reactor Threat

GARCHING, West Germany (AP) — Fire swept a nuclear research laboratory outside Munich early today but firemen prevented the flames from reaching radioactive materials and a nearby experimental reactor, authorities said.

The six-hour blaze threatened to radioactive material stored in metal containers inside the laboratory but authorities said monitoring showed that no radioactive matter escaped.

The fire was in a research building operated by Munich Polytechnical University and the Max Planck Institute for Plasma Physics in Garching, just north of Munich.

Police cordoned off the site as firemen tackled the blaze and nuclear teams monitored the area for possible radioactive leaks.

Cup to Arsenal In Fiery Finish

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal orchestrated the most stunning finish to an English Football Association Cup final in years today with a last-minute goal that beat Manchester United 3-2.

Arsenal, last year's beaten finalists, appeared to be cruising comfortably with a 2-0 lead and three minutes remaining in regulation time when the roof fell in.

Centre half Gordon McQueen strode into the penalty area to sidefoot home in the 87th minute and 60 seconds later Irish international Sammy McIlroy wriggled through Arsenal's shaky defence and his blocked shot rolled past goaltender Pat Jennings for a sensational equallizer.

But the excitement was far from over.

Meanwhile, in Glasgow, the Rangers' hopes of completing the second part of an impressive soccer treble were thwarted at Hampden Park Saturday when they were held to a goalless draw by Hibernian in the Scottish FA Cup final.

The replay is at Hampden Park on Wednesday.

Last season Rangers completed the hat-trick of Scottish soccer titles — League Cup, Scottish FA Cup and league championship — and were favored to complete the second part of that treble this year.

The Poor Little, Rich Girl Barbara Hutton Dies at 66

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Hutton, 66, the F. W. Woolworth heiress known in childhood as the "poor little rich girl," has died of cardiac arrest, a spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Centre said.

She was married seven times and was a princess three times — yet she was a symbol of the cliche that money doesn't always buy happiness.

On Friday, she was brought to Cedars-Sinai and pronounced dead on arrival at 5:10 p.m.

Miss Hutton was born in New York Nov. 14, 1912.

At 18, she made her debut at a lavish supper dance. At 19, she was introduced at the Court of St. James, and at 20 she married her first husband — Alexis Mdivani, who claimed the title of prince of Georgia in old Russia.

A few months later, she came into her $20-million inheritance.

In 1935, she divorced Mdivani in Reno, Nev., charging extreme cruelty. Later that year, Mdivani was killed in an automobile crash.

One day after the divorce, she married Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow, a wealthy Danish nobleman.

In the '20s — Last year

That was her longest marriage, ending in divorce six years later after the birth of a son, Lance.

In 1942, Miss Hutton married British-born actor Cary Grant. She would later say he was the husband "I loved most; he was so sweet, so gentle." But she said his acting career got in the way, and the marriage was dissolved after three years.

Her fourth husband was Lithuanian Prince Igor Troubetskoy, whom she married in 1947. That marriage lasted until 1951. Then came the briefest marriage, to Porfirio Rubirosa, an international playboy and the Dominican Republic's minister to France. They were married in 1953, but were separated and divorced after 73 days.

In 1955, Miss Hutton married German tennis ace Baron Gottfried Von Cramm. They were divorced in 1960. Her final marriage was to Laotian Prince Raymond Doan Vinh in 1964. They were separated in 1966.

Her body was being flown to New York for funeral arrangements, Miss Griffin said.

Eugene, Where Are You?

Somewhere in the Atlantic Ocean, Eugene Englonder, a former Hungarian freedom fighter, is on his way to Europe — alone and without a radio in a tiny sailboat he has never piloted before. The 65-year-old retired draftsman never had a sailing lesson in his life, but told family, friends and neighbors to mind their own business when they tried to dissuade him from making the trip. Englonder set sail last Saturday for Gibraltar, Istanbul and Hungary, and U.S. Coast Guard officials now say they don't know the location of his vessel and that the 23-foot boat with an eight-horsepower motor attached is "hardly the type of thing you'd attempt to cross the ocean in."

A $3 million negligence suit brought against a midtown Manhattan restaurant by actor Yul Brynner and two friends has been settled out of court. Attorneys said they had agreed not to divulge the amount involved in the settlement. Brynner, actress Joan Diener, and her husband Albert Marre, a director, brought suit against Trader Vic's, claiming they suffered trichinosis after dining on spare ribs at the restaurant on Nov. 3, 1974.

There's no settlement in sight for Bianca Jagger who made a personal appearance in a Los Angeles Courtroom Friday to support her request that California accept jurisdiction in the pending divorce action against her husband, rock star Mick Jagger. Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer postponed his decision until Monday.

Still to appear in court is rock star Gregg Allman has entered a written plea of not guilty to a charge of reckless driving in Daytona Beach, Fla., and has been ordered to stand trial June 4 before Judge Darrel Carnell. Allman, 31, was charged March 16 after his car collided with a slower-moving auto on a Daytona Beach street. Two women in the other car required hospital treatment and the Florida Highway Patrol estimated damage to the two cars at $5,500.

Out of court but unhappy is Olivia Newton-John who will have to continue recording exclusively for MCA Records until her contract with the firm expires in 1980, according to a ruling by the California Supreme Court. The high court refused on Friday to review a state Court of Appeal decision upholding a preliminary injunction issued in Superior Court. The injunction restrains the singer from recording for any company other than MCA while the suit is pending, or until April 1, 1982. The appeal court changed the date to 1980.

Meanwhile, police swooped like lightning when Olive MacKenzie's $200,000 Stradivarius violin was stolen, in Birmingham, England, and Miss MacKenzie rather wishes they hadn't. Within a few hours after she reported the theft police recovered the violin from an antique shop — and identified it as a fake. "It's worth about $40," said one expert. "I am stunned," said Miss MacKenzie, 62, who has been an orchestral soloist on the "Stradivarius" most of her life. "I would like a second opinion."

And, finally, John Morton, the renowned humorist Beachcomber who created a comic world all his own in the London Daily Express, has died at age 85, the newspaper reported today. Morton's By the Way column ran for half a century and, in the opinion of many, made him the father of modern British humor. His famous fictional characters included Rustiguzzi, a formidable female opera star; Dr. Smart-Allick, headmaster of Narkover School; Dr. Strabismus "(whom God preserve)" of Utrecht, Captain Foulenough, the gentleman confidence trickster; Tumblova, the ballerina, and Mr. Justice Cocklecarrot, who dealt in bizarre fashion with the extraordinary cases Morton brought before him.

Killer Heat Hits India

NEW DELHI (AP) — About 70 persons have died in a two-week heat wave across northern India, and tens of thousands were evacuated from east coast villages hit by a hurricane today, news reports say.

Temperatures ranged as high as 42 Celsius in Bihar state where at least 60 persons succumbed to sunstroke, the reports said. Deaths also were reported in the neighboring state of Uttar Pradesh.

New Delhi recorded a high temperature of 41 degrees on Friday.

A hurricane struck the eastern coast of India today, disrupting communications, flooding low-lying areas and marooning hundreds of persons, the United News of India reported.

Nellore, a district headquarters about 150 kilometres north of Madras, was described as a "picture of total desolation" by official reports, the domestic news agency said in a dispatch from Hyderabad, capital of Andhra Pradesh state.

India Radio said 30,000 persons have been evacuated so far from coastal areas, and the armed forces have been placed on alert for rescue and relief operations.

Action urgently needed

Victoria Mayor Mike Young told us this week that he isn't impressed with the idea of community-based policing methods as a deterrent to the city's spiralling crime rate. It hasn't, he said, been proved that the new policing methods are effective.

A couple of questions, then, for the mayor: First, what sort of evidence would he like before he would agree that the new methods do work? And second, what alternatives is he proposing to cope with a crime rate that is rising at the rate of 13.5 per cent per year in supposedly safe, serene Victoria?

Young is right when he says it isn't too easy to measure the success of community-based, team or preventive policing programs. How can anyone count the number of crimes that haven't been committed that otherwise might have been? A mindreader, not a statistician, would be needed.

It is, however, possible to compare the crime rates and the increases in crime in cities like Victoria where policing is still quite traditional and in other B.C. communities like Surrey, North Vancouver, and Vancouver where the new methods have been put into effect. The comparison is telling: In each of those communities, the crime rate is less than two-thirds of Victoria's; in each, the increase in crime was less than one-third of Victoria's during 1978.

Perhaps there are other reasons for the lower crime rates on the mainland. Perhaps there are other differences between those communities and Victoria that account for the differences in crime statistics. If Mayor Young has information about those differences, he should immediately make them public, rather than uttering generalities about new methods that aren't proven. Without such information, those statistics imply that community policing works — at least that it works well enough that it should be given a try in Victoria.

If the mayor still isn't enthusiastic about the idea, however, what else is he going to suggest? As Ald. Robin Blencoe said this week in urging the police board to take immediate action on Victoria's crime problem, the 1978 statistics for the city — the 13.5 per cent increase in crime, a 20 per cent increase in property crime, the city's crime rate now the sixth highest in all B.C. — are truly alarming.

Something must be done and done soon. As Blencoe said, it isn't good enough to put the blame on extraneous factors such as lax juvenile delinquency laws when those laws are uniform throughout the province.

Now is the time for the city, and in particular Mayor Young and the rest of the police board, to take decisive action. Blencoe's idea of a special attack on property crime along with the revival of his proposal for community policing is one approach to the problem. It might work. At least it should be tried.

If the police board members don't like it, they should quickly come up with another proposal that holds the promise of being equally effective.

The city deserves no less.

First priority

If the provincial election confirmed one thing, it is that B.C.'s permanent voter's list and system of enumeration badly needs reforming. It is remarkable, in the light of the horror stories that started circulating when the list closed last month and the large volume of special ballots required for voting on Thursday, that there were not crowds of angry disenfranchised demanding that the election be cancelled.

B.C. is alone in Canada in maintaining a permanent registration of voters, which should be the best and most up to date in the country with a permanent staff continuously working at keeping it current. Other provinces and the federal government have only a few weeks to do the same job. One might expect their enumerations to be sketchy at best, and B.C.'s to be the most thorough.

The recommendations of the Eckhardt commission on electoral reform have not yet been published, except his redistribution of the ridings. If he did not consider voter registration and enumeration, there is no better rationale for reopening his commission than the mess exposed by the provincial election.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Ghost of elections past: When leaders lose touch

It was an odd coincidence that the reports of Prime Minister Trudeau's giant election rally in Toronto came to B.C. on the same day as the provincial election. An odd coincidence because our recent concentration on provincial politics has perhaps made us sensitive to analogies between federal and provincial politics which might otherwise have escaped us.

It was Richard Gwyn's description of the Trudeau rally (printed on this page yesterday) that evoked an odd sense of deja vu, a feeling that somewhere before we have watched a man who has been a good leader — perhaps even a great leader — suddenly floundering, running desperately to catch up to a country and a political mood that have left him far behind.

Wrote Gwyn: "Watching Trudeau perform in this hockey arena, it was impossible not to see him as a Bobby Orr or a Gordie Howe trying to make it again in the National Hockey League . . .

"There was no electricity. No resonance. The moves had become mechanical, instead of magical . . .

"On the platform and off it, Trudeau seemed unsure of himself, unsure, that is, of his reception, whether Canadians still believe they need him.

"So this was the real sadness to the occasion. Not that Trudeau has lost some of his moves, which after an 11-year grind was bound to happen, but that he's lost touch with his public. And knows it. All the balloons and banners and bands and buses of supporters couldn't put Trudeau and his audience back together again."

Not a description that fits with Thursday's provincial election. Not a description that fit with the 1975 provincial election. But a description that could be applied almost word-for-word to the one before that, the one in 1972. Just substitute a 20-year grind for an 11-year grind, and the name of the late W.A.C. Bennett for that of Trudeau, and the picture is the same.

How many Canadians now remember the federal election campaign of 1968 when Pierre Trudeau was considered only a step away from being a Canadian messiah, when the crowds flocked around him to try to kiss him and offer him flowers, when his dream of the Just Society had captured the imagination of Canadians from coast to coast?

He knew then the Canadians' dreams, their visions, what they wanted to hear. He knew how they would respond as well as he knew how his own muscles would respond to instructions from his brain.

Now, even in their minds, they can make no connection between that man and the man they are being asked to elect as a fourth term as prime minister. He has given them many things they didn't want and couldn't understand — from his bilingualism policy to his wage-and-price controls to the abolition of capital punishment. He has led them to no magical land but only into an economic morass and political turmoil.

He does not understand Canadians any more. He doesn't understand the west's belief that it has always been left out. He doesn't understand the economic desperation of the maritimes. Perhaps most tragically of all, he does not understand the passion that drives so many Quebecers to separate themselves from him, from his federal government, and from all the rest of Canada.

And in 1972 how many British Columbians remembered the halcyon days of the 1950s and early 1960s when W.A.C. Bennett was seen almost as a messiah, when his dreams of northern development, of untold riches from natural resources, of vast hydroelectric developments captured the imagination of British Columbians from Victoria to Fort Nelson?

Again, it was the time when he understood British Columbians perfectly. His dreams were their dreams and they could see him making them reality with railway extensions and hydroelectric dams and mile upon mile of new blacktop highway.

But again, by 1972 the voters could hardly remember it was the same man as he travelled about the province shrieking that the NDP was "in bed with the communists" and that the "socialist hordes are at the gates."

The people's desires had changed along the line. They wanted their money to go for schools and hospitals instead of blacktop. They wanted more sympathy for the unfortunate and neglected of the province. And they wanted a government which again would listen to their dreams and shared them, instead of one that appeared to have become arrogant and tired in office.

Bennett's warnings about the "godless socialists" no longer had the same effect. It was easy to believe now that if he was wrong about so many other things, he might also have been wrong about the havoc he said the NDP would wreak on the province.

It is the same now for federal voters. If Trudeau has been wrong so often, can he not also be wrong when he says that Joe Clark would be a disaster for the country?

Clark is no messiah, any more than Dave Barrett was, but he seems to understand a little bit more.

It is perhaps the saddest thing that can happen to a politician that he loses touch with the people who were once his to command. It is also the most devastating thing that can happen to him politically.

We in B.C. saw it happen recently. Perhaps the rest of the country will see it in 10 days' time.—B.McL.

MARCEL PEPIN

Quebec is still main issue

Marcel Pepin is editor of the Quebec City daily, Le Soleil.

Whether we like it or not, Quebec is still at the heart of the Canadian debate. A good part of the present federal election campaign will be fought on unity matters, that is on the question Quebec poses to the rest of the country.

Politicians, and above all the party leaders, will be rated according to the stand they take on Quebec. Hundreds of speeches will be delivered either to reassure Canadians about the good behavior of Quebecers or to warn them about the separatist devils knocking at the door.

Everybody will preach unity. Everybody will put some blame on the PQ for economic uncertainties. Liberals will claim that only a strong leadership will prevent Canada from falling apart, while the Conservatives will accuse Trudeau of having put the country on the verge of collapse. Only the NDP will try to avoid this issue, because it polarizes peoples and this doesn't make good sense to third parties.

Foregone conclusion

The paradox is that the average Quebecer, the quiet, private citizen, will not participate at all in this verbal fight, because Quebec is anything but an electoral battleground. True, there are 75 federal seats at stake in the province, but 20 at most are up for grabs. Of those 20 seats, Liberals have a good fighting chance in at least 15 of them. When the results are almost known before the race starts, it is not easy to keep the crowd watching the event. Organizers of all parties are experiencing right now the hard task of creating some sort of artificial interest for a non-event.

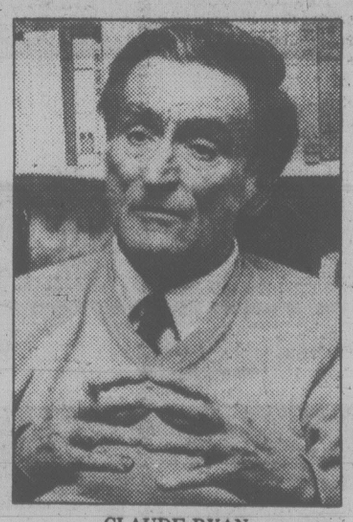
Will Fabien Roy manage to save the 10 seats Socreds won election after election since 1962 and perhaps add a couple more? Will Roch LaSalle speak fast enough to convince one or two other ridings to trust Joe Clark? Those are the only two crucial questions that will entertain Quebecers from now until May 22.

The action is in Ontario, in B.C. and in some remote ridings of the prairies. Ironically, however, the results outside the province may affect the whole political life of Quebec after May 22.

If Trudeau's Liberals survive, Claude Ryan, for instance, will remain the unofficial leader of the official opposition, while the real boss, in the minds of Quebecers as well as in the minds of English-Canadians in other provinces, will still be Pierre Trudeau, when the time comes to beat Rene Levesque at the coming referendum.

Ryan faces the uneasy challenge of convincing Quebecers that a "no" to sovereignty-association means a "yes" to a new brand of federalism in which Quebec will enjoy more powers to fulfil her French distinctiveness, without leaving the Canadian mainstream. Even if many Pequistes laugh at that still imprecise option, there is no doubt it can attract the support of a large fraction of the French-speaking electorate. But it can work only if Ryan brings some evidence that Ottawa would buy that kind of reform.

How can Ryan fight both Trudeau and Levesque at the same time and still win? Unless Trudeau softens his stand in favor of a stronger federal government, few Quebecers will believe the Ryan approach, as attractive as it could be, could be successful as long as Trudeau keeps advocating a centralist stand.



CLAUDE RYAN
. . . fight Levesque and Trudeau

For Levesque, another Trudeau victory means more fights with a francophone prime minister, no meaningful negotiations and a permanent confrontation. That kind of deadlock produces boredom among the population and, eventually, a change of government.

Obviously both Ryan and Levesque could benefit from a change of government in Ottawa, partly becuse Clark is not committed to a rigid constitutional policy and partly because it will free both of them from spending any time fighting a French voice from Ottawa. For a while, Levesque would be seen as the main spokesman of Quebec, while Ryan would be able to sell his own brand of federalism without offending his Liberal cousins.

That may be the reason why provincial political parties keep such a low profile at least in the early stages of this campaign Both need a federal counter-part flexible enough to show Quebecers that federalism can be changed peacefully without hurting Canada. Trudeau is not their kind of man, because he will fight to the end against the formation of any provincial power that can weaken the country.

Ironically, it is not Quebec but the rest of Canada that will decide if there should be a new direction given to the relationship between his province and the federal government. If Trudeau is short of a few seats to form a government, it won't be because Quebecers failed to support him, but mainly because he lost ground in other parts of the country. People here like his leadership and he will still get the treatment reserved to the most famous of favorite sons.

But it is not enough for Trudeau to win seats from a silent Quebec. He needs also a mandate from the electorate. He cannot fight Joe Clark in Quebec because there is no Tory menace around. Rather, he will ask for a strong mandate to fight the Levesque government, at the referendum and later.

Ryan stays aloof

By doing so, he forces Ryan to take a stand in this campaign. If the provincial Liberal leader chooses not to intervene, thousands of his own followers will feel betrayed. If he publicly supports Trudeau, he will, in some way, endorse the kind of centralist stand he already has rejected.

Levesque has made up his mind. He will do everything he can to get rid of Trudeau. Without openly campaigning for Clark or Broadbent or Roy, his troops will try to unseat the Liberal incumbents in a few selected Quebec ridings. A Quebec premier is always more powerful when the prime minister comes from English Canada and Levesque needs that extra power to convince his own Quebecers to follow him on the road of independence, conveniently baptized sovereignty-association.

Ryan stays aloof. He has not committed himself, which is a way to show his coldness towards his federal friends.

While the average Quebecer does not care much about the outcome of this election, the two dominant figures of Quebec politics are surely watching the campaign very carefully. For both Levesque and Ryan it means tougher fights ahead if Trudeau holds the reins of government.

Follow the birds?

It is with regret I pick up recent papers and find myself accepting the fact, together with other average Victorians, that our fair city is not the safe retreat it once was. Headlines such as Early Closing Blamed on Hookers, Drunks, and Baseball Bat Thugs, etc. are now an everyday occurrence.

It seems strange that although the good guys far outnumber the bad, the latter are gradually taking over our streets and districts.

Should we, the taxpayers, the lawful, respectable citizens, have to change our ways to suit the opposition? When it is necessary to think twice about venturing off your doorstep after 8:30 p.m., or having to close your shops two hours earlier because "customers were being bothered by prostitutes and by people in an advanced state of intoxication." I wonder how much longer it will be before we are following the birds out of Victoria. — Shelley Paterson, Victoria.

Gouging tourists

I met a fellow musician and his wife along with their two children as they arrived from Los Angeles via Seattle and the Princess Marguerite. After they disembarked as children sometimes are they asked their father for a soft drink, a request which would have been granted had my friend not noticed that a small can of pop was 50 cents in the machine dock.

It was a surprise to both of us as when he was here last year, the same can of soft drink cost 35 cents. I was appalled at the sudden increase just when the 1979 tourist trade is beginning. I wonder how many more companies in this city raise prices when they know that our out of town friends have no choice but to pay these high prices?

What is the matter with us anyway, don't we like to make a little money over a good period of time, or do we need to make double our money in a hurry, by gouging the tourists?

It's time our politicians stopped this gouging. Let's keep the tourists coming, not going away in disgust. — B-Jay Roberts, 1170 Pembroke Street.

Head in cement?

Unity is not important? During recent weeks the Canadian dollar has been strengthening on world markets and more investment money flowing in rather than out as international economists study the energy situation in Canada as compared to that of other countries, as our export and profit positions improve and as our own analysts report promising signs in the economy.

Now, the separatist government in Quebec has announced the intention to expropriate the giant Asbestos Corporation. The result? The dollar, which had started the day trading well, promptly dropped almost half-a-cent. "Those large buyers sitting in the wings panicked and withdrew," said an analyst.

Any Canadian who thinks the looming threat of the loss of the province of Quebec is of no importance to the rest of us, must have his head solidly embedded — not in sand — but in cement. — A. F. Davies, 4611 Vantreight Drive.

Some questions

Will the honest candidates give us answers to these issues?

1. Canadians are not in favor of gun control. In Switzerland, every man is in the army and keeps his gun in his own home, and there is less crime there than in any other country.

2. Canadians do not like being forced to learn French, while Quebec has outlawed English.

3. Canadians want capital punishment restored. In spite of the so-called experts, capital punishment does prevent and deter crime.

4. Canadians are tired of having their pockets picked through taxes, to pay an annual interest debt of $6 billion, plus other stupid ways of spending our tax money recklessly and wastefully.

5. Canadians are not in favor of metrication. The metre is an outcome from the French Revolution . . . supposed to be scientific but has been proven not to be as accurate, with the basic concept of its organization, as our British inch. It has been my costly venture, to make this change-over, which has not yet been legalized.

6. Will a few such candidates as I have indicated, please stand up and make their stand for honest government in Ottawa?— M. G. Stubbington, 2048A Carrick Street.

No Nukes!

By LAWRENCE MARTIN
The Globe and Mail

WASHINGTON — After nearly a decade of relative calm, U.S. youth has found a new rallying cry. It is "no nukes."

The rebirth of a national protest movement, absent since Vietnam, may well have taken place on Sunday when about 100,000 gathered on Capitol Hill to clamor for a moratorium on the construction of atomic power plants.

It was the signal that the anti-nuclear forces, diverse and spotty in their activity, had coalesced. It was the signal that the long-silent U.S. campuses would be crackling with the sounds of demonstration. It was the signal that the 1980 election campaign had a major new force with which to reckon.

The catalyst for the swelling of the forces was the nuclear accident in late March near Harrisburg, Pa. Foreshadowed by the film, The China Syndrome, the malfunctioning Three Mile Island reactor spread fear into the hearts of the ignorant or impassive and set them to doing something about the problem. The anti-nuclear crowd which had been sporadically protesting against the construction of individual power plants was no longer viewed as radical excess. As other signs said on Sunday: "Anti-nukes are not kooks."

The rally had the makings of a powerful national movement for a number of reasons. One is that the nuclear power issue, important in itself, encompasses a broad range of other important issues. It extends to solar power, to the whole question of energy resources. It extends to the question of nuclear arms and the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty. The environment is at its soul and so is the question of the government hiding the facts from the people and protecting profit-mongering corporations.

Estimated 65,000 anti-nuclear power demonstrators marched in Washington Sunday

Every popular movement needs a star syndrome and the anti-nuclear protesters have many in the vanguard of the movement. Actor Robert Redford, a solar power activist, actress Jane Fonda and her husband Tom Hayden, singer Jackson Browne, Ralph Nader, Barry Commoner. At the political level, there's none other than California's Governor Edmund (Jerry) Brown, who is intent on riding the crest of the anti-nuclear wave into the White House.

Unlike the anti-war effort which had a predominantly left-wing political orientation, the anti-nuclear movement has the potential for a much wider appeal. You can be right-wing and be anti-nuclear, you can have short hair and be anti-nuclear, you can wear a polyester leisure suit and be anti-nuclear.

Sunday's crowd, which trebled expectations, was dominated by benign pacifist types. The hair was longish, the age was mainly early twenties, the attire was mainly blue-jeans and bare backs, the race was almost exclusively white, and the cigarettes were predominantly of the funny, sweet-smelling kind. Many at the rally appeared more interested in listening to the music or in getting a suntan than in protesting.

Politically, the galvanizing of the anti-nuclear people presents problems for President Jimmy Carter. His Energy Secretary James Schlesinger was painted by nearly all the speakers on Sunday as a man in the pocket of the nuclear industry and as a man in the shade on the issue of solar power.

Carter, who had campaigned on a nuclear-power-as-a-last-resort-theme, was portrayed as not living up to the promise. Hayden said the president has a "nuclear power mentality" that is "eclipsing and destroying his Christian" philosophy. Carter, who can now be expected to take a harder line against nuclear power, said of the day: "I think it is a legitimate demonstration."

With Brown, Senator Edward Kennedy is lining up on the side of the anti-nuclear movement. If anyone can give a movement power it is the senator from Massachusetts.

By MARY McGUIRE

OLD CROW, Y.T. — To villagers readying for the traditional two-month outing to the flat lands 100 miles away to catch their summer supply of caribou and muskrat, the federal election is of minor interest. Yet when Yukon Tory candidate Erik Nielsen flew in, he was greeted with open arms.

Like most of the territory's voters, the 100 or so Loucheaux Indian voters in Old Crow have chosen Nielsen ever since he first ran for the territory's only federal seat 22 years ago.

The Old Crow people will never forget Nielsen, 57, as the man who first introduced the ballot box in 1957 to the territory's northernmost community, 75 miles north of the Arctic circle. The villagers huddled around a wood stove in the old log hall to get in from the gusting Arctic wind to listen to what Nielsen had come to say and to thank him for getting the village a school, a nursing station and an airstrip, and for standing up for their rights in a land claim settlement with the federal government. And they thanked him for first explaining to them what governments and ballots were all about.

Former Chief John Joe Kay, speaking through an interpreter, called him the "leader of the people of the Yukon," and said Nielsen had taught them a lot, and asked God to bless him.

NIELSEN
. . . another cinch?

Nielsen had come not only to solicit votes but to explain proxy voting. Many of Old Crow's 200 residents will be out in May, unable to get to the polling station. Sporting a three-piece Ottawa suit and knee-high Yukon mukluks, he showed them the form they should fill out before they head out.

This is Nielsen's tenth election and although the anti-Liberal feeling here is likely to ensure his greatest victory yet, the 100 Old Crow votes are important to him. Twice he has won his seat with less than a 100-vote majority.

This time, Nielsen is up against the first Yukon Indian ever to run for the federal seat. Joe Jack, 28, has lived most of his life in Whitehorse and is running for the NDP. Neither he nor the party is familiar to Old Crow, and he is not expected to take many votes. Indeed, he's not even planning to campaign there. But Jack will get a fair chunk of the rest of the territory's native vote — about 25 per cent of the total vote.

Nevertheless, observers agree Nielsen's stronghold is virtually unbreakable — especially when the opportunity to have the territory represented on the government side for the first time is 17 years is so close. Yukoners gripe that the party in power for the last 16 years runs the territory like a colony. The effective head of the Yukon government is a federally-appointed civil servant. Decisions such as whether a small community should get 13 acres of land for a mobile home subdivision are made in Ottawa. Many Yukoners are displeased with the arrangement and blame the Liberals.

The party has not helped its chances by running Whitehorse lawyer Al Lueck, 45. He is best known in the territory for his involvement in a scandal in 1977 which led to a public inquiry into the actions of three senior Yukon government officials involved in the dropping of misconduct charges against Lueck. The inquiry concluded no one had breached his duty but they had all erred in judgment.

On Language

Windfalls, chickens and June bugs

"Windfall" is a 400-year-old word that means an unexpected benefit, graphically describing the good fortune that falls to a passer-by when a piece of fruit is blown off a tree. The word was born again in politics in 1936, when the U.S. Supreme Court struck down a portion of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and President Franklin Roosevelt moved to intercept what he said was "what may well be termed a 'windfall' received by certain taxpayers."

When President Carter announced his intention to decontrol oil prices recently, he laced an otherwise colorless speech with a denunciation of the oil industry and a call for a tax on the "windfall profits" that he feared the end of controls might bring. Even with that injection of populist fervor, and its evocation of Roosevelt's war on "economic royalists," the Carter speech contained little to make it memorable.

A few days later, however, the president used a down-home figure of speech to enliven his prediction that the oil companies would vigorously oppose the imposition of a new tax. He warned that an oil lobby "would be all over Capitol Hill like a chicken on a June bug."

City dwellers were confused. Since chickens are bigger than bugs, didn't he mean bugs on a chicken?

Not at all. Farmers and Southern-speaking lexicographers were familiar with the image: A June bug is an inch-long, scarablike beetle, brown or green, that appears in the South in the late spring. Adrianne Burk, a researcher for this column and a Virginia farmer herself, reports: "June bugs are too large and too tough for a chicken to make a meal of easily, so the chicken will run around pecking and scratching at it for quite a while, sometimes to no avail."

The word picture has citations dating back more than a century in the Dictionary of Americanisms. Augustus Longstreet, in his 1835 book Georgia Scenes, wrote: "You'll see me down upon him like a duck upon a June bug." In the past century, the pursuing duck has changed to a chicken, but the tough bug hangs in there; in the dull vocabulary of oil decontrolled, the vivid metaphor has provided us with a windfall.

Down with up

Words beginning with "up" sometimes come down quickly. "Up-tight" had its origin in the music world, and meant "A-OK." Ms. (NO!) Maureen Gillespie of New York City recalls singer Stevie Wonder's "Ev-ry-thing is al-right, up-tight and out of sight." Jazz musicians used it to mean "thoroughly known," presumably from "buttoned up tight"; earlier, it had meant "financially embarrassed."

Then "up-tight" was upstaged by the obsessive "hung up," and came out meaning "nervous," "anxious," "tense." That is how it is usually used today, but the word has a quicksilver quality and may squirt off in another direction. ("Up" in slogans is equally confusing: "Up the (ethnic group)" is positive, while other short directives using the word are insulting.)

The most subversive "up" is in the voguish "upcoming," which destroys precision in meaning. Does it mean "up-and-coming" — that is, with a bright future? Or does it mean "forthcoming" (which used to mean "imminent, coming soon," but now is slopping over to mean "open, frank")?

Bernard Kilgore, former president of Dow Jones, which publishes The Wall Street Journal, had a good thought about the confusing "upcoming," which he posted on a newsroom bulletin board: "If I read 'upcoming' in The Wall Street Journal again, I will be downcoming and somebody will be outgoing."

Word in the hole

"Ace," from the Latin word for single unit, means a Number One achievement, the work of an expert. In cards, an ace counts as higher than a king; in golf, an ace is a hole in one, and in tennis, an unreturnable serve; in aviation combat, it is a pilot who has shot down at least five enemy planes. As a noun, it rests securely in the dictionaries.

As an adjective, however, this necessary descriptive word has never been regarded as more than a colloquialism, and is in decline. It occasionally is played in crisp, informal newspaper copy; columnists Evans and Novak wrote recently of "ace Soviet diplomat Vladimir Vinogradov."

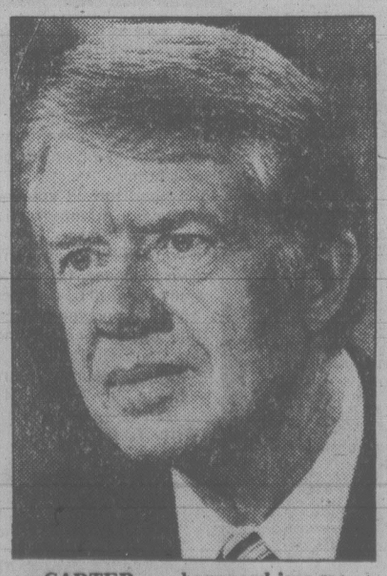
The columnists could have chosen the trite "highly regarded" or "top-ranking," or the pompous "distinguished" or "esteemed"; their selection of "ace" carried a connotation of derring-do, of the lone expert, of the high card being played. As an adjective, it has a snappy, sassily informal air; "ace" is to an individual what "crack" is to "troops."

I think of Ace Parker, Brooklyn Dodger professional football quarterback, tossing one of his unique jump passes just as radio reports interrupted the game with news of the raid on Pearl Harbor. Come back, "ace," as an adjective, from your linguistic limbo — we need a word that takes "first-rate" and "premier" and adds a little of the loneliness of the long-distance winner.

Not a home

What determines when a "dirty word" is acceptable and when it is not? The answer usually depends on whether the word is being used in public or private, in conversation or in print, or in what used to be called "mixed company." But not in the case of "whorehouse." There, context determines whether the word is obscene or acceptable.

As part of the title of a current musical play, The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas, the word has been appearing regularly in all New York newspapers and many magazines. Advertising-acceptability departments reported no complaints from readers; perhaps the public's readiness to accept the word in theatre advertisements stems from the occasional revival of 'Tis Pity She's a Whore," a play about incest by John Ford first performed about 1630, as well as from the 46 times the word "whore" was used in the plays of Shakespeare.



CARTER . . . barnyard images

Since nobody had objected to the name of the play in advertising, the producers of the musical took a step further: "Have Fun at 'The Whorehouse' was the message displayed on 80 New York City transit buses. Single quotation marks, like little fig leaves, were draped around the words "The Whorehouse," as if to preserve modesty by oblique reference to a title of a performance in the legitimate theatre.

But that new context, introducing a double meaning, overstepped the bounds of propriety; buses emblazoned "Have Fun at The Whorehouse' offended many New Yorkers, including a representative of Terence Cardinal Cooke. The double meaning was obviously deliberate, intended to cover both the spectator sport of watching a dramatic performance and the dramatic sport available at a sporting house.

The Transit Authority decided the controversy was no fun at all. It ordered the signs removed from the buses, thereby providing a laboratory case of the "dirtiness" of a word. It ain't what you say, it's the context in which you say it.

As part of a title of a work of art, or as the subject of a beard-pulling inquiry such as this, "whorehouse" raises no eyebrows because it is once removed from reality. But blaring its invitation on the side of a bus, and playing on the more direct meaning, "whorehouse" holds fast to its taboo.

Query

Words pronounced the same way, or similarly slurred, carry different meanings to different users. A teacher in Widener College in Chester, Pa., writes that he has heard students say, "doggy-dog world," as if it had nothing to do with "dog-eat-dog." In the same way, some Spanish-speaking children think the opening of "The Star Spangled Banner" is "Jose, can you see?" I'm not caviling (have pun, will cavil), because I went through childhood believing that orchestra leader Guy Lombardo's first name was "Guylum."

Query: Is there a word for false homonyms like these? Any other examples?

'Wild Canary' confusion

From time to time someone will tell me they've seen a "wild canary." Usually I resist the temptation to tell them that, outside of the Canary Islands, there's no such thing as a "wild canary." Occasionally there might be a "tame" canary that has escaped and gone "wild" for a short time, but in North America, no bona fide "wild canaries."

Unfortunately, Europeans in these parts have been seeing birds they call "wild canaries" since the first navigators and explorers began discovering these shores more than 200 years ago. A chap by the name of Estevan Josef Martinez seems to have been the first. He reported seeing "the canary" near Nootka in 1775.

Martinez could probably be excused his error. As a Spaniard, he was likely familiar with the well-known export of the Canary Islands, so it would be reasonable for him to want to tag a yellow bird, seen in North America, with the name "canary."

We'll never know for sure what it was Martinez actually saw, but two candidates always come to mind when the subject of "wild canaries" comes up — Goldfinches and Yellow Warblers.

I was reminded of this little back-trail of confusion last week when the Garry Oak next door — then in full flower — played host to a little band of Goldfinches which were intent on divesting it of a sizable percentage of its insect inhabitants.

The female Goldfinches — in their duller, greenish-yellow dress — blended well with the fresh green of new foliage on the tree. Unless they moved they were almost invisible. The males, on the other hand, were quite obvious. In their canary (there's the word) yellow garb, with their black top-knots, they were the epitome of what has come to be known as the wild canary of North America.

In a way the Goldfinch's claim to the name is somewhat more justified than that of the Yellow Warbler. Canaries are mainly seed eaters; so too are Goldfinches. Goldfinches also have a pretty fair reputation as singers, a reputation that barely stands up beside that of the Canary.

As for Yellow Warblers, I guess their color is about the only thing about them that justifies the name "wild canary." Again the males are bright yellow, with some faint reddish streaks on their breasts in spring and summer; the females are slightly duller.

Warblers are also mainly insect-eaters and don't have the strong beaks of either Goldfinches or canaries, beaks which mark their seed-eating propensities. And when it comes to singing, although pleasing songsters, a Yellow Warbler just can't hold a candle to a Canary.

Probably the best claim Yellow Warblers have to the name "wild canary" results from their confiding nature and their abundance. Nesting as they often do in the shrubs of our gardens, and being found throughout Canada wherever there are trees and shrubs, Yellow Warblers are probably one of our most frequently seen birds. And, being mostly yellow, they get tagged as "wild canaries."

The funny thing about all this is that the true "wild canary" of the islands off Africa's west coast aren't yellow at all — they are dingy, greenish birds. The bright yellows of the cage birds that we know so well result from generations of controlled breeding.

Be that as it may, the next time you see a "wild canary" take a good look — you may discover its true identity.

Operating revenues were $159.7 million, compared with $125.4 million in 1978.

The company said that its operations were affected significantly in the early weeks of 1978 by a work stoppage.

Federal Ind.

Federal Industries Ltd. announced an unaudited net loss for the first quarter ended March 31 of $490,000 or 13.9 cents a share.

The company said in a news release the loss in the same period in 1978 was $2,596,000.

B.C. Packers

British Columbia Packers has reported net earnings for the 13 weeks ended April 1 were $1.2 million or $2.07 a share, compared with $1.6 million or $2.72 a share last year.

The company said in a news release sales were $60.6 million, compared with $44.8 million in 1978.

Net earnings in 1978 had included a substantial non-recurring gain on disposal of property, B.C. Packers said.

Trans Mountain

Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd. has reported net earnings for the three months ended March 31 were $1,903,000 or 25.1 cents a share, compared with $1,147,000 or 15.1 cents a share for the same period last year.

The company said in a news release that revenue was $8.8 million compared with $6.9 million in 1978.

Robin Hood

Robin Hood Multifoods Ltd. reported that net earnings for the fiscal year ended Feb. 28 were $5.8 million on sales of $249.3 million.

Figures for the previous year showed earnings of $3.4 million and sales of $220.7 million.

The company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of International Multifoods Corp. of Minneapolis, said the return on sales this year was 2.3 per cent, compared with 1.5 per cent a year ago.

Logan R. Brown, president and chief executive officer, said the results marked "a strong recovery" from the effects of an industry-wide strike which closed the company's Montreal flour mill for more than six months in 1978.

Inflation and unemployment continue to be the most serious problems affecting Canadians, Brown said.

"Progress in these areas will be realilzed only if we are successful in achieving real economic growth with improved productivity."

Conservation Now Crucial Issue: Mair

VERNON (CP) — Most people in past years paid little attention while the environment around them was being destroyed, Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Friday.

The situation is different now, however, and both government and the public are becoming more aware of what is happening to the environment in British Columbia, Mair told delegates to the annual meeting of the B.C. Wildlife Convention.

"It does no good for us to blame people for what has happened in the past," he said. "None of us was paying much attention — we just did not realize we were destroying our environment."

Mair said government in particular is paying attention to environmental matters and now is fully aware of the problem.

"Any government who does not care about the great outdoors won't be government the next time around," said Mair.

He said the provincial government will have to make a decision in the next two or three years as to "where we are going in B.C."

Mair said the province will have new development which will put government and other such bodies under "intensive internal and external pressure concerning protection of the environment."

The minister said that all people concerned with both development and the environment will have to start telling each other the truth.

He said people must be told all the particulars of any development and what possible damage it can cause. Then representatives of both sides of the question should come together and make a decision on what to do, based on the facts, he added.

Mair also said the attitude of the general public towards the environment must change.

"People must begin to realize that it's a serious matter to do something against the environment. Stealing a number of trout should be looked upon as seriously as being charged for shoplifting."

Mair said a conservation fund should be established and money should be given to the fund by companies which make money from natural resources and also from tourists who use the province's facilities.

Ship Arrested For Ramming

VANCOUVER (CP) — The National Harbors Board ordered Friday the arrest of the Japanese vessel Toyota Maru 20 on charges it destroyed half of the harbor's potash-loading facility.

The board said it is also suing the ship's owners, its captain and the Canadian pilot who was aboard the vessel early Wednesday.

The board said the 24,000-ton freighter will not be allowed to leave here until a $250,000 bond has been posted.

The ship was docking at Neptune Terminals when it rammed the potash-loading dock. It has been estimated the dock will be out of operation for two months but another company will handle potash-loading in Vancouver in the meantime.

Prisoner Shot

(CP) — A prisoner at the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre was wounded by a shotgun blast Thursday in an attempted escape.

RCMP said Hans Te Hennepe, 31, bolted from his escort and was brought down when a guard shot him in the legs after he failed to heed warning shots.

Te Hennepe was in hospital in Vancouver in satisfactory condition.

Drug Trial Set

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Twelve Kamloops residents have been ordered to stand trial on charges of conspiracy to traffic in morphine following a month-long preliminary hearing into a drug trafficking ring.

Naginder Sidhu and Harinder Gill are also charged with conspiracy to import morphine into Canada.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Doctors opting out of medicare will not destroy the medical insurance system in Canada, Dr. Ken Wylie, president of the Canadian Medical Association, said Friday.

Wylie, speaking at the annual meeting of the British Columbia Medical Association, said such a move would bring protection to an often over-utilized service. He said a patient would go to a doctor who has opted out and pay the real cost of the service.

Wylie said a doctor would have to consider adjusting his fees for low-income patients and patients would not be so quick to go to a doctor with minor problems.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge William Ostler committed a 20-year-old Californian for higher-court trial for first-degree murder following a lengthy preliminary hearing which ended in Victoria provincial court Friday.

Tommy Ross Jr. was committed in connection with the May 14 (Mother's Day) strangulation death of 26-year-old Janice Aili Forbes, whose body was found in her Queens Avenue apartment.

Ross was arrested in North Hollywood, Calif., in December and voluntarily returned to Canada to face the charge.

Donald Robinson, also known as Allen Asapace, of no fixed address, is charged along with 25-year-old Roderick Dale Callihoo, of 506 Pendray, and 28-year-old Brenda Joy McKenzie, of 945 Esquimalt. The latter two were released and remanded until Wednesday for election of their trial method. Robinson elected trial by judge without jury when he first appeared Thursday before Ostler.

A Tsawwassen youth, 19-year-old Raymond Nicholas McLean, was found guilty of dangerous driving and was fined $75 by Ostler.

McLean was spotted by Sidney RCMP officers along the Pat Bay Highway and was pursued after it was noted he was going at excessive speeds along McDonald Park Road at about 12:30 a.m., Dec. 9.

A 27-year-old who wasn't able to offer any reason for his behavior was given a suspended sentence and three months probation by Allan for causing a disturbance by shouting inside the Esquimalt Recreation Centre on Fraser Street on March 29.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Esquimalt police were called about 11:20 p.m. and were told John Eric Perry, 1340 Sussex, went inside the complex to speak to someone about a driving incident and became upset and began shouting and inviting someone outside to fight.

★ ★ ★

Single Show for Ross Troupe

Next Saturday at McPherson Playhouse there will be a single performance by the Paula Ross Dancers of Vancouver, a group that has been making great headway on the Canadian scene.

Paula Ross formed her company in 1965 after she had performed extensively across North America. She is the winner of the 1977 Chalmers Award, a national tribute to her choreography. Her company's performance was described by a reviewer as the high point in the Toronto Dance Festival of some months ago.

"Paula Ross takes the substance of life, reshapes it into art and then lets her dancers push it as far as they can," said another critic.

Featured on the Victoria program will be four of her major works which have been critically acclaimed for their choreography and have brought further recognition of the vibrant and spirited talent of her well-trained, compact company.

The works are Ed's Piece, Repose of Angle (a joyful satire and a subtle love story), both premiered this spring in Vancouver, and To an Unseen Friend, and Coming Together, the last named being one of the most memorable pieces of dance she and the company have done to date.

Jacks Lift Barge

The freighter Chavez set out to sea late Thursday night after an upside-down barge which had straddled her bulwarks amidships for more than a week was removed.

Gordon Sargent of Kingsley Navigation in Vancouver, agents for the Chavez's shipping line, said the barge had been lifted by jacks late Thursday afternoon, sliding off and freeing the mangled Chavez.

The mishap occurred about noon on May 3 when the Chavez was anchored in Indian Bay in the Saanich Inlet. She was offloading gypsum from her holds onto the unmanned barge.

The barge was then to have been towed by the tug to the B.C. Cement Co. Ltd. plant at Bamberton.

Instead, the barge toppled over in the water, the gypsum scattering into the water and over the Chavez. The barge popped back out of the water, ending up upside down on top of the Chavez.

42% Apply for BCRIC Shares

VANCOUVER (CP) — About one million applications had been made for free shares in the British Columbia Resources Investment Corporation by May 10, the corporation announced Friday.

The applications for five free shares means that 42 per cent of the 12 million shares available to British Columbians have been allocated.

The government announced earlier that all eligible residents of the province could apply for the shares, including children.

Corporation president David Helliwell also said that up to May 10 British Columbians had also applied to purchase 1,983,525 additional shares at $6 a share.

The sales represent $11,901,150 which BCRIC will use for investment purposes. Individual investors can purchase up to 5,000 additional shares each.

Results of the share offer program, which began March 15 and ends June 15, were kept secret until after Thursday's provincial election.

Meanwhile, BCRIC also announced modest success in its first season in oil and gas activities.

Bob Currie, vice-president with responsiblity in this field, said four wells were drilled under farm-out agreements and the corporation participated in a fifth with other companies.

Of the five, one commercial gas well was completed, a second encountered gas and will undergo further testing, a third showed encouraging signs of gas but not enough for commercial production and two others were unsuccessful.

All wells were drilled in northeastern B.C., including four on the 2.3 million acres of land on which the corporation has an exclusive licence to explore for oil and gas.

Currie said the winter season was the first step in a program of drilling a minimum of 18 wells during the next three years. Next winter a minimum of six wells are scheduled to be drilled on BCRIC land.

The corporation has also purchased interests in nine additional parcels of prospective oil and gas lands in northeastern B.C.

Airport Firefighters Protest Military Use

Pat Bay Airport firefighters today protested an Ottawa decision to have military personnel intervene in a local labor dispute.

Don Brownlee, shop steward for the Union of Canadian Transport Employees said military firefighters will be used at Pat Bay airport when heavy military equipment is loaded for a flight to Alberta on May 14.

"Normally this (firefighting crew) work would be done by our union," Brownlee said.

The issue is whether union firemen should be required to work overtime during the hours from midnight to 6 a.m.

Regular flights end by midnight and the normal work day for the final firefighting shift also ends at midnight.

With the increase in charter flights, however, there have been numerous requests from Transport Canada for overtime work.

The union response is that men are exhausted after a full shift and should not be required to work after midnight.

In March, Transport Canada sent out an investigating team which reported to Ottawa that a regular shift from midnight to 6 a.m. should be instituted. The union supported that position.

Brownlee said Ottawa has not acted on the recommendation from its own inquiry team.

He said the union three times warned Transport Canada it might not supply firefighting crews after midnight unless extensive advance notice was given — and three times pulled back.

Then, on April 27, the union began its policy of not working overtime without receiving what it considers adequate advance notification.

One flight to Pat Bay had to be cancelled as a result of this job action.

Brownlee said he had expected the dispute would reach a head on May 14 when union firecrews would be asked to work overtime for the military flight but Transport Canada didn't invite the union crews to work.

Brownlee said he was disappointed by the decision because it left unresolved the dispute between the union and Transport Canada. The union has no dispute with the military, he said. Transport Canada is at fault for not inviting the union firemen to work as they have been doing during early morning military flights for the past seven years.

However, Brownlee said he could not say what the union response would have been if invited to work overtime for the May 14 flight.

Body Presumed From Vancouver

City police believe they have established the identity of a man whose badly decomposed body was found shortly before noon Friday floating under a wharf in the Inner Harbor at the foot of Yates.

A spokesman said the man is presumed to be a 32-year-old Vancouver resident. His name has not been released pending notification of next-of-kin.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has ordered an autopsy which was expected to be completed today.

Juveniles Charged

Three juvenile boys are expected to appear in Family Court next week charged with breaking into the Quadra Curling Rink, 1952 Quadra early today.

The three, two aged 15 and the other 16, were discovered inside the premises by police responding to a citizen's report of the break in at 2:28 a.m.

reporters — David Halton, 39, CBC; Bruce Phillips, 48, CTV; Peter Desbarats, 45, Global — will have plenty of opportunity to ask penetrating questions.

But the three are less sure, and have planned a meeting of their own today to work out ways of seeing that they come across as something more than window-dressing for the show.

Conventional wisdom has it that Trudeau — sole leader to have participated in the country's first and only other campaign television debate in 1968 — must win big if he's to win the debate at all.

Trudeau described the 1968 show as "dull — I wouldn't want to impose another one on the Canadian public, quite frankly," he said after a two-hour match with former leaders Robert Stanfield of the Conservatives, T. C. Douglas of the NDP and Real Caouette of the Social Credit.

If he comes across with a dull defence of his government's 11 year record Sunday, strategists say it would be seen as a setback his campaign.

Clark, a reluctant entry in the debate, can gain points simply by steering clear of blunders, observers say. He has a chance to overcome a fuzzy-on-the-issues, awkward image and has the advantage — decided by drawn lots — of opening and closing the debate.

Broadbent wins simply by appearing. He gains national television exposure for his third-party New Democrats, and plans to come on with sharp attacks against Trudeau and Clark.

The prime minister is loosening up by relaxing with his three young sons here. No cram sessions are planned, a senior aide says. "Our basic philosophy isn't to have rehearsals but to leave him to his own devices because he's better than we could ever be."

Clark and Broadbent, too, will spend the weekend with their families, Clark attending singer Nana Mouskouri's performance Saturday night at the National Arts Centre.

Absent will be Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy. He speaks no English, was left out of the English-language debate and refused a CBC offer for a half-hour, translated response to the others because Trudeau turned down a debate in French.

However, French-language CBC said Friday that Trudeau now has agreed to appear in a series of regional television interviews in Quebec with Clark, Broadbent and Roy.

Hope Fades for Oil-Rig 8

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Divers searching the wreckage of a collapsed oil rig for eight men believed trapped inside reported today that the platform has completely submerged because of a storm during the night.

But coast guard officials said it appears the rig is still floating about 10 metres below the surface.

Earlier, the rig had been floating only partially submerged, kept buoyant by trapped air pockets.

"At this point in time, it isn't very encouraging," Coast Guard Lt. Gabe Kinney said of the sinking.

Kinney said 11 divers are working off a coast guard tender in calm seas, about 20 kilometres off Galveston.

Coast guard officials in New Orleans released a list of the eight men believed trapped in the rig, but did not provide ages or home towns. They were identified as Eddie Fredericks, John Perkins, Lee Cruidy, Dennis Smith, Walter Fobmogie, Ed Hanks, Barton Sealy and Cruz Pallmarez.

Thirty-four men were aboard the rig preparing for drilling when one of its three legs gave way late Thursday. The platform tilted at a 45-degree angle and floated away from the legs.

After the accident, coast guard and private vessels rescued 26 men, four of them requiring hospital treatment.

Kinney said the air pockets might also be sustaining life. "We are still hopeful that the men are alive," he said.

"We covered about 85 per cent of the search area with surface vessels and helicopters without finding anything. That leads us to believe they're inside the wreckage," he said.

David Ciancaglini, commander of the coast guard search and rescue squadron at Ellington air force base, said: "I personally believe if there was a guy in the water, we would have found him by now.

"But we won't give up. We just keep searching until we feel our efforts are just not feasible any more."

On Friday, divers swam around the edges of the platform but left the water when it became apparent they would need more air hoses to get inside the flooded compartments of the rig.

By the time the extra equipment arrived, however, 45-knot winds had whipped the seas and raised the spectre of divers being trapped in a sinking rig.

Early today, coast guard officials did not know when the search would resume.

"They may go any time; it's just a matter of getting the right conditions," said coast guard duty officer Tommy Clemmons.

Timothy Stout, 21, who escaped the collapse with nothing more than a finger injury, described it this way:

"I was just standing there when all of a sudden there was a 'boom' and there was water coming in everywhere."

The eight missing men are employees of five companies doing offshore drilling and consulting work, the rig's owners and operators said.

Got a call the other day from Victorian Doris Bergbusch who wanted me to help her find five kids. But the story runs a little deeper than that.

You see, she hasn't lost them. It's just that Doris would like to interest five young people aged between 12 and 16 in learning a spot of gardening and reaping the vegetable benefits, as it were.

With a $200 "seed money" grant she has received from the Inter-Church Association to Promote Social Justice in Canada, Doris plans to run the first urban agricultural self-help project in Victoria this summer.

The five youngsters taking part in the project should come from families on Welfare or with low incomes. They will attend classes on gardening, go on field trips to farms and other places and then get practical experience by growing their own vegetables in their yards or on municipal property. If you're interested, you should call Doris at 382-3032. And, as she doesn't have a vehicle, she would also like to hear from anyone willing to drive them on the field trips.

This is, of course, a pretty small-scale start. But it is just that — a start. It's a pilot project which it is hoped will grow and bloom into a new awareness not only in Victoria but across Canada.

An awareness, that is, of the importance of agriculture.

"I agree with the B'hai people who say that agriculture is the world's highest calling," explains Doris who warns that unless young people have direct experience with the soil they cannot identify with today's food problems.

"We have larger and larger cities now and the children who live in them have no idea of what it takes to make plants and food grow," she says.

Sharing in the belief that a country, a province or even an area within either of those, can be self-sufficient providing available land is used to produce food, Doris Bergbusch was involved in a cross-Canada inquiry into community food systems done recently by the People's Food Commission.

"We know that when people reach a certain level of living, they want to stay there or improve," says Doris. "They don't want to look back at the people who are less fortunate. Yet something must be done to feed more people better. We're flying around the moon and there are starving people on this earth."

Hearings have been held by the Food Commission across the nation into all aspects of farming, fishing and food preparation and a report is expected to be released soon.

As an interesting spinoff to this, Doris Bergbusch produced a report entitled Eating Off Vancouver Island. In it she compares the eating habits and health of people in 11 nations of roughly the same land area of the Island but with vastly contrasting populations — nations like Belgium, The Netherlands, Taiwan and Haiti.

It's a fascinating study and one which shows we certainly could be doing a lot more toward becoming self-sufficient in food than we are doing right now.

One point that is made in the report — and one which few people today probably realize — is that some historians feel that in Indian days the population of Vancouver Island may have been twice what it is today. And that the pollution-free land and sea provided amply, and with good variety, the nutritional needs of the people.

In her final recommendation, Doris points out that we are inundated with magazine articles telling us contrasting things about eating and nutrition. And she says what is needed are more nutritionists who are able to counsel the different types of people in Victoria and elsewhere on the Island.

"I would like to have well-trained people who can quietly give dietary advice to a mother and to a family," she explains.

Most people, I'm sure, would agree that more should be done here to encourage the growing of fruit and vegetables on Vancouver Island so that we do not have to rely forever on California for our needs. But some of these people, I'm equally sure, would be a little shocked at a few of the suggestions contained in the report.

Like the lovely sketch of the Legislative Buildings (done by University of Victoria fine arts student Patty Krisman) with a garden planted smack in the middle of the legislative lawns and a sign warning 'Please Don't Pick the Vegetables.' And underneath the sketch is the caption:

Church lawns, cemeteries, even golf courses could be used for growing food. Perfect lawns are a bore. True peace comes from loving God more.

It plugs into cigarette lighter and spots a radar trap up to five miles away — but police fight back

New Weapons Beat 'Fuzzbuster'

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Ever since they came on the market three years ago, radar detectors have posed something of a dilemma for police in the province.

The only sure-fire method of beating detector-armed motorists has been by using aircraft patrols.

But now, RCMP have found another way.

Staff Sgt. Alec Marchuk, head of the RCMP traffic division in the Lower Mainland says a new type of radar unit has been developed which may well put the brake on the high-flying motorists.

Unlike ordinary stationary radar sets which send out a continuous stream of beams, the new units are only activated when the target car comes within beam range, normally a distance of about a quarter mile.

A motorist with a detector in his vehicle has been able to flout the speed laws because the detector is able to pick up the beams from as far away as five miles. It emits a loud buzz or beep, giving the wary motorist plenty of time to adjust his speed before he reaches the radar trap. With the new sets he will have virtually no time to react.

Marchuk says the units are in use in the Lower Mainland; eventually all sets will be replaced throughout the province.

He says the advent of the detector put a serious crimp in the police officer's ability to curtail the speeders on the province's highways.

"It's really become a major concern to us," he says.

Last summer, police air patrols over Highway 401 through the Fraser Valley noted 86 per cent of the motorists caught travelling at speeds greater than 125 kmh were subsequently found to have detectors in their cars.

More recently a survey of motorists caught doing between 130 to 150 kmh on Highway 99 leading to the border all had detectors.

Not surprisngly, most of the offenders were driving expensive, high-performance vehicles. But a number were salesmen and couriers fighting tight time schedules.

Police have no idea how many detector-equipped vehicles there are on the roads.

Estimates range as high as 20,000 in the Lower Mainland and about 500 on southern Vancouver Island.

John Young, owner of Cal-Van Auto Supply in Victoria, says he's sold several hundred over the past three years.

The detectors, bearing such trade marks as Fuzzbuster, Super Snooper, Radatron and Micro Eye (the only Canadian-made unit), are priced anywhere from $88 to $298 in Victoria.

But Young says that's a small price to pay for a motorist facing possible licence suspension through amassing a collection of speeding tickets.

The provincial government has been examining the detector problem and there is a possibility of tough new legislation being brought in at the next session of the Legislature.

Frank Reagan, deputy superintendent of the motor vehicle branch, says a report was presented to the transport minister last fall.

Regan could not comment on the report's contents but other sources indicate it recommends, among other things, prohibiting the use of detectors in B.C.

Several American states and the provinces of Alberta and Ontario have already outlawed the devices.

Reagan says such laws have been highly effective in making the detectors disappear from the dashboards of vehicles. But, he adds, there is growing doubt the laws have, in fact, stopped the use of them.

A recent report by the Ontario ministry of transport pointed out motorists are resorting to ingenious methods to conceal detectors. The devices have been found hidden in fog lights and secreted behind grills. There's only a limited number of possible places because to function properly the devices have to have an uncluttered view of the road ahead.

Reagan says the answer isn't so much prohibiting the detector's use as it is finding a way to regulate sale and manufacture.

And that is really a federal matter.

But even if sales were banned in the province, there is a feeling motorists would likely just go somewhere else to buy them.

Young says he's sold a number to Alberta residents. He's even sold one to a man from Italy where police are just now beginning to use radar to curtail speeders.

Federal Election Advance Polls

Advance polling for the federal election began at noon today.

Polls are open until 8 p.m.

Stations for the Esquimalt-Saanich federal riding are Reynolds Senior Secondary school at 3963 Borden for Saanich, Esquimalt Recreation Centre on Fraser for Esquimalt and Saancha Hall for Sidney and North Saanich.

Advance polling continues from noon to 8 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday.

Supreme Court Removes Saanich Indian Barricade

The B.C. Supreme Court Friday granted an injunction ordering the removal of a barricade blocking a road on the Tsawout Indian reserve leading to a commercial campground in Central Saanich.

The injunction was sought by Leisure Investments Ltd., operators of the K.O.A. Kampground at the foot of Mount Newton Crossroad.

Band chief Louis Claxton said the barricade of logs has now been removed allowing traffic to pass.

It had been erected by the family of band member Albert Pelkey Sr. on Monday to protest the band council's failure to resolve a land problem.

The Pelkey family contend a portion of their land is taken up by the road and have requested compensation in the form of other lands.

Band chief Louis Claxton said the problem has been brewing for at least six years but the Pelkeys have always asked that a small lot which has been assigned to another family be turned over to them in compensation, something council could not do.

He said the barricade was used as a leverage by the Pelkeys to get their way and saw it as an attempt to embarrass the council.

He denied there were any political overtones despite the fact elections for a new chief will be held the middle of next month.

Claxton said the family has now asked to meet with the council to work out a compromise.

"We think they are willing to come to a good, sensible settlement," he said. "We're hoping to settle it peacefully."

Moped Rider Killed in Crash

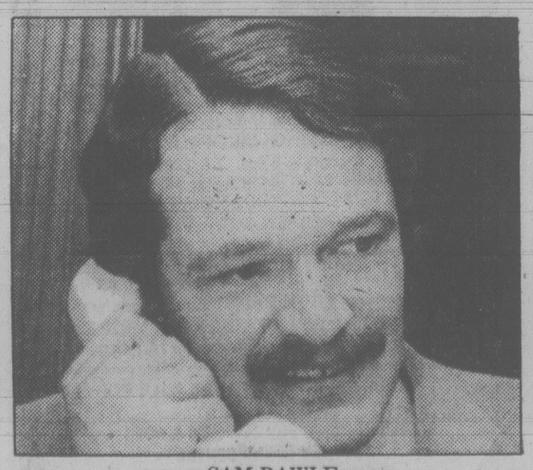
Fredrick Andrew McLellan of 4283 Gordon Head was pronounced dead on arrival at Royal Jubilee Hospital at 9 p.m., a half hour after the mishap.

Saanich police said McLellan was thrown about 25 metres and his moped dragged under the front of the car a further 100 metres down the road where it burst into flames.

A nearby resident grabbed a hose and exintinguished the flames.

The driver, whose name has not been released, was taken to Saanich police headquarters for questioning. A spokesman said today it is probable charges will be laid, but declined to elaborate.

Don't Let My Dreams for City Wither: Bawlf



— SAM BAWLF
. . . eight year task half done

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Provincial Deregulation minister Sam Bawlf today expressed concern Victoria would become content with a few token efforts to preserve its heritage and would demolish the rest of its history under highrises and shopping centres.

Bawlf made the comments after his defeat as Victoria MLA in the provincial election.

"I had planned to do a number of things for the capital city and then move on," he said. "It appears I will be moving on sooner than I expected."

Moving on doesn't mean leaving Victoria although he expects to spend some time in other cities as a consultant on urban planning and transportation.

Victoria remains his first love and he expressed disappointment that he was leaving the job half-completed.

"I looked upon it as an eight-year task."

On his shopping list for the next four years, he said, were the following things:

—The convention centre should be completed and operating as a year-round Victoria cultural hall as well as a meeting place.

—Some effective use must be devised for the Ocean Cement waterfront site, which is currently a parking lot.

—The south shore of the Inner Harbor should become an integrated terminal for jetfoils and seaplanes.

—Laurel Point Inn hotel will be doubled in size.

—Work on restoring the Crystal Garden likely will be completed by September.

—A new waterfront hotel should be contructed across harbor as soon as the tank farms can be removed.

Bawlf said he was not surprised by his election defeat — he knew the NDP was running strongly in the riding — but he was keenly disappointed.

"I hope it was not an indication that Victorians did not support my efforts to restore the city's heritage. I don't feel so badly for myself but I worry what will become of the city if someone reverses the efforts at restoration.

"Often it seems like the city takes one step forward and then two steps back."

Born in Winnipeg (where his grandfather, Nicholas Bawlf, founded the Winnipeg Grain Exchange with R.B. Bennett) Bawlf came to Vancouver at age three.

The family fortunes had disappeared during the depression and Bawlf decided on a career in urban development after graduating from University of B.C.

Ten years ago he came to Victoria on his honeymoon and fell in love with the city. He has lived here ever since.

In 1972 he was elected Victoria city alderman in his first try for office and became chairman of city planning. He was re-elected in 1974, topping the poll, and became chairman of finance.

It was in this capacity he quarrelled with the NDP government over its lack of consultation with the city on development of the capital region.

So he entered provincial politics in 1975, topping the poll, and became chairman of the provincial capital commission, in charge of Victoria's development.

He also became minister of recreation and conservation. Then Premier Bennett gave him a one-year mandate to get B.C. Ferries in order because of continuing labor problems and scheduling difficulties.

At the end of 1978 Bawlf requested and got permission from Premier Bennett to carry out a two-year program of deregulation, aimed at streamlining government departments and reducing red tape.

"I was excited by the job. I am basically an innovator, not an administrator. That is why I moved on from B.C. Ferries after one year. I like to keep moving."

He said he has no plans to return to politics.

Jays in Long Johns A Toronto Trademark

One week's work — well, almost — but at least it is warm.

A chance to see the Toronto Blue Jays in action against the Western Division leading Minnesota Twins at Toronto's Exhibition Stadium last week proved one thing. They should never try to play major league baseball in Toronto until at least late May.

Cold! It was something like being off Race Rocks in an open boat in November. Oh, sure, the temperature wasn't that bad, only nine degrees celsius. You can dress for that, long johns, et al. But the 15-20 mile-per-hour breeze that came in from Lake Ontario and swirled around the open stadium was something else and hardly conducive to good baseball or old bones. We lasted six innings — or just about as long as the Jays usually last — and then caught the first available "Go Train" for home and coffee-royals.

The Jays aren't doing that well or drawing that well and were down something like 40,000 in attendance. Most of it undoubtedly is due to the weather because most baseball fans won't go near the place until June and who is to blame them? Now the hopeless fight is on again to try and get the southern teams to schedule those early-season games.

And really, it doesn't seem fair to the players, let alone the fans, to be forced to be out in weather like that; and little wonder too that players from the deep south often balk at coming north.

On the other hand, the Minnesota Twins, even without perennial batting champion Rod Carew, look like prime contenders. Outfielder Ken Landreaux, who came to Minnesota from California in the Carew deal, is the pleasant surprise, and a fair hitter too. Landreaux, it may be recalled, was "Minor League Player of the Year" in 1977.

The Twins are also getting excellent hitting from the unlikely bat of Roy Smalley who, at last report was around .400, and Rob Wilfong, who is also among the American League leaders. In the bullpen, the Twins have the redoubtable Mike Marshall and nothing is new with Marshall. After only one pitch, he was accused of "scuffing" the baseball.

Which he probably did, has done before, will do again as long as he can get away with it, or until the batters think he is doctoring the ball. "Think" is the key word. That may be all he needs. And thereby hangs the tale of another pitcher.

Mike Caldwell of the Milwaukee Brewers, who has been suspected of throwing a spitball, in denying the charge, said: "I haven't used it in a game because I can't control it, but I throw it a lot in the bullpen, and I try to make sure the other team sees me do it. If they think I'm throwing it in a game — even if I'm not — it's got to be to my advantage."

★ ★ ★

And I didn't know of Canadians that:

— Of the 32 Canadian-born players in the minor professional leagues, 22 are pitchers.

— That a Canadian named James "Tip" O'Neill of Woodstock hit .492 as a member of the St. Louis Browns in 1887, which is the highest batting average ever recorded by a major league player. In that season, the league experimented with a new rule whereby walks counted as hits which is why poor Tip's great average was later erased forever. Lifetime he was .326.

— That Dr. Ron Taylor of Toronto, in seven innings of world series appearances, did not allow a hit or a run. Taylor now is the resident Blue Jays physician.

★ ★ ★

Meanwhile, Ernie "Junior" Fox, the former city basketballer, and his wife Babs are well. Ernie is still teaching mathematics in Montreal and Babs is instructing in stitchery. They now live in South Lancaster, Ont., and send greetings to all. And one for the name droppers: There was a chance meeting with hockey's King Clancy, who appears to be weathering his years well and why not? His summer pastime: picking winners at Woodbine.

Judy Tobacco of Mount Douglas Clears Bar on Way to High-Jump Title

Claremont Team Champ; Tobacco, Batemen Best

Theriault Triumph

Eager young athletes competing at Centennial Stadium Friday tossed a few surprises into finals of the 33rd annual Greater Victoria high school track and field championships, but there was nothing unexpected when officials finished adding up team point totals.

Out in front for the third successive year was the powerhouse from Claremont, which collected 688 points and breezed to a 188-point victory over runner-up Mount Douglas.

Certainly nobody had expected anybody but Judy Tobacco to shine brightest in the 'A' section of girls' events, that Tony Theriault would not be the middle-distance star of boys' events, or that Dunsmuir would not again get an outstanding effort from its girls' squad.

There was also a heartbreaker that involved talented Peter Skillings of Oak Bay.

Winner of the long jump and the 110-metre hurdles, Skillings had to forfeit his triumphs and his chances of earning an outstanding-athlete trophy. Due to a mistake, Skillings had been entered in four events, instead of the maximum of three, plus relays, that meet rules permit.

Competing for Mount Douglas, the versatile Tobacco was selected as the outstanding female athlete for the second straight year. Judy shattered her 1978 record for the 400 metres and set a city mark with a time of 56.8 seconds and also erased a four-year-old record for the high jump.

Theriault, competing for Claremont this year after a transfer from Esquimalt, breezed to triumphs in the 1,500 and 800-metre events, but was victim of the unexpected in the 400-metre hurdles. Don Fennerty of St. Michael's University School provided the shocker by beating Theriault in the 400-metre hurdles and wrecking the record set by Tony last year as he finished in 58.3 seconds.

Dunsmuir was third in team totals after the school's girls, who included Julie Tasker-Brown, Laura Mahoney, Kari Higginbottom, Peggy Nelson and Nancy Canning, harvested 294 points, the highest aggregate collected by any female squad.

Tim Walton of Parkland charged from behind to win both boys' sprints, Mahoney took the girls' 100 and Tobacco captured the girls' 200.

Bart Helps Kings Get Into Final

MONTREAL (CP) — Brandon Wheat Kings of the Western Hockey League had been firing pucks at Bart Hunter without too much success for so long they decided if they couldn't beat him they would get him to join them for the Memorial Cup double round-robin tournament.

And the move paid dividends Friday night when Hunter allowed the besieged Wheat Kings to hold on and defeat Peterborough of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League 3-2 and advance to the final against the Petes on Sunday.

The two clubs entered the final period locked in a 2-2 tie. Ray Allison had scored a pair of goals for Brandon and Chris Halyk and Tim Trimper had countered for the Petes.

But left winger Brian Propp, who led the WHL regular-season scoring charts with 94 goals and 100 assists and holds a WHL career record of 511 points, beat goalie Ken Ellacott of the Petes at 9:08 and moved the Westerners into the lead.

After that Hunter was the main reason Brandon protected its one-goal edge to the end. He stopped 34 of 36 shots the Petes fired at him, while Ellacott stopped 22 of 25 fired by the Wheat Kings.

High in the stands were members of Trois-Rivieres Draveurs of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League screaming for a Peterborough victory.

The reason was that a victory by the Petes would have allowed the QMJHL champions into Sunday's final against Peterborough. But the Brandon victory meant the three teams finished the double round robin series with identical 2-2 won-lost records and the two finalists were decided on a goals-for and -against ratio.

The Petes were 15-15 for and against, the Wheat Kings 16-14 and the Draveurs, a team which had beaten both the finalists earlier in the tournament, were 11-13.

Coach Dunc McCallum of the Wheat Kings was delighted with Hunter's play.

"I planned on playing him because of the way he played against us in the Western final," McCallum said.

Coach Gary Green of the Petes said it did not matter which team his club met in the final because "we came here to win the Memorial Cup."

The final will be televised over CTV, Sunday, starting at 10:30 a.m.

U.S., Canada Clash for Title

SEOUL (AP) — The United States trounced winless France 80-59 today for its fourth win against one loss in the final round of the eight women's world basketball championship.

The United States meets unbeaten Canada Sunday in the final game of the tournament to decide the winner.

Hull's Return To Hawks Set

EDMONTON (CP) — A deal has been made to send Bobby Hull back to Chicago Black Hawks in return for players and possibly cash, Winnipeg Jets general manager John Ferguson said Friday.

Ferguson said the arrangement, which has only to receive "the final stamp of approval," will see the National Hockey League team claim Hull June 6.

In return, the World Hockey Association Jets would receive future considerations that Ferguson described only as players the Jets will be happy to have.

Ferguson, whose team defeated Edmonton Oilers 3-1 Friday in the opener of their best-of-seven WHA final series, said several months ago he wanted either $750,000 or players worth that much in return for the 40-year-old leftwinger.

Hull was in southern Alberta on a speaking engagement and unavailable for comment.

Rangers Recall 39 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — The annual spring rite of the National Hockey League, the Stanley Cup final, opens Sunday afternoon at the Forum with Montreal Canadiens in a familiar role and New York Rangers savoring a playoff thrill they last experienced in 1972, and remembering that it was 39 years ago they last won the cup.

The Canadiens fought their way into the final in seven tense games against Boston Bruins, culminating with a spine-tingling overtime victory Thursday night.

As a result, they delayed the start of the final series to Sunday at 1 p.m. PDT from the expected opening tonight.

The Rangers have been resting since Tuesday night, when they beat New York Islanders 2-1 to win their semi-final series 4-2.

For Montreal, a berth in the Cup final is nothing new. They are seeking their fourth straight championship. If they win, the engravers will cut the team's name into the trophy for the 22nd time.

But the Rangers have never had that kind of overwhelming success. The banners that hang over the ice at Madison Square Garden attest to the glum fact that the last time the Cup came home with the Rangers was in 1940.

The two teams have proved that they don't discourage easily, which should make for determined play.

The Rangers kept coming back from painful defeats in their playoffs against Philadelphia Flyers and the Islanders.

"I guess I'm proudest of the way we hung together," said Phil Esposito. "We kept coming back.

"We lost the first game in Philly in overtime, but we bounced back and won four straight. We lost two games in overtime against the Islanders, but we came back. I think that's the thing I'm happiest about."

The Canadiens produced one of the most stunning comebacks of the playoffs Thursday night when they shrugged off a 3-1 deficit to edge the Bruins midway through the first overtime period.

Jets Down Oilers

EDMONTON (CP) — Winnipeg Jets put the defensive wraps on Edmonton Oilers Friday night and came up with a 3-1 victory in the opening game of the World Hockey Association's best-of-seven final series.

"Sound, fundamental hockey," was general manager John Ferguson's dressing-room assessment of the Jets performance, but coach Tom McVie feels his club is capable of a better effort.

"The conditioning and the skating were fine, but we could use better team work," McVie said.

The Jets scoring was taken care of by Rich Preston, who scored the first and third Winnipeg goals, and Bill Lesuk. Preston's second goal was the clincher. It came at 16:24 of the third period and brought his playoff total to six.

Whitecaps Win

VANCOUVER (CP) — Winger Carl Valentine's first goal of the season at 7:26 of sudden-death overtime gave Vancouver Whitecaps a 1-0 victory over Rochester Lancers in North American Soccer League action Friday

The goal before a crowd of 22,078 came off a free kick from 25 yards, taken by defender Bob Bolitho.

Title Race Starts Sunday

Fivepinners from across the country have flooded into Victoria for the big event in their sport — the Canadian championship tournament that starts Sunday morning at Town and Country Lanes.

Several hundred visitors, including 241 bowlers, 48 managers and coaches, and families and friends are in town for the competitions, in which eight of the 10 provinces are represented.

Also in the contingent are Victoria-born Dave McNutt of Montreal, president of the Canadian Fivepin Bowlers' Association, and tournament director Ed Lynch, the association's first vice-president from Winnipeg.

The three-day tournament is the first championship venture for the CFBA, which was formed last year by a merger of the Bowlers' Association of Canada and the Canadian Bowling Congress.

Up for grabs will be nine titles — in open women's and men's singles, team events for men's, women's and mixed squads and in classic (averages of 215 and under) women's and men's singles and team events.

British Columbia, Northern Ontario, Southern Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, each with 31 contestants, and Alberta (30) have the largest groups in competitions that will be decided in all but the classic singles on a head-to-head, round-robin format.

Bowlers in the open singles will meet each other twice in single-game clashes and the champion will be determined on the won-lost records. In the event of a tie, the winner will be decided on results of games between those involved in the tie. Should that not break the deadlock, the pin count will then be used.

Teams will compete in a similar fashion, except that eight points will be at stake in each game. There will be a point for the top team total and a point for each bowler who outscores the rival in the same position in the bowling order.

In the classic section it will be pins-above-average with women and men both competing for one singles crown. The singles champion will be the competitor finishing the 12-game route with the largest pins-above-average total.

The pursuit of titles starts at 8 Sunday morning, continuing until the day's last shift at 4:30 p.m. Bowling on Monday and Tuesday is scheduled from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Nelson Leads by One

DALLAS (AP) — Larry Nelson, who has won just one tournament in five years on the Professional Golfers' Association tour, finished off a two-under-par 68 early today to go with an opening round 65 for a one-shot lead in the rain-plagued, $300,000 Byron Nelson golf tournament.

Hot on Nelson's heels were Lanny Wadkins, who birdied one of the two holes he had remaining to play for a three-under-par 67 in the second round and a 134 total, and George Burns, who was at 134 thanks to a two-under-par 68 he posted today.

Tom Watson was the 36-hole leader with a four-under-par 136. The defending champion posted his round Friday before darkness descended on 12 groups still on the course because of two rain delays totaling almost three hours.

Bright skies greeted the field today and officials said there should be no trouble with the final two rounds.

Budgets Are Warming Up

The Canadian men's fastball champions, who will be representing their country at the Pan-American Games in July, seem to be steadily improving on their 12-game Arizona visit.

Budgets were at their best Friday as they improved their tour record to seven victories and three defeats by blanking Globe Miami in both games of a doubleheader, winning by scores of 3-0 and 9-0.

Big Dave Ruthowsky, helped by Reg Underwood's home run, pitched a two-hitter for Victoria in the opening contest. Cliff Bishop took over on the Budget mound for the second game and also limited the Miami crew to a pair of hits, but his path to victory became an easy one when his clubmates went on a batting spree.

They supported Bishop with an 11-hit outburst that included a home run by Dennis Eckert.

Scheduled to conclude their high-country safari with two games today, Budgets are due to arrive back in Victoria Sunday night at 10:30.

Suns Lead

Times News Services

Paul Westphal and Walter Davis combined for 33 second-half points to carry Phoenix Suns to a 99-93 victory Friday night over Seattle SuperSonics in Seattle and a 3-2 lead in their National Basketball Association Western Conference championship series.

The Suns can wrap up the best-of-seven series with a fourth straight victory over the Sonics in the sixth game Sunday at Phoenix. That would earn Phoenix its first berth in the NBA final since 1976.

George Gervin scored 42 points to lead San Antonio Spurs to a 118-102 victory over Washington Bullets in the other semi-final.

CLAIM RAUTZHAN

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers of baseball's American League have moved to bolster their shaky bullpen by claiming lefthanded pitcher Lance Rautzhan, 26, on waivers from Los Angeles Dodgers.

Good Beginning For Intermediates

The Victoria entry in the B.C. Lacrosse Association Intermediate "A" League is off to a good start this season with a win and tie in its first two games.

And as Victoria will be the host team for the Canadian Intermediate finals, scheduled for Pearkes and Esquimalt Arenas, Aug. 22-26, a strong showing is paramount.

Sixteen teams, eight "A" and eight "B", from Ontario (4), Quebec (2), Alberta (2), and B.C. (8) will take part in the nationals.

Ken Hall is the commissioner and Millie Buckley the assistant commissioner. They will be responsible for co-ordinating the Canadaian championships.

Sonsored by Goodwill Bottling, the Vancouver Islanders are coached by former Shamrock Frank Alexander and managed by Bob Alexander. They tied Coquitlam 13-13 in their first start and defeated New Westminster 14-4 in the second.

The league is composed of eight teams — Coquitlam, New Westminster, Burnaby No. 1 and Burnaby No. 2, Richmond, North Delta, Vancouver and Victoria — and clubs play a home-and-home series.

The Islanders also have games scheduled against Saanich, Victoria-Esquimalt and Juan de Fuca Junior "B" clubs.

The Islanders, who are home to Vancouver this afternoon, play at Burnaby on Sunday.

Remainder of schedule follows:

May 16 — Vic.-Esq. Jr. B vs Victoria at Esquimalt, 8 p.m.
May 26 — Victoria vs Richmond at Richmond.
May 27 — N. Delta vs Victoria, Esquimalt, 1:30 p.m.
June 3 — Burnaby No. 2 vs Victoria, Esquimalt, 1:30 p.m.
June 10 — Victoria vs Vancouver, Trout Lake.
June 14 — Victoria vs Vic.-Esq. Jr. B, Esquimalt, 9 p.m.
June 17 — Victoria vs N. Delta, Sungod.
June 23 — Coquitlam vs Victoria, Esquimalt, 1:30 p.m.

July 8 — Richmond vs Victoria, Esquimalt, 1:30 p.m.

Seventh Unlucky

Seven was not exactly a lucky number for Mel Nelson in Friday night's Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League confrontation at Central Park.

For five innnings it was a super evening for Nelson, the big pitcher for Sooke K & R who was working on a no-hitter when he went into the sixth frame against Seaboard Construction.

Then came the seventh. Seaboard lowered the boom and Mel's luck went out the window.

Brian Grexton doubled with one out, scampered across home plate on Tom Robertson's single and Seaboard had a 1-0 triumph.

Along the way, Seaboard pitcher Randy Jackson was performing quietly and efficiently, also winding up with a three-hitter and collecting the shutout victory.

In the Heywood Men's League at Heywood Park the batters were in control. Remco Office Supplies eventually combined 10 hits and eight bases-on-balls to chalk up a 13-12 decision over Ingraham Hotel.

Ingraham rapped out 12 hits, but collected only three bases-on-balls.

Rau Thanks Lasorda By One-Hitting Expos

By The Canadian Press

Early this week, Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda sat down and had a long talk with struggling Dodgers left-hander Doug Rau.

Rau, a model of consistency in his previous six full years with the National League club, had experienced nothing but trouble thus far this season. He had failed to win any of his six starts, his record was 0-4 and he had a fat 8.11 earned-run average.

"I wanted to let him know that I still had confidence in him, that I was going to keep pitching him," Lasorda said of the meeting.

That confidence was rewarded Friday night when Rau came within four outs of pitching a no-hitter, shutting out Montreal Expos 7-0.

The 30-year-old Rau finished with a one-hitter — Chris Speier's two-out single in the eighth inning. The hit was a high hopper that eluded third baseman Ron Cey.

"I knew as soon as it took the first bounce that I had no chance," said Cey, who hit one of the Dodgers' four home runs Friday night. "I was playing even with the bag, we didn't want to give up the cheap hit or a bunt, but I don't think I would have had a play even if I was playing back."

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta Braves ended Bob Forsch's no-hit bid in the seventh inning and beat St. Louis Cardinals 3-0, Chicago Cubs dumped Houston Astros 5-3, Cincinnati Reds whipped Pittsburgh Pirates 8-4, New York Mets blanked San Diego Padres 4-0 and San Francisco Giants shaded Philadelphia Phillies 2-1.

Ironically, it marked the second time that Speier had foiled a no-hit bid by Rau. In 1975, when Speier was with San Francisco, his lead-off single in the eighth inning was the Giants' first hit off Rau.

Both remembered the incident.

Meanwhile in the American League, Detroit's Mark (The Bird) Fidrych lost in his start this season as Milwaukee Brewers downed the Tigers 5-1 before a crowd of 42,563 at Tiger Stadium.

"If we won, I'd feel encouraged," Fidrych said after his appearance on the comeback trail. "But we lost, so I stunk."

The start was the first appearance by Fidrych at home since April 17 last year. He lasted 5 1-3 innings, the victim of three runs in the sixth — two on a double by Paul Molitor.

In other AL games, Boston Red Sox routed Oakland A's 11-2, Texas Rangers downed Toronto Blue Jays 3-1, California Angels beat New York Yankees 4-1, Minnesota Twins edged Cleveland Indians 4-3 and Chicago White Sox dumped Kansas City Royals 5-3.

Counterfeit Chicken Booed

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The new KGB Chicken made its official debut Friday night — to a chorus of boos from more than 43,000 Padres fans at San Diego Stadium.

Earlier this week, radio station KGB fired London, Ont., native Ted Giannoulas, the man who popularized the six-foot mascot.

Accompanied by a female chicken, the new foul appeared for about 10 seconds. He was then spirited away under heavy security.

Lumberworld Takes Chase In Senior Amateur Race

Lumberworld will be trying for a fifth consecutive league title when the new season opens Sunday in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League at Lambrick Park.

In opening games, Cosmopolitans (formerly Dairy Queen) will face Quadra Warehouse (formerly Greaves Movers) at 1 p.m. and Lumberworld takes on Capital Radiators at 3 p.m.

Farmer Construction, which finished second in the league but captured the playoff crown last season, opens against Cosmos at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Playing-coach Russ Holmes of Lumberworld has retained a strong nucleus of players from last year's squad and two off-season acquisitions, Marty Brouard and Mark Garrett, have impressed in pre-season play.

Capitals have shown some major improvements throughout spring training and head coach Randy Price appears to have a solid infield staff with the addition of senior Babe Ruth grads Geoff Dickson and Brad McBride.

Cosmos, an expansion team last season, will campaign under rookie coach Randy Johnson, who will double as a catcher on occasion. A young team averaging 20 years of age, Cosmos have strengthened themselves considerably through the league draft and by trading second baseman Gary White to Capitals for first baseman-outfielder Paul MacLeod.

One of the other top players picked up in the draft is Jim Hrach, who comes from Hamilton, Ont. Hrach, a second baseman-shortstop, batted .325 last season and has been invited to try out for the Canadian team later this summer in Windsor.

Ralph Anderson, a perennial all-star who was kept out of the entire 1978 season because of an early injury, is back in the lineup along with a bright newcomer, Tom Bradley, a hard-hitting third baseman who played minor league baseball in Chicago.

Semi-finals are also scheduled for today and finals will be played Sunday.

Ali To Quit; Too Big For Sport

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali says he will give up his title before the end of June because he has outgrown the sport that made him famous.

"I'm a tycoon. I'm a world traveller. I'm too big for boxing. There's money to be made," Ali said Thursday.

He denied a recent report that his kidneys were causing him trouble.

Esks Sign Canadians

Times News Services

Edmonton Eskimos have signed four Canadians to contracts for the upcoming Canadian Football League season.

Defensive guard Rene Deschamps, 22, is originally from Quebec City but played university football for University of Calgary Dinosaurs. Protected by the Montreal Alouettes last year, he played in all their pre-season games before returning to Calgary. Deschamps is six-feet, one-inch and weighs 234 pounds.

Bob Hogan, also a defensive back, graduated from the University of Windsor Lancers after three years of U.S. college football at the University of Virgina and attended B.C. Lions training camp in 1977. Aged 24, Hogan is 6-0 and 180 pounds.

The defending Grey Cup champions took linebacker David Roberts in the Canadian college draft from Queen's University Golden Gaels. Roberts is 6-2 and 210 pounds.

Marco Cyncar, 21, of University of Alberta Golden Bears is a wide receiver who can also play as defensive back, punter and place kicker. He caught 25 passes last year and averaged 14.9 yards.

Elsewhere, Calgary Stampeders have announced the signing of Calgary native Doug Battershill, a defensive back and place kicker from Weber State College in Utah.

Strickland, 28, joined the Riders last year after three seasons with British Columbia Lions. He was the only Rider named to the CFL all-star team last year.

Lou Clare, 29, a linebacker, and Sam Holden, 32, an offensive tackle, will also return to training camp. Clare will be in his fourth season with the Riders.

Promotion for Palace

LONDON (Reuter) — Crystal Palace clinched the English Second Division soccer championship and promotion to Division One by beating Burnley 2-0 Friday.

A point would have put the London club up but Burnley held out until the 77th minute when Ian Walsh headed home from Vince Hilaires cross. Dave Swindlehurst hit the second two minutes from time.

The Crystal Palace win meant Sunderland stays in the Second Division and pushed already promoted Brighton and Stoke down to second and third places.

Champions Liverpool beat Middlesbrough 1-0 and stay on course for a First Division points record of 68. A second half goal by David Johnson took them to 66 with one match remaining.

Arsenal play today's Football Association Cup final against Manchester United knowing it may have to win to ensure a place in one of the European competitions next season.

Ipswich put the pressure on its European Football Union Cup hopes by beating Queen Park Rangers 4-0. Rangers were watched by new manager Tommy Docherty, the former Derby boss.

Goals by Eric Butcher, Alan Brazil and Eric Gates, two, swamped Rangers and Gave Ipswich a total of 49 points and a goal difference of 14.

Arsenal, with one game to play, are two points adrift and have a goal difference of 13.

By R. N. MATHENY and ERIC BOURNE

BUCHAREST, ROMANIA — Romania, the East-bloc maverick, has been trying to "do its own thing" since the early 1960s.

It has not always been easy. But a country with a past going back through 24 centuries of often violent history learns how to manage and how and where to compromise, despite a volatile temperament.

Contemporary Romania is an authoritarian Communist state, a member of the Warsaw Pack and its sister economic community, Comecon. It is mindful of its general commitment to Communist Europe, though setting its own lines on military obligations.

It also cultivates pride in the national past to preserve and enlarge an individual identity.

Doing so, of course, means periodically upsetting Moscow.

Friendship with China on the same footing as with the Soviet Union, neutrality in the Middle East, disapproval of the Soviet-Vietnamese hand in recent events in Cambodia.

Such independence also means increasingly outgoing ties with the non-Communist world. Examples:

- An accord with the United States giving Romania most-favored nation trading treatment (and assurance of American goodwill toward Bucharest's flexible foreign policy).
- A billion-dollar contract with Canada for Romania's first atomic-power plant.
- A deal with Britain for joint jetliner production.
- Joining hands with West Germany in a third-world program to build three steel plants in India in return for iron ore (thus easing dependence on Russia).

Commercial agreements with France include making the Renault car in Romania. It will be called Dacia — again, to remind Romanians of their 400 B.C. forebears. Until then, Romania, with Russia, still bottoms the East-bloc scale in cars and other major consumer items.

Massive industrialization, though, is certainly transforming a backward Balkan state. May Romanians, however, are grumbling more and more boldly at too great a sacrifice of living standards.

As a nation they are closer to the Latin in language and spirit than to the Slav; a passionate, volatile people with the capacity for enjoying life.

Food and clothing stores look no better really than two years ago. Housing, the most grievous complaint, fell 40,000 flats below the 1978 plan.

"People have been making the best of things too long," a Romanian acquaintance remarked glumly to this writer on a visit last summer.

While writers begin to rebel at the official blinkered view of the arts and ordinary citizens at the severe limits on personal freedoms like travel, key regime workers like the miners have begun openly to signal their acute discontent.

The regime, outside observers note, shows its alertness in observing the "limits of acceptability" in dealing with Moscow. But it does not yet appear to be sensitive enough to realize there are limits, too, to the many difficulties and austerity of domestic life.

Helpful Deal For Disabled

The British Tourist Authority has published a pamphlet in conjunction with the Disabled Living Foundation and the Royal Association for Disbility and Rehabilitation listing various items of advice and helpful organisations for the disabled holidaymaker in Britain.

The sections include names and addresses of companies in Britain who organise special tours, medical arrangments, wheel chair hire, ferry travel, trains, taxis and public transport and societies concerned with providing assistance to the disabled and handicapped. The booklet is available from the BTA, Box 504, Station F, Toronto.

Bach Festival At St. David's

The cathedral in St. David's, the tiny city in Wales, will be the setting for a Bach Festival from May 26 to June 2. The program will include organ recitals, a harp ensemble, a harpsicord recital and a piano recital.

St. David's Cathedral is the largest in Wales, and the city has been a place of pilgrimage for more than 800 years.

Price Is not Whole Picture In Switzerland These Days

By MARGARET ZELLERS

ZURICH — In Switzerland today, before you start multiplying every Swiss franc by 60 cents, the present rate of exchange, figure a value for the quality of life, cleanliness of the country and unmitigated hospitality.

When you invest the equivalent of $1 in a cup of coffee or a bottle of Swiss Apfelsaft (a delicious, fizzy apple juice drink), know that the sum also earns the right to spend an entire morning, afternoon or evening in a cozy cafe sharing an experience that can be priceless.

A sandwich lunch can cost the equivalent of $1.50 if you buy from a pastry shop, or one of the stands at the underground Shop-Ville in Zurich, and you can ride the tram for the equivalent of 32 cents per ride if you buy the 6 Swiss franc 11-ride ticket. The secret is knowing the ropes, as is the case with cost-conscious travel anywhere.

No one denies that the Swiss franc climbs to steep tallies for some things, when you figure it as equal to 60 cents, but there's a way of life in this country that offers the best things, sometimes for free and many times at reasonable cost.

Any traveller planning a few days of roaming the countryside should invest in a Swiss Holiday Card, an all-purpose transportation ticket that gives you, for example, four days of unlimited travel on all trains at the Swiss Federal Railways, 160 postal bus routes, and most lake boats, with discounts on connecting private carriers, for $52 second class, $72 first class. (Since Swiss public transportation cars can be counted on to be clean, neat and comfortable, second class is a good investment.)

The Swiss Holiday Card also comes in an eight-day version ($96 first, $69 second), a 15-day version ($124 first, $89 second) and a one-month card ($172 first, $123 second), with rates guaranteed until June 1, 1979 and probably continued thereafter. Purchase of the special card must be made in advance of arrival in Switzerland, through your travel agent or directly with the Swiss National Tourist Office, 608 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10020.

Not only does the Holiday Card make it possible to go from Zurich or Geneva to, say, Zermatt for a couple of days, but you also can dart (at no extra cost) from downtown Geneva to outlying villages.

From Zurich, you can go to lunch in the village of Trogen, about an hour by train in the rolling hills of the eastern canton of Appenzell, or you can make the 20-minute train trip from Zurich's Hauptbahnhof (as the main railroad station is called) to the town of Winterthur to walk through the countryside to the Oskar Reinhart Am Romerholz, a once-private home of a perspicacious art collector who willed his collection to his village.

But you don't have to leave Zurich to find good museums — for free. The venerable history of Switzerland stretches through room after room of the Landesmuseum, and the special collection of porcelain on the second floor of the Zunfthaus zur Meisen in Altstadt (old town) gives you a chance to see priceless pieces made in Zurich in the 18th century.

Surviving in Zurich or Geneva without punching holes in your pocketbook is a matter of adapting to the local modus operandi. Trams and buses link all points in the centre cities — in Zurich, Geneva, Bern, Luzern and elsewhere.

In Zurich, the 3.50-Swiss-franc Tageskarte (one-day ticket) gives you unlimited travel on the city network for 24 hours from the time you have your card stamped.

Walks in the woods and around the lakes at both Geneva and Zurich and elsewhere cost nothing — and are some of the best ways to sample Switzerland. Yellow signs clearly post the time it takes to walk from one village to the next along the "wanderwege" as the walking paths are called, so there's no need for any other language but your own. (Wanderwege routes are posted on the walls of the railroad stations in villages near the big cities.)

Meals can take a big bite out of your budget, but look for the Tagesteller in the German-speaking part of Switzerland, or the assiette du jour (French) or piatto del giorno (Italian) in the French and Italian-speaking areas. A word of caution: in Switzerland the menu is called a "karte," and if you ask for a menu, you may have ordered the chef's choice of the meal of the day since that's a "menu" in Switzerland.

The Tagesteller, or its equivalent, offers one-plate service as in American restaurants (the usual Swiss service offers two or more servings). Cost of a home-cooked meal will range from 8 to 15 Swiss francs, with entrees from the extensive "karte" ranging from 18 to 25 Swiss francs for special and filling meals.

Ways around the mealtime expenses include stopping at a neighborhood bakery for a couple of fresh rolls, and sweeping through the local market for some cheese and fruit. There's the alternative of buying Bratwurst und Buhrli, the veal sausage and roll that the Swiss eat as an equivalent of our hot dogs.

Select your season carefully, to keep hotel rates as reasonable as possible. Avoid the peak seasons — winter in ski resorts and summer at lakeside communities. Ask at ski resorts about special rates in early January and in late March and April before and after peak seasons when snow is still good but demand for rooms is less and prices are lower.

Settle for a room without bath when you book at a small place where the toilet and shower/tub will only be a few doors from your room. And if you don't mind small rooms, select the minimum-rate rooms at one of the more expensive hotels to share in the surroundings without paying the steepest tariff.

During several weeks of travel throughout Switzerland over the past several months, I have enjoyed many days when the cost was the equivalent of about $30 — for a 25 Swiss franc room in a small village inn, a sandwich lunch and a simple but filling dinner, with walks in the woods, rides on buses, trains and lake boats (prepaid with my Holiday Card) and a memory that will be magic forever.

I also have invested that sum in one sumptuous dinner. Both investments are worth far more than the actual cost.

A Garden To Open This Year

A new scented garden, planted in the Privy Gardens of Hatfield House, 30 miles north of London, the Jacobean home of the Marquess of Salisbury, opens to the public this year. It has been designed and planned by Lady Salisbury and includes a herb garden, roses, pinks, lilies and flowering shrubs and trees.

Lady Salisbury's Garden opens in Gardens Year, an English Tourist Board promotion and also coincides with the exhibition "How Did Your Garden Grow?" a celebration of 1,000 years of British gardening at the Victoria and Albert Museum, London.

Hatfield was also the setting for the fifth annual crafts exhibition in the grounds (May 10-13). As in previous years, the emphasis was on traditional English crafts and included dry stone-walling, lace-making, patchwork, spinning and furniture making.

Hatfield re-opened to the public in March. The park and gardens are open every day except Good Friday.

Bristol Channel's Little Gem

On Lundy You Feel Free

By ROY REED

LUNDY, England — If Lundy is illustrative, not even an island is an island any more, entire of itself.

Lundy, three miles long and half a mile wide and sitting in the Bristol Channel off the west coast of England between the northern coast of Devon and Wales, was once a self-sufficient stronghold. Its pirates plundered the sea lanes and its knights asserted themselves against the British crown. Barely 40 years ago, a Lundy chieftain who is still alive exacted tribute from the British War Office for landing nine soldiers on Lundy soil. On Lundy rock, actually; there is not much here but granite and a film of grass.

But independence has so far subsided that Lundy's 26 inhabitants are now almost fully British. They are irretrievably under the control of British laws. They pay British income tax and British postage. They would earn little without British and foreign tourists, and they would probably starve without food from the British mainland, delivered every Tuesday and Saturday on a boat powered by British petroleum.

With so little left to govern, why would 914 people want to be the governor of such a place? That was the number who applied when the island's owner, the National Trust, a preservation organization, advertised for a new agent, or administrator. The applications, which came from 911 men and 3 women in various parts of the neighboring United Kingdom, are still being sifted.

Lundy seems to draw certain types of people in spite of its loss of power and independence. The population cannot explode because there are only a few houses and no plans to build more. Traffic is no problem because the island has only one car. The place lacks crowds, noise, telephones and daily papers. It does not even have a bookie, which may be unique in the British Isles.

Even though Lundy residents pay British income tax and vote in British elections, they are still free to mind their own business in many ways. The pub, for example, has never bought a British license, and its hours are set to suit the style of the barman, a keen birdwatcher and early riser.

"On a tiny island like this," said Felix William Gade, who retired as agent several years ago, "it's not difficult to become independent because you're not worth bothering about. The authorities on the mainland don't like voyages. They leave you alone."

"One reason people like to come to Lundy was freedom," he continued. "You didn't have to quit your drink and go home at a certain hour if you were on good terms with the landlord, and that was me. We didn't pay any tax of any sort until 1974. Then, with a Socialist Government which is devoted to ceasing all priviledge, we were suddenly informed that we had to pay income taxes."

Gade, who is 87 years old, remembers better days. It was he who extracted a landing fee of a shilling a man for the nine soldiers who came here in the 1930's looking for places to put armament to defend Britain.

His employer, the then owner of the island, Martin Coles Harman, minted his own coins for Lundy with his picture on them instead of the sovereign's until he was hauled into a British court and forced to stop. He also lost his ffght to keep Lundians from voting in British elections. Shortly after he died in 1954 Lundy lost the control it has always claimed over fishing rights in its coastal waters.

Lundy still issues its own stamp, with a picture of a puffin to remind people that its name is said to mean Puffin Island. But the stamps will take a letter no farther than the mainland without additional British postage.

Everyone here except the two children of John Ogilvie, the farm manager, works for the Landmark Trust, a charitable organization that preserves historical places and buildings and that leases the island from the National Trust. Mr. Ogilvie looks after Lundy's 400 sheep and 25 cattle. Others work at restoring centuries-old buildings and taking care of the tourists. About 1,500 a year come for extended stays in the one hotel and several cottages; about 20,000 come for day trips on the six boats that run weekly from Ilfracombe, on the Devon coast, during the summer.

Most of the islanders study nature or tend their gardens during their spare time. Angela Bendall, the secretary, looks after the 12 Lundy ponies; like an anxious midwife she has supervised the birth of five colts this spring. Michael Rogers, the barmam keeps track of the little band of puffins that still nest here.

The Queen Mother to Open Event on June 28

Gathering of the Clans in Nova Scotia

The first International Gathering of the Clans to be held outside Scotland will be in Nova Scotia this summer. With the full support of the Scottish Gathering organizers and with indicated financial aid from the Federal and the Provincial Governments funds already in place, the Board of Directors of the Scottish Societies Association of Nova Scotia have been planning this major event since 1977. Combining the existing Scottish Festivals with meetings of over 30 Clans, the Gathering will run in various locations throughout the Province from June 28 until August 12.

The Gathering will be officially opened by The Queen Mother at the Halifax Metro Centre on June 28. A. Gordon Archibald, chairman of the board for the Gathering said, "The presence of the Queen Mother sets the tone for the entire Gathering right across the Province." The opening ceremonies will be followed by a tattoo and concert at the Metro Centre. Concerts by guest bands, the majority of which come from Nova Scotia will take place in various locations in Halifax and Dartmouth. Also at C.F.B. Shearwater there will be a highland parade and International Airshow.

Festivities will have already begun in various locations throughout the province. In Cape Breton the weekend activities will include: The Baddeck Handcraft Festival featuring a handcrafts display, weaving, milling frolic, demonstrations on everything from shearing to weaving to fashions, and of course, a Scottish Ceilidh About a 60-minute drive from Baddeck the Annual Mabou Ceilidh will also be in full swing. Beginning with a bilingual ecumenical service (English and Gaelic) the Ceilidh features sheep shearing and sheep dog exhibitions and huge quantities of fine Cape Breton food, including a lamb barbecue and a fresh salmon dinner. On July 1, in Mabou, there will be an open air concert and a dance.

On the Mainland for the opening weekend "Highland Games" will take place at Pugwash on the North Shore of Nova Scotia at the Pugwash Gathering of the Clans and Fishermen's Regatta.

To compliment the brawn with the brain the organizers of this event will also be holding an International Thinkers Conference at which the Contribution of the Scot to the Canadian Community will be considered. Internationally known Scottish authorities in literature and culture will be in attendance.

The following week begins with the Gathering of the Clan Fraser on July 5, 6 and 7 in New Glasgow. While these Clans are Gathering, two hundred Scottish Fiddlers will be making their way to Glendale, Cape Breton, 12 miles from the Canso Causeway, for the Biannual Festival of Scottish Fiddling. This event goes on for three days, morning until late at night on July 6, 7, 8.

The Antigonish Highland Games, which rivals in size and significance some of the major games in Scotland, takes place in Antigonish from July 7 through July 15. The first two days are centered around a homecoming, featuring picnics, films, church services, concerts, theatre, and then, the Games begin. The remaining portion of the huge Games schedule consists of band concerts, kilted golf tournaments, opportunities to taste Scottish food but most of all the Highland Sporting and Athletic Competitions. And if that isn't enough to fill anyone's day, there will also be the International Gathering Pipe Band Championships, Highland Dance Championships, and Scottish National Dance Championships.

Dancing, Ceilidhs, and Concerts are a big part of the rest of July beginning with a ceilidh on July 12, in Big Pond, Cape Breton, on Route 4 midway between Sydney and the Canso Causeway, followed by two days of square and round dancing, leading up to the Big Pond Concert on the afternoon of July 15.

The Halifax/Dartmouth Week of the Gathering begins on July 16 and will also be the International Scottish Country Dance Week, attracting over 200 dancers. In addition there will be a Cape Breton Club Ceilidh, a Highland Banquet and Ball with Scottish Music, and a Festival of Piping. Clan Gathering that week include Clan Donnachaidh, Clan Monro, and a visit from Clan Colquhoun. More dancing will be featured in Judique, Cape Breton from July 20 to 22 at the Judique-on-the-Floor Days as well as sporting events, craft displays, and barbeques. Boisdale, Cape Breton will hold their annual Scottish Concert on July 22 with the best of Scottish Music in Cape Breton.

Sydney, Cape Breton is the host for the Gathering from July 23 to 29 under the auspices of the City of Sydney, the Games Committee and the Gaelic Society. There will be ceilidhs throughout the week and on the weekend the Sydney Highland Games. On July 29 the Broad Cove Scottish Concert, which last year attracted 15,000 people will take place in Broad Cove, Inverness County. Iona, Cape Breton will be hosting a gathering of the Clan MacNeil that will culminate with the Iona Highland Village Day on August 4. The Higland Village is an opportunity for people to see the housing of the first Scottish Highland settlers in the region while listening to music and more glorious Scottish food. On August 5, the scene moves to Frenchvale outside Sydney for the Frenchvale Scottish Concert and an evening of square dancing.

The final week of the Gathering will include the Highland Games at Trenton, Nova Scotia near New Glasgow at the "Festival of the Tartans," from August 6 to 11. It will be one of the last opportunities for the contestants to compete in the many events with dancing, bands, parades, and barbeques. The Gaelic Mod, held at the Gaelic College in St. Ann's, Cape Breton, will include a gathering of the Clan Matheson, with four days of highland demonstrations and competitions from August 7 to 11. There will be performances, daily on the outdoor stage which is another new addition to the college facilities. (For more information write to: P.O. Box 130 Halifax, Nova Scotia B3J 2R5).

New Blow to China Rights

By JOHN FRASER
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — The infant human rights movement in China, already reeling from the arrest of its leaders, received another serious blow this week when Red Flag, the most important theoretical journal of the Communist Party, attacked the whole concept of human rights and questioned the loyalty of those Chinese who felt it had any relevance here.

The article gives what is purported to be "a Marxist viewpoint on the problem of human rights" and traces the concept through the works of several French, British and U.S. philosophers and political activists.

Human rights, the three authors conclude, was a useful tool of the bourgeoisie in defeating the remnants of feudal power in Europe and the United States, but its continued advocacy is a trick to fool people from seeing the true nature of class struggle.

The article casts abuse on certain bourgeois democracies where "elected representatives have to spend one million dollars to get their offices and presidents may spend up to fifty million dollars." The U.S. Declaration of Independence is a fraud because it did not confront the problem of slavery which was maintained in the United States for nearly a century afterward.

Coming closer to home, the article cites a number of examples to show that the Chinese Communist Government has always shown concern for the basic rights of the proletariat and specifically cites the country's treatment of criminals and counter-revolutionaries as proof.

"China does not use torture, corporal punishment or Fascist interrogation with criminals," says the article. Instead, the government considers such people as human beings and worthy of re-education.

The Red Flag article castigates those activists who recently called upon "capitalist, imperialist countries" to pay "close attention to China's human rights problem." This is repugnant to the Chinese people, say the authors, especially when such appeals are directed to countries which in the past persecuted China.

The authors concede that for a period socialist democracy and the rights of the proletariat and peasants were trampled upon, but this is passed off on the "pernicious influence of the Gang of Four."

"It is groundless to draw the conclusion from this or even the continued shortcomings of the (Government's) work that the people have absolutely no rights or democracy in our country."

Pilot Lands In Big Trouble

RIOHACHA, Colombia (AP) — A Texas pilot said Friday he was guided to an emergency landing by what he thought were friendly car lights, then robbed and wounded by a gang. A Colombian official said he had landed in one of Colombia's most notorious drug-smuggling areas.

"I didn't realize how serious the situation is here in Colombia," pilot William Spradley said in an interview from his hospital bed. "This is sure no place for anyone if they don't know what's going on. If you screw up, you're in a big world of hurt."

Spradley, a 45-year-old Houston fireman, said he and a companion, Roy McLamore of Houston, Tex., developed engine trouble April 29 during a flight to Venezuela from Miami to pick up some oil-drilling bits.

He said they were looking for a landing site in the torrid semi-desert area when they saw several cars on the beach shining their lights as if to indicate a safe spot.

Limbano Diaz, government secretary in the state of Guajira, said the men were sighted by smugglers who were waiting for a plane to pick up a load of marijuana.

"After we landed, three, maybe five pick-up trucks pulled up next to the plane and we got out," Spradley said. "After that someone held a pistol on us and told us to get in one of the trucks. I was next to the window on the passenger side when I heard a gunshot, and saw a flash."

Spradley was hit by a bullet that tore through his right forearm and lodged an inch and a half from his spine. He said he hopes to have the bullet removed when he returns to Houston.

He said the bandits took their flight bags and money.

Diaz said McLamore is believed to have run away when a second group of persons approached to help them.

Not to believe in the human rights of the unborn child is contrary to the 1957 United Nations Declaration which states:

What kind of a society are we living in that ignores these basic human rights?

1979 — YEAR OF THE CHILD IN CANADA

During recent months, Canadians from coast-to-coast have applauded the United Nations' proclamation that 1979 be known as the Year of the Child. Yet many of these same citizens by their silence, have endorsed the killing of 57,564 unborn Canadian babies by abortion during the past year — and close to one third of a million since the abortion law was 'liberalized' in 1969.

DURING THE PAST DECADE, MORE UNBORN CANADIAN BABIES HAVE BEEN DESTROYED BY ABORTION THAN OUR TOTAL CASUALTIES IN BOTH WORLD WARS.

During 1978, in our own Victoria General Hospital, there were 1,220 live births and 788 abortions: a ratio of two abortions for every three live births.

Chilling Tales Told by Ginzburg

By ROBERT KAISER

WASHINGTON (WP) — Alexander Ginzburg, one of five Soviet dissidents swapped for two Soviet spies, Friday chilled a commission of House and Senate members with tales from the Soviet prison camps that he left just a fortnight ago.

Looking pale and exhausted, Ginzburg told the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe that human rights activists continue to struggle with the Soviet authorities even from their prisons and camps.

It was an odd encounter between a 42-year-old Soviet citizen, obviously still stunned by his sudden release, and half a dozen members of the House and Senate in an ornate committee room in the Rayburn House Office Building. The room was bright with television lights and filled with spectators.

"Having spent the last two years in isolation," Ginzburg said — a reference to the "special regime" labor camp for "especially dangerous state criminals" where he has been imprisoned — "I find it difficult to grasp all that has happened in that time. I am unaware of much that is known to those present here today."

The commission to which Ginzburg spoke was established to monitor the Helsinki agreement on European security. Ginzburg himself was a member of the Moscow "Helsinki watch group" set up to monitor Soviet compliance with that agreement, particularly its human rights provisions.

Ginzburg gave the commission a rundown of other members of Soviet Helsinki watch groups who are still in camps or prisons and other Soviet human rights activists. Many of them, Ginzburg said, are extremely ill. He mentioned Serge Kovalev, a biologist in prison since 1974 who has undergone emergency surgery in camp; Alesei Tikhy, a Ukranian dissident who served in the same camp that Ginzburg was in, and who may already be dead, Ginzburg said; Vladimir Osipov, a Russian nationalist dissident who suffers from tuberculosis, but could not get treatment for years.

These cases "are not exceptions," Ginzburg said. "Rather they are ordinary events and typical of prison life... Stomach ulcers, tuberculosis, hypertension, kidney and liver ailments are inevitable diseases for prisoners. I do not know any prisoner who does not suffer from at least one of these illnesses. This is the natural result of our diet, our medicine and our punitive legislation."

Ginzburg continued: "I want to stress that the mistreatment we find in camp is not the result of perverted actions on the part of individual guards. In fact, everything is done in accordance with regulations and special instructions. And that is the most terrible thing of all."

Ginzburg said the decision by Soviet authorities to exchange him and four other dissident prisoners for two Soviet spies held by the United States was a "humane act," but that it "is not an improvement of the general human rights situation in the U.S.S.R."

"It is just not possible that this regime will become more liberal," Ginzburg said. But later in his testimony he said outside and internal pressures would eventually force a change in the way the Soviet Union handles human rights issues.

Sens. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Bob Dole, R-Kan., and Reps. Dante Fascell, D-La., and Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., all tried to elicit information or opinions from Ginzburg about recent events of which he obviously had little if any personal knowledge. The four members of Congress seemed to have trouble grasping the fact that Ginzburg had been in a sort of human refrigerator for two years, cut off from most outside information.

Oil Blast Kills Man

TACOMA (AP) — One man was killed and another man was severely burned early Friday when a tanker truck they were loading with jet fuel exploded near the U.S. Oil Refining Co.

While the tanker was being filled with refined kerosene jet fuel, pressure built in the tank and an explosion occurred, blowing fuel back out of the tank, said a police spokesman.

The burn victim was in critical condition in hospital with burns over 45 per cent of his body.

Names of the two men were not immediately available.

Energy Caught From Waves

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — Scientists have unveiled a device with only a single moving part which captures energy from ocean waves.

Lockheed-California Corp. has patented the device after six years of research. Potential uses include generation of electricity, clean-up of oil spills, formation of calm harbors in the open sea and desalinization of ocean water.

A Lockheed spokesman said waves which normally arrive about every 10 seconds enter an opening at the top of the unit. The water is caused to spiral into a vortex and held inside a 60-foot deep central core.

The swirling column of water in the core turns a turbine wheel, the unit's only moving part, which provides continuous electrical power generation of one to two megawatts.

Murder Plotted In Commons . . .

LONDON (CP) — Murder by gun or poison was plotted behind a bolted door at the House of Commons, a witness told the jury Friday at the trial of Jeremy Thorpe, former leader of Britain's Liberal party.

Thorpe, 50, is accused of plotting what ended up as a bungled attempt to kill male model Norman Scott, who is alleged to have threatened to reveal that they were once homosexual lovers.

He told of a meeting at the Commons in 1968 when he, like Thorpe, was a Liberal member of Parliament.

He said Thorpe told him he wanted Scott killed.

He said Thorpe suggested the body could be thrown down a tin mine.

Bessell said he tried to dissuade the party leader from the idea.

But early in 1969, Thorpe called him to another meeting in his room at Parliament. Also there was David Holmes, who was then the Liberals' deputy treasurer and now is a co-defendant.

"Mr. Thorpe asked me to lock the door," Bessell said, then suggested that Holmes pose as a reporter for the German magazine Der Spiegel, get Scott drunk, lure him to a lonely spot and shoot him.

Bessell said he raised practical difficulties to try to persuade Thorpe to abandon the idea of murder.

He said, he pointed out that the gun would make a noise. "Mr. Scott was a big man and would have to be dragged to a tin mine shaft. Mr. Thorpe said, in that case it would have to be poison. You can slip it into his drink, David, in the pub (tavern)."

Bessell, granted immunity in exchange for testifying, also told of efforts by Thorpe and friends to retrieve allegedly compromising letters the Liberal leader had written to Scott and of "retainers" paid to Scott, who kept pleading for help getting money and employment.

Bessell said that one set of compromising letters, dating from the alleged affair in the early 1960s, was retrieved from Scott but that others apparently remained in Scotts hands, and Thorpe's friends were unable to get them back.

Despite a series of small "retainers" paid by Bessell and reimbursed by Thorpe, he said, Thorpe was depressed and anxious over the prospect of exposure.

BURGLAR ON ICE

LYON, France (AP) — A burglar who broke into a meat-packing plant was found frozen in the main locker.

Police say the 38-year-old man got in through a trap door in the roof, looted the petty cash box then went into the freezer storage room.

6 Die In Blast

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A natural-gas explosion killed at least six persons and injured 18 others as it levelled a tavern and an abandoned rowhouse in northeast Philadelphia, police say.

The blast Friday injured people up to a block away, knocked a passing motorist unconscious, and hurled an elderly man through a plate glass store window, police said.

One victim, Doris Hopp, 40, was crushed by debris while waiting for a bus across the street from the tavern, police said.

Don Kenly, a spokesman for the Philadelphia Gas Works (PGW), said the explosion was caused by gas that had escaped from a broken main under the street and had collected in the basements of the bar and rowhouse.

"We believe something caused the ground (under the street) to be washed away and the traffic overhead caused the unsupported main to be broken," he said.

Israelis, PLO Duel On Lebanon Border

BEIRUT (UPI) — Israeli-backed rightist Christian militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas traded artillery and rocket fire in south Lebanon during the night, Beirut newspapers reported today.

The newspapers also reported that the Palestine Liberation Organization "suspended" its representative in Cairo on direct orders from Yasser Arafat, because the PLO emissary continued to live in Egypt after it signed a peace treaty with Israel.

The independent newspaper An Nahar said at least three persons were killed in the village of Baraachit — one of the targets of the militia barrage.

The shelling, which started at 8 p.m. (11 a.m. PDT) Friday, continued for several hours.

Palestinian officials said the rightist barrage covered several villages including Chak, Chaqra, Tibnin, Yater, Haris, Beit Yahoun and Ghandourieh. These villages house small contingents of United Nations peacekeeping forces.

They said the guerrillas responded by shelling "rightist strongholds."

Elsewhere in the south, seven children were killed Friday in the village of Saksakiyeh, 10 miles out of the coastal town of Sidon, while playing with an unexploded bomb, Beirut newspapers reported.

Palestinian officials said the bomb was Israeli and that the children were refugees from the Palestinian refugee camp of Rashidiyeh, near the coastal town of Tyre. The camp has been the repeated target of Israeli shelling attacks.

The suspension of the PLO representative in Egypt was announced by the Palestine News Agency, WAFA. It said that Said Kamal "is no longer authorized to undertake any activity in the name of the PLO.

"Yasser Arafat, the chairman of the PLO executive committee and general commander of the forces of the Palestinian revolution, today (Friday) issued an order suspending Said Kamal from all functions within the PLO," the agency said.

Couple Slay Priest Then Kill Selves

LITTLETON, N.H. (AP) — Rev. Joseph John Sands was filling in for the vacationing priest of the St. Rose of Lima Church when a man and a woman arrived shortly after noon demanding to see a priest.

Five hours later, Father Sands was dead and a former mental patient and his wife, armed with handguns and claiming to be "king and queen of the church," had committed suicide, police said.

The couple was identified by police as Peter Linsley, 35, and Jane Linsley, 28, both of Concord.

Assistant Attorney-General Anne Cagwin said the Linsleys died of gunshot wounds to the temple, while Sands was shot in the head and stomach. A state trooper received a minor wound in the arm.

Ms. Cagwin said the couple made no demands in telephone conversations with police except to ask for cigarettes, which were supplied.

The grim drama was played out Friday in this northern New Hampshire community of about 5,400.

Gov. Hugh Gallen, a member of the parish, flew to Littleton and was present during negotiations for the release of Father Sands, 46, director of a home for delinquent boys.

State police said Linsley had been released from the state hospital in May 1978 after spending almost one year there.

Police said he was committed to the hospital after pleading not guilty by reason of insanity to an aggravated assault charge in July 1977.

Most Rev. Odore Gendron, bishop of Manchester, said he "prayed throughout the ordeal that the outcome would be different."

Sands was director of Alpha House, a home for delinquent boys that he founded in 1970.

Around the Galleries

The lush and seductive appeal of Victoria, often described by visitors as the most beautiful city they have seen in their travels, has also proved endlessly fascinating to artists in all media throughout its history.

Victoria Through Artists' Eyes is a visual essay on the city offered through many appreciative and discerning observations. It opens at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss, Wednesday. One of the Gallery's summer shows, it will continue on view through July 25.

With oils, watercolors, pen-and-ink, charcoal and through the camera lens, artists have been recording their impressions and favorite aspects of the city since the middle of the 19th century. The current exhibition will survey this activity from its beginning to the present day. Among those artists represented are Franklin Brownell, Leonard P. James, E.S.Shrapnell, Jack Wilkinson, Herbert Siebner, Brian Travers-Smith and Vicky Husband.

Most of the works have been borrowed from private collections in Victoria. Funding is from the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation.

Sculpture and photo-drawings by Wayne Morrison and recent photographs by Michael Semak occupy Open Space Gallery, 510 Fort, currently. This show will continue through May 26. The gallery also announces that its mid-summer show will consist of Peter Schuyff's Great Big Paper Paintings and Don Corman's photographs.

This show will open July 10 and continue through Aug.4.

Notification of a $1,000 grant has been received from the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation. The grant is to assist in the Collaboratory Program, which received a $700 grant from the same source last year. Over the past three years the Foundation has assisted Open Space by awarding special projects grants and in 1976 provided $7,500 toward the renovation of the building.

Montreal-born Francine Gravel is a free-lance artist whose work is frequently featured in one-woman and group shows throughout Canada as well as in Europe and the United States.

Graphics by Francine Gravel will go on view Tuesday at The Backroom Gallery, 2070 Oak Bay, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. The exhibition will continue through June 2. Regular gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday.

Gravel's works are to be found in the collections of the National Libraries in Montreal and Ottawa, the Toronto Metro Library, Alberta Arts Foundation, the Glenbow Foundation and the Print Cabinet of the Albert I Royal Library in Brussels, among others.

An exhibition of paintings in watercolor and egg tempera by Victoria's Joan Ward-Harris at The Quest Gallery, 1023 Government, will celebrate the publication of her book, Creature Comforts, by Collins Publishers, Toronto.

The gallery, in association with Collins, is hosting a reception to meet the author-artist, Sunday from 2 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Six young contemporary artists are presenting works in silkscreen and etching at the Media Gallery, 716 Yates, currently through June 1. The works move through abstraction to representational landscapes and images.

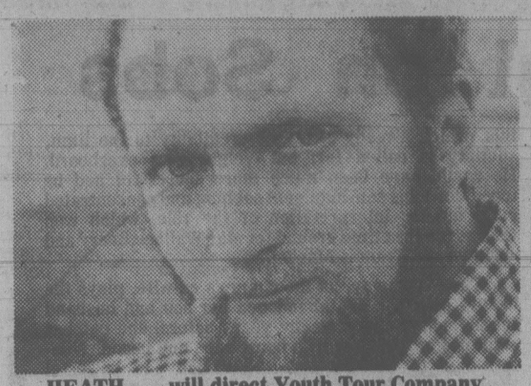
Heath to Return for Bastion Shows



HEATH . . . will direct Youth Tour Company

John Heath has for the past 14 years been a valued member of the Victoria theatre scene and strongly identified with Bastion Theatre, Four Seasons Musical Theatre and others in the areas of directing, acting, choreographing, design and script-writing.

He is now keeping busy from a Toronto base, but will be back in Victoria in the early fall to direct the Bastion Youth Tour Company in two new scripts he has been commissioned to prepare. The commission has been assisted by a Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation grant of $500 to Bastion Theatre for that purpose.

The elementary school production for the 1979-80 tour is entitled Androcles, The Lion and Friends, which is a new version of the classic tale. Secondary students will see Call the Next Witness, a fast-paced revue centering on justice and injustice, the guilty and innocent in real life and fiction.

The Youth Tour Company presents approximately 200 performances in B.C. between October and April each year to over 60,000 students.

Currently Heath has been playing in Tom Stoppard's After Magritte, which opened May 1 at Solar Stage, Toronto's new and successful lunch-time theatre. Following this engagment he will be at Winnipeg Beach to play George in the Interlake Festival production of Same Time Next Year, the comedy which he directed for Bastion in March, 1978.

Then he will be directing Sleuth for the Interlake Festival, before going to Grand Bend, Ont. to play the role of Max in The Sound of Music at the Huron Country Playhouse.

MUSICAL NOTEBOOK

The Victoria Conservatory Orchestra, comprised of senior students and faculty under the direction of Sydney Humphreys, will present a concert Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Featured works and soloists will include Mozart's Piano Concerto in C minor, K.491, with Robert Holliston as soloist and James Kennedy conducting; the Bach Violin Concerto in E Major with Paul Culbertson as soloist; Beethoven's Romance in F Major, soloist Zoe Williams; Bach's Piano Concerto in F minor, soloist Daphne Kalfon; Saint-Saens' Allegro Appassionato for Cello and Orchestra with Jennifer Wallis as soloist (the last four items conducted by Humphreys) and Three Tunes for Strings by Murray Adaskin, conducted by Gordon Thomson.

Admission to the concert is by donation to the Conservatory bursary-scholarship fund.

There is no lack of events to provide Mothers' Day treats for a variety of tastes. Also on Sunday, performances of major interest to devotees of the musical theatre and ballet are available.

At McPherson Playhouse the star-studded Ballet Revue will give two of its scheduled four Victoria performances. These will take place at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. with the following two at 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

Karen Kain, Frank Augustyn and Anne Ditchburn head the company of six prominent members of the National Ballet of Canada. The programs to be danced will vary slightly but will include traditional delights such as excerpts from Sleeping Beauty, Swan Lake and Don Quixote, and several original Ditchburn works. Ditchburn has become internationally noted for her imaginative choreography.

At The Belfry Theatre, the show is a salute and a farewell to the multi-talents of Victoria-born Dan Costain. Personal Belongings brings together most of those who have delighted Belfry audiences with such things as Piaf, and Puttin' On the Ritz — director Don Shipley, choreographer-dancer-singer Sheila McCarthy, with musical arranger Chris Donison and special guest Bill Hosie and, of course, the inimmitable Danny.

Personal Belongings will be seen in the last of its four performances Sunday at 8 p.m. This is also a special end-of-season gala for Belfry. Tickets are $10 each and include a reception and buffet following the performance.

A Movie about Real People

Rare honest films like Norma Rae breathe clean air into the garbage-clogged Hollywood motion-picture industry. Twentieth-Century Fox's new production is the most refreshing movie made this year and should prove a serious contender come Academy Award time. This well-directed and tightly paced film about a working woman's attempts to unionize the textile mill in her Alabama hometown has an excellent cast and will certainly win a best actress nomination for its star, Sally Field.

Veteran director Martin Ritt (The Long Hot Summer, Hud, The Great White Hope, Sounder) proves once again his ability to illuminate complex relationships between people. He brings out the best in his cast and their characterizations, without exception, are solid and believable.

The movie is an intelligent account of the real-life efforts of a southern U.S. textile mill employee to fight the power management has over its workers, which include her parents and almost everybody else in town. Norma is a widow struggling to bring up two children, when sweatshop conditions and the arrival of a New York labor organizer named Reuben (Ron Leibman, star of the television series Kaz) finally spur her to action. The film focuses on their attempts to overcome the workers' management-instilled fear of militancy. Another problem the two have to contend with is small town prejudice — Reuben is Jewish, Norma Rae has an illegitimate child and a reputation for sleeping around. During the struggle to set up the union local to improve conditions and wages they also have to overcome the jealousy of Norma's new husband (Beau Bridges) and his rage at finding himself cooking dinner and ironing shirts while they plan strategy.

On one level Norma Rae is a hard-hitting story about labor-management confrontation, on another level a delicate account of a woman's discovery of her own identity. Ritt expertly weaves together both themes, giving sexual stereotypes a good kick at the same time. Norma Rae finds out it's possible to feel several different kinds of love and for men and women to have a close friendship based on mutual respect. During the course of the film her confidence grows as she discovers her own potential.

Field, who has come a long way since her days as television's reigning cutiepie on shows like Gidget and The Flying Nun, is great as the vulnerable but scrappy Norma. Outstanding performances are given by Bridges, as the traditional southern boy who doesn't understand his wife's independence but supports her because he loves her; Leibman, as the union organizer who is a compelling combination of intellect, sensitivity and courage; and Pat Hingle and Barbara Baxley as her parents.

Counted Out on Sobs

The French film that won best foreign language picture at the academy awards this year is titled Get Out Your Handkerchiefs. Italian director Franco Zeffirelli's remake of the 1931 classic The Champ could also go by that title.

Zeffirelli's merciless pursuit of the maudlin is fortified by the talents of an eight-year old wonder named Ricky Schroder in the part that made Jackie Cooper famous.

Two Film Reviews By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

People aching for a good cry will like this blatant Hollywood soaper about a 37-year-old ex-boxer who decides to make one last attempt to regain his title and his son's respect. Others, including this reviewer, find the manipulative, unrealistic plot, the over-acting by Jon Voight and predictible cold-bloodedness of Faye Dunaway harder on the stomach than the tear ducts.

Zeffirelli (The Taming of the Shrew, Romeo and Juliet) mixes triumph and tragedy, laughter and pathos in large doses that assault the emotions. The photography is lush and warm-toned and there are plenty of closeups.

Voight goes straight from his Academy Award-winning performance in Coming Home to this sloppy portrayal of a punch-drunk boxer. He gives the role everything he's got, which is too much. In a movie like this, which already stretches credibility to the limit, subtlety is called for; but Voight goes overboard. He would have been much more successful had he toned down his self-indulgent sobbing and concentrated on a quieter interpretation of the role, which won Oscars the first time around for star Wallace Beery and scriptwriter Francis Marion.

Faye Dunaway, as the champ's ex-wife, plays the heavy. Although she abandoned her son and husband for a fashion career many years before, she catches sight of her little boy at a horse race and becomes determined to win his love. Now rich and powerful thanks to an understanding second husband, played benignly by Canadian actor Arthur Hill (The Andromeda Strain), she poses a real threat to the champ, or so he thinks. Dunaway plays her standard high-strung bitch role, but the usually glamorous Faye looks like a puffy dowager, either the fault of wardrobe or excess poundage. Jack Wardon does a good job with his small part as the champ's trainer.

The star of the movie without question is young Schroder, who steals every scene he's in. Schroder is already a veteran actor who made his first appearance in front of the cameras at age three months in a television commercial. A natural talent like his is very rare and special. Lets hope in future he gets better material to work with.

Turn Down Those Mikes!

Our annual spring competition music festival is of such proportion now, being one of the two or three really big ones in all Canada, that one reporter giving total time still cannot cover it in the depth it deserves.

Is it important that media attention should be paid to it? Of course it's important. One hears too much about young people being bored to the point of trying anything for relief, from drugs to death by suicide. The evidence is strong that education, at least at secondary level, has become undernourished to the point where it is no longer a vital or challenging force in many youngsters' lives.

The spotlight of media, the calumny of thought and tongues is always turned on kids in trouble. So when your community has 2,000 young people of all ages involved in mining a rich resource, surely they should be given equal attention.

At any rate, the Greater Victoria Music Festival has top priority with the Times entertainment desk for a couple of weeks every spring even though it is with regret that other events get missed.

Fortunately, this week I had the opportunity of catching up on one of these events — Victoria Operatic Society's production of the rock musical, Jesus Christ Superstar. Possibly for the first time in VOS history, an extra public performance was given after the end of the scheduled run. It took place at the McPherson mid-week before another full house, and my general and objective reaction is that I'm glad I didn't miss it.

★ ★ ★

Objectively speaking, it was an excellent presentation that ranks with the VOS's best and most professional productions. The personal viewpoint provides a dilemma, but let's leave that for the moment.

The concept of the last seven days in the life of Jesus of Nazareth, by composer Andrew Lloyd Webber and lyricist Tim Rice, is compelling, vivid, and in the final few minutes, touching.

To me, what was outstanding about the production was, to start with basics, the setting designed by Milt Wright — which worked beautifully all through and responded well to dramatic and mood-inducing lighting — and Diane Pettipas' costuming, ranging from satisfactory to excellent.

The almost manic treatment by director Doug Bamborough had the whole cast sustaining a consistently high level of energy and tempo throughout. One was at no time conscious of even a fractional let-down and always rivetted by the on-stage action. Every member of the large cast and chorus was totally with it, although the only truly memorable individual performances were provided by Kentish Steele as Judas Iscariot and Ron Webb as Herod.

Why did Glen Dias' portrayal of Jesus not shine through with a special magic of its own?

Mostly because Dias and the director interpreted this Jesus as expressing his passion and magnetism in the silent distant stare, or shouted, often high-pitched hysteria through his hand-held mike.

But also because the young actor with the normally pleasant light voice simply does not as yet have the vocal power or stage presence to make the personality of Jesus compelling.

Steele's Judas, on the other hand, was something of a tour de force, a strikingly effective performance by an actor gifted with physical and vocal strength and flexibility and the inner intensity that makes his presence constantly felt.

★ ★ ★

Of the other principals, Donna Heighes as Magdalene was at her best when singing I Don't Know How to Love Him, and in one of the few moments of poignancy after Jesus' dooming encounter with Herod, when she sang with Peter (Brian Andiel), Could We Start Again, Please.

The scene at Herod's court was quite brilliantly staged; in fact, it and the final few moments of the production will be a long time fading from my memory. The Herod scene owed much, as did other parts of the show, to Gini Lefevre's choreography and the dancers who carried it out. But Webb's singing of Herod's song and his performance as a whole were a bright light even in this excellent melange.

Another scene that was a credit to Bamborough's staging was the trial scene, with Pilate competently played by Peter Knysak.

Music director Chris Donison, flanked on his right by a five-piece rock band and on his left by a traditional orchestra led by violinist Sydney Humphreys, was clearly at ease with the situation and kept a firm command of rhythmic elements both in the pit and on stage, though he was frequently unable to control the balance of sound between the miked singers and the pit band. No fault of his, however.

The final passages, played by the orchestra with the stage empty and silent after Christ's death, were conducted with great sensitivity. The contrast, after all the noise and fury, was breath-taking and suddenly, profoundly reverent.

Then why, with so many positive feelings about this production do I have a dilemma? Because while I loved it, I also hated it.

The rock band, I'm sure, was highly accomplished. This was obvious when one could hear it with any distinction, which was now and then. But the grossness of the over-amplification must have destroyed at least 70 per cent of the production for the musically sensitive listener.

Part of the time one was submerged in such a blitz of noise (at that level it is an insult to term it music) that the entire performance became a roaring unintelligible blur. We were left with the rhythm, true, but surely the other elements deserve some recognition, not just occasionally but throughout.

There was little consideration given to the general nature of the VOS audiences, it seemed.

So that's why, in fairness to the production as well as to my own convictions, it is with two minds and two battered ears that this report on Jesus Christ Superstar is written.

S.A. Steps Up Training of Blacks for Guerrilla War

By CARYLE MURPHY

LENZ MILITARY BASE, South Africa (WP)— Josiah Moeng, stocky and straightforward, admits he gets a lot of flak from his friends about his job.

"Maybe they're jealous," the 30-year-old, eighth-grade graduate said. Besides an annual salary of at least $2,070, Moeng enjoys on-the-job training, promotion opportunities, free uniforms, medical and dental care, a 30-day annual vacation and a guaranteed pension when he retires at 60.

This is the kind of job most of South Africa's 18 million blacks can only dream about in a labor force where urban unemployment is estimated at between 16 and 22 percent.

But on further questioning, Moeng, who is a career soldier in the South African Army, says that his friends' criticism is also political.

"They say we are fools, they think we have joined a white army," Moeng said. "But that's not true, the Army was declared white at one time, but now it's multiracial."

The South African army is a long way from being multiracial, but an important and controversial change is quietly taking place. If the defence chiefs have their way, Moeng will be among thousands of black soldiers serving in all-black combatant units of South Africa's regular army in the next several years.

At the moment, his 21st Battalion of 515 volunteers is the only one in a career force of about 10,000 men. At least four other battalion-strength units are planned for the initial stages of the buildup of black units, according to military sources. They decline to disclose the specific targets for black participation in the defence force. It now stands at 1.3 per cent.

There are also six battalions of black volunteers serving in Namibia (Southwest Africa) in what is scheduled to become a separate army at the end of this year.

The elevation of blacks to full combatant status has been a policy gradually gaining acceptance since the early 1970s under the initative of Prime Minister Pieter W. Botha, who is also in his 13th year as minister of defence. Before that, black volunteers were relegated to non-combat jobs.

In recent months, however, there are signs the change in policy has become a priority as part of South Africa's increasing military preparedness — described by one local magazine as "digging in for the 'White Man's Last Stand.' "

'Dream Job' for South African blacks

A record military budget of $2.1 billion for this year, 25 per cent more than last year, and the highest white draft (15,000 last January) since the Second World War also reflect the military's intensified contingency planning. The new planning comes amid changes in neighboring Namibia and Rhodesia, where blacks make up a majority of the army, which threaten to denude South Africa of its last two guaranteed "buffers" between it and black-ruled Africa.

A rapidly escalating guerrilla war on the country's northeastern borders when the Rhodesian conflict is over is one of the military's main concerns.

In addition, the military also appears to be preparing for a continued major role in Namibia, given the conviction shared by both military and political leaders here that the United Nations' peace initiative, even if it is carried out, will not end the Soviet-backed guerrilla war there. The six black battalions in Namibia, which are now part of the South African Defence Force, are intended as a basis for a separate Namibian national army once that territory achieves independence.

By increasing black participation in their armed forces, the South Africans are taking a leaf from the defence handbook of their white neighbors in Rhodesia, where the security forces have been more than 80 per cent black for several years.

"The scarcity of job opportunities, especially in rural areas, leads increasing numbers of blacks to join the army. The unemployment problem, and laws that make it a crime to discourage participation in the defence force, make it difficult for black leaders who oppose the government's racially discriminatory policy of apartheid to speak out against a trend they deplore.

But they do. An alliance of political parties, chaired by Zulu Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, declared last July: "While blacks do not enjoy citizenship nor share political power, it (the alliance) will not urge the black community to participate in the military defence of the apartheid regime."

Their stand spotlights what one militay officer confessed was a "reasonably delicate problem" in recruitment of blacks into the defence forces: Under present government policy, black South Africans will eventually lose their citizenship in South Africa to become citizens of one of 10 black homelands destined to become "independent" black states.

Technically, therefore, South Africa's blacks will become "foreigners" in what remains of white-controlled South Africa.

"They expect us to be 'patriotic' foreigners," complained Buthelezi in a recent speech.

Most blacks, even those with little involvement in politics, have no intention of giving up their citizenship in South Africa. A random sounding of members of the 21st Battalion reveals a discrepancy between their expectations and those voiced by Edwards.

"We consider ourselves to be South African citizens," said Riebert Khoza, 25, during a cigarette break in a lesson on mortar firing. "And we expect in five years time to still be," he added as his classmates, all training to become black instructors for new black recruits, nodded in agreement.

Many of those questioned also added that they would fight what they called "infiltrators" and "terrorists" who try to come across the border, reflecting the thinking of their unit commander.

"Our enemies would like the world to believe that this is a black-white struggle here, but it's not . . ." said commander Hennie Swanepoel.

Black soldiers are trained at Lenz, 22 miles southwest of Johannesburg, where they can be seen clambering over obstacle courses and learning to march. Their instructors are white.

"We are training blacks for an unconventional war, a terrorist war," said Swanepoel as he took a visitor around the base. Already members of the 21st who are billeted at Lenz have done stints in Namibia, fighting guerrillas of the black nationalist movement, the Southwest Africa People's Organization.

According to the military spokesman about 20 per cent of South Africa's manpower in the Namibian "operational area" is black or colored. Black soldiers get the same rations, accommodation and "danger pay" as the whites, although their basic salary remains only 60 per cent of what their white counterparts earn. Military officials say the government is committed to closing that wage gap gradually.

Even greater participation in the armed forces is planned for coloreds and Indians. Compulsory two-year military service, like that for whites, is expected in five years' time, military spokesmen say.

The integration of these groups into the defence force, however, does not hold the same contradictions as that of the blacks, since the government hopes eventually to share a modicum of political power with colored and Indians at the national level. It does not envisage such a development with blacks.

Rebel Tells Of Torture

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — A revolutionary leader freed in a bid to end a growing revolt against the government of El Salvador, says he was tortured in prison. His rebel supporters took over the Venezuelan Embassy, the fourth building seized since the crisis began May 4.

Facundo Guardado, a Popular Revolutionary Bloc leader freed on Friday, told a news conference after his release that he was tortured with electic shocks during his 12-days in government jails.

"They stuffed a cloth in my mouth so I couldn't yell, put a plastic bag over my head, and then a security agent put his hands over my nose so I couldn't breathe and while I was suffocating they passed electric shocks through my body for one minute," he told reporters gathered at the University of El Salvador.

Guardado said he was arrested by seven policemen who hit him over the head causing four wounds.

"They took my clothes when I got to the jail and I stood nude for an hour in a room with four mirrors," he said. "They tried to get me to admit to accusations and charges that are totally false." He did not elaborate on the allegations.

"First they put a gun in my mouth and threatened to kill me. Then they tied electrodes to my wrists and other parts of my body and then began passing electric shocks and I fell to the floor."

Guardado, arrested April 29, was one of two rebel leaders freed Friday. The bloc, which last week occupied the Metropolitan Cathedral and French and Costa Rican Embassies, had demanded the release of five leaders it said were held by the military government. Police have denied the other three men were being held.

Under the Trudeau government youth unemployment is running well in excess of the national rate of unemployment; Trudeau tells university students that if they don't like it here, they can go to some other country.
A Progressive Conservative government will create an environment where young people's desire to work can be realized by making it profitable for the private sector to create jobs.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canada Post Office has apologized to the son of Frederick Philip Grove for putting a picture of another man on first-day covers honoring the Prairie novelist.

Per Holting, a spokesman for the post office here, said Thursday he was also advised by officials in Ottawa that the offending covers will be withdrawn from sale.

A. Leonard Grove of Toronto said earlier this week that he was "absolutely thunderstruck" by the mistake. The post office initially refused to admit it was wrong, but Holting said Grove was able to prove his point at a meeting with officials in Ottawa.

First-day covers are special envelops issued with new stamps and are of primary interest to collectors.

The covers in dispute also featured a likeness of Quebec poet Emile Nelligan.

Holting said there was no problem with two 17-cent stamps issued along with the covers. One is entitled Fruits of the Earth and the other Le Vaisseu d'Or — The Golden Ship.

Groundhogs Gnaw Top Secret Cables

OTTAWA (CP) — Subterranean saboteurs have invaded and almost destroyed a top-secret Canada-U.S. satellite project, and the Americans are not amused.

It seems that groundhogs at the nearby Shirley's Bay communications research centre have developed a sweet tooth for underground cables.

If the groundhogs' underground activities had gone undetected anything could have happened, says Hans Berger, manager of the centre's plant engineering services.

Last year the groundhogs had polished off all but the last two back-up cables that linked communications with "a multi-million dollar" satellite project shared by the two countries.

"If we hadn't been able to repair the damaged cables before the groundhogs got to the back-up ones, we could have certainly lost the satellite during communications manoeuvres," Berger said.

The satellite could have crashed to earth or become lost in space.

Berger would not elaborate on the satellite involved because it is a confidential project, but said the U.S. partners were upset on hearing that some Ottawa groundhogs love snacking on cables.

The Americans can rest easier, however. The centre has assigned their maintenance foreman to gun down the rodents with a .22-calibre rifle.

Satellite TV Antennas A Federal Experiment

EDMONTON (CP) — In a few weeks 100 isolated households throughout Canada will begin to receive CBC TV and/or radio via "satellite-to-home terminals."

Fifty homes will be equipped with individual satellite antennas 1.8 metres in diameter, while the other fifty will receive antennas 1.2 metres wide.

All the antennas will be individually linked to a signal converter and a regular television set for a two-year period, receiving signals from Canada's Anik B satellite.

The plan, approved by the federal government in 1974, will ultimately provide service to 900,000 Canadians who are presently inadequately served by electronic media.

A Saskatoon firm is completing the manufacture of the terminals at a cost to the federal communications department of $3,600 each. Once the home receivers go into mass production they are expected to cost less than $500.

David L. Garforth, CBC's manager of systems engineering, announced that the coverage plan should be completed by the fall of 1981 or spring of 1982.

McMillin — Horn

The Salvation Army Citadel, Victoria, B.C., was the scene of a lovely double ring ceremony at 4 p.m. on April 14, 1979, when Debbie Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Horn, became the bride of Mr. Ian Philip McMillin, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McMillin, all of Victoria, B.C. The saying of the marriage vows was solemnized by Lt. Col. W. Ratcliffe, assisted by Capt. J. Wilder. Throughout the ceremony organ music was played by Mrs. A. Leech.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was a vision of loveliness in her wedding gown of Chantilly lace and peau de sole. The lovely lace was featured on the stand-up collar, enhanced the fitted bodice and encircled the waistline, edged all around gown hem and long train at back. Lace appliques also adorned the gown's skirt; tiny pearls shimmered from the lace. Long slender sleeves had deep cuffs of lace, in a cape style over shoulders. A coronet of lace flowers held a fingertip length veil of illusion tulle edged in silk embroidery, and she carried a cascade of pink sweetheart roses, phalaenopsis orchids and baby's breath with a shower of loveknots of roses and baby's breath. For her jewelry, she chose to wear small cultured pearl earrings which matched those of her gown, and a gold watch, a gift of the groom. The bride was attended by her girl friend Miss Nellie Poskitt, as maid of honour, and Miss Nancy Tomlinson, cousin of the bride, and Miss Jody Horn, sister of the bride were bridesmaids. They were attired in identical floor length gowns with soft pink, mauve and white floral print on delicate blue nylon chiffon over silk with scoop necklines trimmed in white lace, and short puffed sleeves with matching lace trim. Ice blue ribbon sashes accented their waistlines. Flowergirls, Miss Christa McMillin and Miss Leah McMillin, nieces of the groom, looked ever so sweet in their matching floor length gowns which matched the other attendants except that the flowergirls' gowns had little stand-up collars trimmed in white lace and baby blue ribbon sashes accented their waistlines. The bride's attendants carried bouquets of pink carnations and white decorative mums with ribbon matching their gowns and wore matching flowers in their hair. All the bride's attendants wore silver crosses on fine chains, gifts of the bride, which accented their gowns. The mother of the bride was attired in a soft seafoam green floor length gown with sheer overlay stitched at bodice, flowing to floor length panels at back, bead and pearl trim throughout waistline and a wedding ring neckline, complemented by a corsage of Talisman roses, with deep green leaves and yellow ribbon. The mother of the groom chose a dusty rose floor length long sleeved gown, lace inset framing a V neckline, softly draped in front from an empire waistline to a full gored skirt and a beaded diamond trim at bodice, complemented by a corsage of red rosebuds with a green and white ribbon. The groom was handsomely attired in a navy blue tuxedo accented with a boutonniere of pink roses and baby's breath. His best man Mr. Mark Hallam, wore a navy blue tuxedo complemented by a boutonniere of pink carnation. The ushers Messrs. Graeme Weir and Richard Ko, wore matching navy blue tuxedos and their outfits were complemented by white pink-tipped carnation boutonnieres. While the bridal party signed the Register, the soloist Miss Delaine Holden of Burnaby, B.C. sang "What is Love" and "Climb Every Mountain."

Reception followed at the Oak Bay Beach hotel, which was beautifully decorated with white bells, candles and carnations completing the table settings. Large baskets of flowers complemented the bridal table which was centred with the wedding cake decorated by the bride's mother. White candles added a warm glow to the setting. The newlyweds were piped in by Mr. Robbie Cross, who treated the guests with two other solo selections on the bagpipes during the evening. Mr. Fraser McAlpine, uncle of the bride, was master of ceremonies for the evening. He introduced the toastmaster, Mr. Ernest Bent Jr., who proposed a toast to the bride. Col. Wm. Ross of White Rock, B.C. said the blessing before a full course dinner was served, and the pianist, Mr. Dan Ellis, played softly in the background. Miss Delaine Holden favoured the guests with her beautiful voice once again by singing "You Light Up My Life" as a special request of the bride. Miss Holden also sang several other selections throughout the evening.

Before leaving the reception, the bride threw her bouquet which was caught by Miss Patricia Hallam and Mr. David Pollard skilfully caught the garter. Mr. and Mrs. McMillin left via air for their honeymoon trip to California. They wish to say a special thanks to Miss Janet McAlpine and Miss Carol McAlpine, cousins of the bride, for looking after the signing of the Guest Book. Also to Mr. Wm. Corbett for transporting of the flowers and also to thank their many friends and relatives who helped and shared in this memorable day.

For her going away outfit, the bride chose a short sleeved V-neck powder blue dress with a fitted bodice and all around knife pleated skirt. She carried a white coat, had white accessories and a white phalaenopsis orchid corsage. The newlyweds are making their home in Victoria.

Crest Slides by Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — The worst appears to be over for residents of the flooded Red River Valley.

The Red dropped several centimetres Friday at Winnipeg, indicating the flood crest reached this city Thursday, a day earlier than expected at about 30 centimetres below the predicted levels.

Winnipeg, protected by a large floodway that diverts the flood water around the city, is the last major community along the river before it disperses into Lake Winnipeg.

All along the valley the river is dropping, signalling the end to the worst flood to sweep the valley in almost 30 years.

"The worst is definitely over," said a spokesman.

"In the next week to 10 days all people in the flood area should be able to return home."

Meanwhile, the Manitoba legislature put all other business aside Friday to pass a special bill allocating $5 million to cover initial costs in cleaning up the mess.

Premier Sterling Lyon said funds were necessary to cover "flood control and emergency expenditures."

"At the present time, there are no firm estimates of the total flood costs," Lyon told the legislature as people were moving back into their homes in Emerson and Letellier, the first two towns along the Red as it enters Manitoba from North Dakota.

"It is unlikely that any (firm damage estimates) will be available until the water recedes."

Lyon said the government already has incurred fairly large costs in fighting the flood which forced the evacuation of an estimated 7,000 residents in the valley.

"As soon as the disaster assistance board compensation limits are set, then the claims can be processed."

An EMO spokesman said some of the 600 Canadian forces personnel stationed at towns along the valley to maintain dikes and provide security, will start withdrawing by Sunday.

1,200 Cuff Off by Ont. River

DUBREUILVILLE, Ont. (CP) — About 1,200 residents of this community are isolated as efforts continue to keep the flooding Magpie River at bay.

Further west, the provincial police closed Highway 17, the Trans-Canada Highway, after the White River flooded the roadway Friday about one kilometre west of the community named after the river.

Police were stopping all westbound through traffic in Wawa, although it was still possible to enter White River.

The Magpie River has already destroyed a wooden bridge leading to Dubreuilville, about 200 kilometres northwest of Sault Ste. Marie. Community residents dug a ditch Thursday to try to keep flood waters from destroying a second bridge.

Water continued rising and many residents were unable to go to work or attend school Friday.

In White River, Ken Collver, clerk of the town of 1,100, said the downtown area was under about 25 centimetres of water.

He said the river is being monitored and an evacuation plan has been prepared. About 25 per cent of the residents are affected by the flooding.

The river is rising by about one centimetre an hour and an evacuation may be necessary if the situation continues to worsen.

The Hudson's Bay Co. store and the Liquor Control Board of Ontario outlet were forced to close and the flood threatened other businesses.

The water level is slightly lower than dikes built to protect homes on the lakeshore but flooding is possible if winds are strong.

"The diking is in place and that's as much as we can do," said Morley Daiter, city director of planning.

X-Rays, Linked to Mongolism

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A form of abdominal x-rays given to a girl when she is young can double the risk of her having a mentally-retarded baby 10 years later, a pediatrics professor at the University of Western Ontario says.

The incidence of Down's syndrome, or mongolism, may be doubled in mother's who had several abdominal fluoroscopic x-rays 10 or more years ago, Dr. Howard Valentine told a genetics conference Friday.

Doctors have been concerned for some time, he said, that x-rays taken during the first three months of pregnancy could damage the early development of the fetus. But abdominal fluoroscope x-rays — in effect, a live x-ray movie — could affect an ovum many years before its development.

The doctor said all women as they get older face increased risks of having fetal abnormalities. Down's syndrome occurs in about one of 1,600 babies born to women under 30. By the time the mother is 40, the likelihood has reached about one in 100.

Valentine said evidence is still slim, but indications point to a higher rate of Down's syndrome among Roman Catholics who practice the rhythm method of birth control. Reports from Holland have suggested the increased incidence, he said.

The problem could be attributed to the the female ovum aging before its fertilization, he said. Infrequent intercourse may increase the risk of abnormalities in the critical body-building chromosomes at the molecular level.

Between 40 and 60 per cent of all rejected conceptions show existing chromosome abnormalities, Valentine told the conference.

"Be thankful the uterus knows best," he said of the 15 per cent of pregnancies that end in miscarriage. The earlier the pregnancy ends, the greater the likelihood of a chromosome abnormality, he said.

Cadillacs Recalled

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — More than 12,000 Cadillacs have been recalled in Canada to fix sticky accelerator pedals.

In the U.S., where about 360,000 of the 1977 and 1978 models are being recalled, sticky pedals have been blamed for 124 accidents, causing three deaths and 46 injuries.

The Red dropped several centimetres Friday at Winnipeg, indicating the flood crest reached this city Thursday, a day earlier than expected at about 30 centimetres below the predicted levels.

Winnipeg, protected by a large floodway that diverts the flood water around the city, is the last major community along the river before it disperses into Lake Winnipeg.

All along the valley the river is dropping, signalling the end to the worst flood to sweep the valley in almost 30 years.

"The worst is definitely over," said a spokesman.

"In the next week to 10 days all people in the flood area should be able to return home."

Meanwhile, the Manitoba legislature put all other business aside Friday to pass a special bill allocating $5 million to cover initial costs in cleaning up the mess.

Premier Sterling Lyon said funds were necessary to cover "flood control and emergency expenditures."

"At the present time, there are no firm estimates of the total flood costs," Lyon told the legislature as people were moving back into their homes in Emerson and Letellier, the first two towns along the Red as it enters Manitoba from North Dakota.

"It is unlikely that any (firm damage estimates) will be available until the water recedes."

Lyon said the government already has incurred fairly large costs in fighting the flood which forced the evacuation of an estimated 7,000 residents in the valley.

"As soon as the disaster assistance board compensation limits are set, then the claims can be processed."

An EMO spokesman said some of the 600 Canadian forces personnel stationed at towns along the valley to maintain dikes and provide security, will start withdrawing by Sunday.

1,200 Cuff Off by Ont. River

DUBREUILVILLE, Ont. (CP) — About 1,200 residents of this community are isolated as efforts continue to keep the flooding Magpie River at bay.

Further west, the provincial police closed Highway 17, the Trans-Canada Highway, after the White River flooded the roadway Friday about one kilometre west of the community named after the river.

Police were stopping all westbound through traffic in Wawa, although it was still possible to enter White River.

The Magpie River has already destroyed a wooden bridge leading to Dubreuilville, about 200 kilometres northwest of Sault Ste. Marie. Community residents dug a ditch Thursday to try to keep flood waters from destroying a second bridge.

Water continued rising and many residents were unable to go to work or attend school Friday.

In White River, Ken Collver, clerk of the town of 1,100, said the downtown area was under about 25 centimetres of water.

He said the river is being monitored and an evacuation plan has been prepared. About 25 per cent of the residents are affected by the flooding.

The river is rising by about one centimetre an hour and an evacuation may be necessary if the situation continues to worsen.

The Hudson's Bay Co. store and the Liquor Control Board of Ontario outlet were forced to close and the flood threatened other businesses.

In North Bay, the level of Lake Nipissing dropped slightly but concern continues as the weather forecast called for rain.

The water level is slightly lower than dikes built to protect homes on the lakeshore but flooding is possible if winds are strong.

"The diking is in place and that's as much as we can do," said Morley Daiter, city director of planning.

Wash/Wear Makes It Easy family

Wash-and-wear hair styles are starting to rival drip-and-dry clothing in popularity.

Raymond Hennessy of Vancouver, owner of a 20-salon chain in B.C. and Alberta, says wash-and-wear styles are popular because they are easy to manage and allow women more individuality.

"The hair is pre-cut, permanented and precisely recut," he says. "After that it is dried au naturelle or under a heat lamp . . . perhaps a light touch-up with a curling iron but little or no setting is required."

George Coburn of Victoria, assistant manager of a salon here, says wash-and-wear is nothing really new to the hair scene. It's a modification of the Afro look which Coburn says first hit the fashion scene about 12 years ago. Instead of having curls tight to the head the hair is longer and the curls looser.

Hennessy and Coburn say women are resisting being look-alikes. They have definite ideas of the effect they want their hair stylist to create for them.

"Women are delighted about the new trend toward individuality," Hennessy says. "Everyone has seen enough Farrah Fawcett-Majors look-alikes. It's wrong to stereotype women after what is popularized on television. A hair style should be an extension of your own personality."

Coburn, who has been a hairdresser here for 19 years, says Victoria women, while sensitive to style, are not going to extremes.

"The wash-and-wear perms are not as wild as in a big city. You have to be eccentric to wear the extreme styles."

Coburn said the finger wave that had its original heyday many years ago is coming back, as well as French braids, ordinary braiding and victory rolls.

Hennessy said victory rolls and the pillbox styles of the 1940s are becoming the high-fashion choice for evenings while straight or softly curled styles are daytime favorites.

Hennessy said his assistant director, Richard Ego, recently attended an international teach-in in London. There were high-fashion red and blonde colorings, but there were many examples of more natural shades, modified to suit the new mood.

He and Coburn warn that conditioning is an important part of hair grooming even though the styles are now more natural and carefree. They advise the use of gentle products and professional conditioners after every shampoo. An occasional reconstructive treatment to help repair structural damage to the hair from heat and styling aids should be kept in mind.

Fashion Role For London?

By ROBERT TRAUTMAN

LONDON (Reuter) — Haute couture is alive and well and flourishing, not only in Paris and Milan but in London, too.

"Swinging London" of the 1960s, with its mini-skirt and trendy Carnaby Street, once ruled the fashion world. It faded when nothing new followed the mini.

London's couturiers, however, are staging a major renaissance and their leaders — among them Bill Gibb, Jean Muir, Zandra Rhodes and John Bates — must be ranked with the finest in the salons of France and Italy.

This renaissance can be measured by the success of the city's recent fashion shows of autumn-winter ready-to-wear, which drew 26,000 buyers from around the world. The figure is up by more than 50 per cent from four years ago.

The buyers from trendy boutiques and big department stores of America and Europe still look to Paris first, but there is agreement that London is once again a major fashion force.

In the heady sixties, Mary Quant's creation of the mini — the doll's dress worn by a generation of girls — dazzled men and women alike. It helped carry London to the forefront of the fashion world. But the success was short-lived.

One reason was that London fashion did not have the necessary creative talent for a follow-up.

Another was that it lacked money for promotion. This was linked to the fact that fashion, and the export of ready-to-wear clothing it could generate, was not yet seen as important to Britain's economy and was not treated seriously.

London's design schools soon recognized this money and talent deficiency, and moved quickly to correct it.

Led by the Royal College of Art and the London College of Fashion, course offerings were strengthened.

First Assess Sunlight

By A. J. HAND

The idea of collecting free energy from the sun is generating a lot of enthusiasm. This is especially true when the cost of home heating fuel triples in eight years as it has in my area.

Do not, however, let solar enthusiasm carry you away. Before you put good money into any solar system, do some checking. Make sure the system will be able to perform well enough to pay you back.

One basic error you can make in assessing your solar potential is to overestimate solar exposure. You go outdoors on a bright summer day. The sun is high in the sky and shines on your roof (the place you plan to locate your collectors) from nine in the morning to five in the afternoon. That's eight solid hours of good solar exposure. With so much sun you are convinced a solar system is for you.

There's just one problem: Summer is no time to evaluate solar exposure. It's during the winter that you need to collect the most heat. And during the winter the sun is much lower in the sky than in summer. So what? Well, the lower the sun, the greater the chance it will be blocked by trees, hills or neighboring buildings.

For that reason, the ideal time to evaluate your solar exposure is during late December, when the sun is at its lowest. If the sun clears obstructions during December you can be sure it will clear them for the rest of the year.

Of course you don't have to determine your solar exposure by actual physical observation. You can consult tables printed in reference books such as the ASHRAE Handbook of Fundamentals or Architectural Graphic Standards (available at most good libraries).

But actual empirical observation has certain advantages: It is easier than figuring angles; it is 100 per cent accurate and it lets you assess certain variables.

For example, charts and tables may tell you the sun will dip behind that big tree in your yard, but they will not tell you how much sun will filter through the tree when its leaves have dropped for the winter.

Some trees such, as hickories, walnuts and butternuts, open up a great deal during the winter. Others such as oaks and beeches don't open up at all because their dried brown leaves don't fall until spring. Only direct observation of your situation can give you a true appraisal.

Direct observation can also tell you where you can prune your trees to let the sun shine through, or where on your roof you should locate your collectors for maximum exposure to the sun.

So, if you are considering going solar, put a note on your calendar to check your exposure some sunny day in late December.

Check to see if the sun strikes your proposed collector site, paying special attention to the hours between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Those are the most important hours of collection.

Adoption Becomes Trickier After Children 6 Months Old

HAMILTON (CP) — Children adopted after the age of six months run a higher risk of later psychiatric disturbance, a city psychiatrist says.

Dr. David C. Taylor, a staff psychiatrist at the Chedoke Child and Family Centre, said that among non-adopted children, one in 10 will show severe behavior disturbances like stealing or fire-setting.

Among those adopted before six months, the rate is one in four, Taylor said. But among those adopted after six months, the rate is one in two.

He said that under the present adoption system, a child is placed with a couple after the Children's Aid Society investigates the home and the society provides supervision of the placement for six months.

When the final adoption order is signed, usually after the six months, the adopting couple are legal parents and no further supervision is required.

He said that in cases where the adopting parents have no experience in raising a normal child and are even less prepared to deal with youngsters whose past experiences involved chaotic family backgrounds, psychiatric assessments should be made.

"We don't know enough about this, but there's a lot we can learn by studying good and bad adoptions."

Taylor said there should also be a study of the adoption outcomes when one group takes part in a therapeutic parenting program and a similar group does not.

He said the entire adoption scene has changed with fewer new-born babies available and with more of the children up for adoption having experienced abuse, neglect and upheaval.

"The mechanisms of adoption are not geared for the needs of the child reared in deprivation, humiliation and abuse."

Kitten Best Mate for Apartment Dweller

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: We live in an apartment, adequately sized, but we both work. I want to give my husband a kitten or puppy (we both want it, of course) as a present and wonder which is better for us. I think he would like jogging with a dog during the weekends, but I also wonder if a cat wouldn't be better during the week? We will, of course, take proper care of whatever we decide on. — C.N.

DEAR C.N.: On the average, under your described conditions, a kitten is the better choice since it is more independent. It can, if necessary, tolerate those long, lonesome (working) days a little better. Housebreaking and training aspects can also be considerably simpler. Many puppies can and do become more than satisfactory apartment pets, but when both of you are working, the average would favor the feline.

In either case, the first few weeks are most vital for training purposes. So, if possible, more time should somehow be spent with that new pet during this critical period.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Chipper, my canary seems in perfect health, I'm only writing because I read this creepy letter about worms in dogs. My Chipper wouldn't have anything like that, would he? He's been a healthy bird since I got him three years ago. But you never know! — E.K.

DEAR E.K.: No, you never do know for sure; not unless you have your veterinarian check Chipper out for parasites. Odds are excellent this isn't necessary, however, under the circumstances. While it's true, intestinal parasites can affect canaries, this problem would be most common in aviaries and, in particular, in young birds.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our cocker spaniel, Happy Hour, has been a dear — till now. She's begun tracking an unbelievable amount of mud into the house, from somewhere. Practically speaking, is there a cure for her (ours really) muddy problem? — T.Y.

DEAR T.Y.: Making Happy "mudless" can best be accomplished in stages. First, have her feet trimmed to remove that considerable amount of hair from between toes, and pads, and that adjacent hair on the leg. Second, train her to sit on a mat when first entering the house so you can wipe her "shoes" clean.

'Shame' Won't Cure Her

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Can you imagine how shocked we are to learn that our 19-year-old daughter who is at college has an infection of the Fallopian tubes? We are desperately ashamed of this, but our major concern is how this will affect her when and if she is married and decides to have children. Are there any "super-specialists" to whom we should take her? — Mrs. A. H. R.

DEAR MRS. R.:

The Fallopian tubes are structures that are located on either side of the uterus: These narrow tubes are about four or five inches long. Their purpose is to receive the egg, or ovum, that is made in the ovary. Through this tube the egg passes into the uterus, whether it is fertilized by a male sperm or not.

An infection of the Fallopian tube is known as "salpingitis," or "pelvic inflammatory disease." The infection almost always is due to a germ that is transmitted during intercourse.

The germ, neisseria gonorrhoeae, is one of the most common causes for salpingitis. there are other germs which are not thought of as venereal in character that can also be responsible. The vaginal discharge can readily be cultured and studied in order to find the exact germ that is causing the infection.

"Shock" and "shame" are no contribution to yourselves or to your daughter. Rather, active pursuit of the problem is imperative if she is to be given the maximum chance of having the process controlled and cured.

How this will affect her later life depends entirely on how early vigorous treatment is established. The antibiotics, especially penicillin, are remarkably effective if the condition is intensively treated. The extent of the disease, the presence of complications and scar tissue formation determine if the Fallopian tubes will still be open and functional.

Unfortunately, your daughter's problem is one that severely affects hundreds of thousands of young women who are sexually active and who do not seek immediate help for their problem.

Veneral disease rages through the post-adolescent and early adult lives of so many young people that one must wonder where we have failed in our educational programs. To give you some idea of the extent of this devastating problem, here are the staggering figures of a recent report.

One young woman infected with gonorrhea was found to have infected, directly and indirectly, over 200 men over a period of four years. The board of health in three different cities were finally able to track down the young prostitute who was spreading the devastation among so many young, vital people.

Venereal disease is in epidemic form. It can be controlled only by education and early treatment.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for applauding the teacher who refuses to allow her students to pass out party invitations unless the entire class is invited. (You wisely said, "The pain of having been left out will remain with those few uninvited children long after the fun has been forgotten by those who attended.") How true!

That letter revived some painful memories for me. I once had a gym teacher who made a practice of appointing two "captains" — her pets, who in turn would choose up teams. Of course, the most popular kids and the best athletes were always chosen first. Being neither popular nor a good athlete, I was always the last to be chosen. I was so humiliated I wanted to die. No wonder I grew up with an feriority complex, convinced that I was unwanted, hopelessly inept and a born loser.

Please print this, Abby, in case some gym teachers are still using this cruel system.

PAINFUL MEMORIES

DEAR PAINFUL: Consider it done. Your letter jarred some painful memories of my own school days. Gym teachers, are you listening?

DEAR ABBY: I have a 14-month-old nephew whose feet turn outward when he walks. So severely, in fact, that the child walks sideways. My sister knows it and keeps talking about asking her pediatrician to put the child in corrective shoes. But that's as far as it goes.

I've mentioned this to her several times. I don't want to bring it up again for fear she'll think I'm putting my nose where it doesn't belong.

Please don't say that if my sister wants her child to grow up with turned-out feet, it's her business, because it isn't my sister who will have to stumble through life on deformed feet. I see her pediatrician quite often. Would it be unethical of me to say something to him about it? CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: You may not have all the facts, but on the chance that your sister is either unable or unwilling to deal with this problem, mention it to the doctor.

DEAR ABBY: Re HAIRLESS, who bemoans the lack of hair on his chest arms and legs.

My husband also was hairless in those areas — and that's what attracted me to him in the first place. Men who deliberately expose their hairy chests by unbottoning their shirts down to their navels turn me off.

Also, consider the statue of Michelangelo's David, the epitome of male magnificence. He didn't have a hair on his beautiful body!

OFF MY CHEST

DEAR OFF: Maybe so. But in some cultures hairy-males are though to be extremely masculine and virile. And here's a hair-raising fact: At one time in Spain, moustached women were considered rare beauties!

Mom Gets Credit

NEW YORK (AP) — Amy Alcott, one of the players on the women's professional golf circuit, credits much of her success to her mother. "I was lucky, I didn't have a Little League Mom," Amy said. "She used to tell me she didn't care if I shot 66 or 88, as long as I was having fun. I've seen a lot of kids ruined by pushy mothers."

Unveiled at a Paris showing, the gown of white moire silk features exaggerated shoulders and a crown-like hat.

Canadians rank as the world's second highest energy users per capita. Our relatively cold climate accounts for a large amount of our energy consumption.

At the moment, about 70 per cent of Canada's electricity is generated by water power. However, most available hydro sites are already dammed, and many people believe that our reserves of fossil fuels cannot be depended upon in the long run.

As we search for new ways to meet our future energy needs, nuclear power is being given more and more public attention. And the public is raising many questions concerning the use of nuclear energy. What is radioactivity? What is radiation? What are the biological effects of radiation?

Questions About Nuclear Energy is a 29-page booklet that provides the reader with answers to the most commonly-asked nuclear questions. You can receive a free copy of this publication by writing to the Canadian Nuclear Association, 65 Queen Street West, Suite 1120, Toronto, Ontario, M5H 2M5. Single copies only, please.

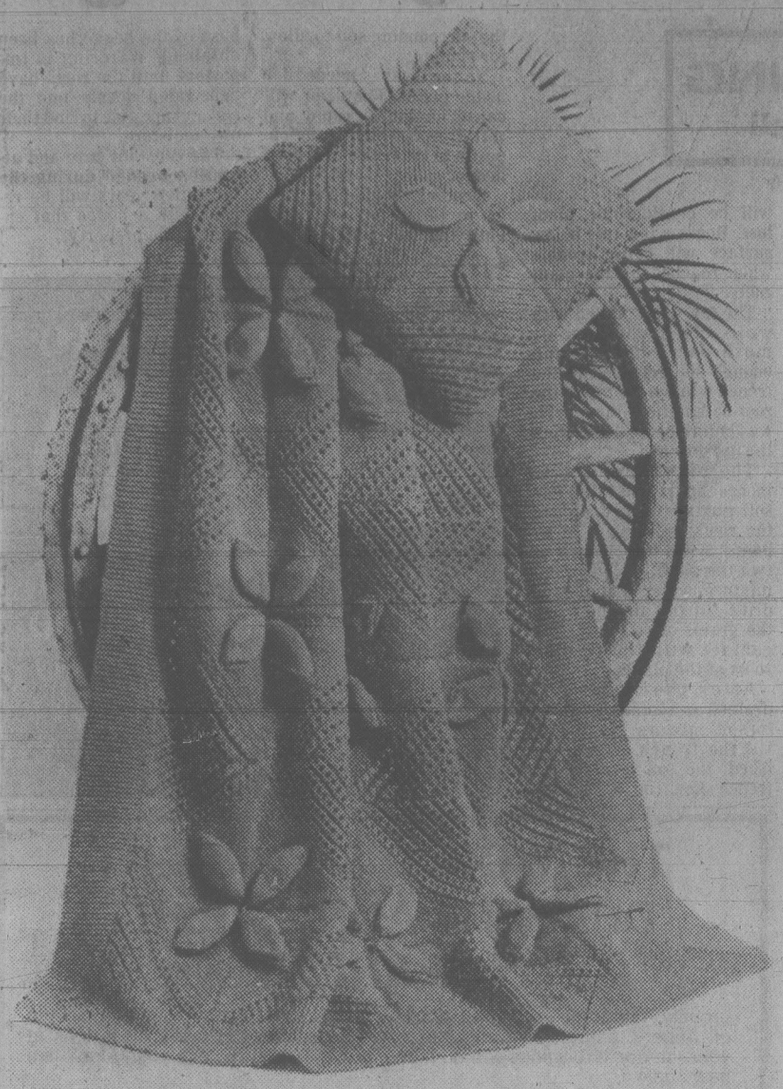
Cool Colors and Simplicity Too.

KNIT & CHAT



What could be cosier than this attractive afghan?

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Just the other day I saw a very good idea for summer knitting which could be picked up or dropped at a moment's notice.

This bedspread was knit in plain strips of garter stitch, but it was the clever arrangement of the colors that attracted my eye plus the over-all simplicity of the idea.

The colors began at one end with a deep green which gradually became lighter with each strip, blending into a blue sequence of shades, then into purples, rosy-reds and finally warm browns.

I took careful note of the number of stitches. The strips were 16 inches wide and worked at a tension of four stitches to the inch in width, so that the actual strip were exactly four inches wide.

For the bedspread I described above, the strips were across the bed. Another one I saw, featured lengthwise strips. The choice can be left to you and measurements you want. Incidentally, this bedspread would act as a very warm blanket.

I would suggest a fairly heavyweight knitting worsted yarn to obtain the tension of four stitches to the inch. With garter-stitch, this would need about a No. 3 knitting needle.

In order to have a neat edge with which to crochet the strip together, slip the first stitch of every row purlwise, then take the yarn to the back of the work and knit the entire row. You'll find this gives you a very neat chain edge, making it simple to crochet the strips together.

It is important that there are the same number or rows or ridges to the garter stitch in every strip as this will affect the joining. I suggest you use one color only for joining. On the colorful bedspread it was a black, while on the other, which was in warm brown tones, a very dark chocolate brown was chosen.

With a large crochet hook, take one-half of the chain stitch from each side of two strips and work a single crochet. It's a neat and easy way of joining and forms a chain stitch as you are working.

Knitted squares for this attractive afghan and cushion top made with a knitting worsted weight of wool and No. 7 needles. Why not make one a bed size and let it double up as a blanket? Nothing could be warmer or more cosy on a winter's night.

To order leaflet No. 1073, send 75 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, a long one if possible. if you do not have a stamp or envelope please enclose an extra 25 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to May E. MacLean, Knit and chat, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Que.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for fast service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. My illustrated catalogue of Gift and Bazaar Items can be obtained for 25 cents and all back pattern numbers are available at 75 cents each. Please enclosed a stamped envelope or an extra 25 cents.

Think Carefully Before Planting Hedge

jack beastall

A hedge is considered to be a permanent planting and should receive careful thought as to the type of plant material, its proportions in relation to the present layout and size of garden and the main purpose it is to serve.

Hedges are used to mark boundary lines of a property, to prevent access by persons or animals, as sound barriers and fume filters, as wind-breaks, and to provide privacy. Each purpose determines the plants most suitable and their placement and spacing.

A formal hedge is built from plants which will tolerate severe pruning to maintain a given shape.

An informal hedge may be any suitable flowering shrubs or broad-leaved evergreens, the former pruned in spring or after flowering according to the flowering time, the latter pruned slightly to control spread over adjacent plantings.

The selected plants should have foliage in proportion to the size of the property. The large foliage of laurel has an overpowering effect when used to mark a single boundary, or completely enclose, a 60-by-120-foot standard city lot.

When it is decided that a hedge is necessary the gardener asks for fast-growing plants; such a hedge cannot be considered as permanent.

Fast growth means soft growth easily damaged in winter cold spells. Locally this has resulted in the hedge being completely killed, or severely damaged, about once in ten years. Removal and replacement can amount to five times the cost of the original fast growing plants.

Another point to be remembered is that fast growth is only possible when plants have a root system that will spread far and wide to obtain the needed nutrients. Lawns and plantings near the hedge will soon be damaged by the invading roots and depletion of soil nutrients. Adding fertilizer to offset this effect only causes the hedge to grow faster.

A permanent hedge is built up inch by inch like a brick wall until the required height is reached. According to the plants used for the hedge this will take from five to ten years.

If an immediate boundary marker is necessary the answer is a wooden or wire fence that can be erected over a weekend.

The hedge can then be planted inside the fence, properly pruned and trained, and will form the desired barrier by the time the bases of the fence posts are beginning to show signs of rotting.

A common mistake made by property owners is to plant a hedge right on the property line. A privet hedge, for example, four or five feet in height, should be three feet wide at the base, tapering to one foot at the top. Other types of hedge plants may need to be four or five feet wide at the base.

When the plants are set exactly on the property line, the established privet hedge will be 18 inches beyond the line; other plants may be 30 inches beyond. Municipal authorities and neighbors have the right to remove growth back to the property line at any time.

This can totally disfigure the hedge and make replacement necessary at the required distance from the line, causing expense that could have been avoided, and loss of years of growth.

The fact that the present owners of adjoining property do not object to your hedge invading their lot is no indication that future purchasers of their property will tolerate the intrusion.

Few plant nurseries today specialize in producing properly prepared hedge plants. The majority sell unpruned "whips" some two feet high and leave the purchaser to make these into a hedge.

Those specializing in hedges grow the plants for three to four years before offering them for sale. These plants are regularly pruned and will be about 12 to 18 inches in height, according to type, with a spread of about 14 inches at ground level.

The standard distance between plants for a hedge is 18 inches, and the purchase of prepared plants keeps them low until the branches interlace at ground level. After that, about six inches of height is permitted each year and pruning continued to encourage the plants to spread sideways.

Certain conifers make excellent evergreen hedges in this climate, being perfectly hardy to any severe winter experienced to date.

Conifers are trees, and the types used for hedges are those which tolerate hard pruning. Not all conifers can be pruned for hedge work.

The central growing tip of a conifer is not touched until the required height of the hedge has been reached, then it is removed.

The branches are trimmed to build the sloping sides to the hedge and maintain the desired width. Growths out of line are cut back. Longitudinal branches, those between plants, are allowed to interlace and form a tight mass to soil level which cannot be penetrated by humans or animals.

The preparation of the soil and the planting of the material is important. When done with care and forethought a trouble-free hedge is assured.

After a planting line has been set the correct distance inside the property line, the width of a trench needed to take the plant roots is staked out.

If water tends to lie in the area over winter, drainage must be installed or there will be considerable plant loss. Rocks a few feet below surface will cause trouble when reached by the plant roots.

The top soil is mixed with well-rotted compost or mushroom compost, and enough soil replaced in the trench to have the top of the root-ball at the same level it was before being lifted from the nursery bed.

The plants are set 18 inches apart and the topsoil mixture placed around the roots, working it in by hand. When the trench is two-thirds filled with soil mixture, water is applied to drive out the air and bring the grains of soil into close contact with the feeding roots of the plants.

After the water has drained away, the rest of the topsoil mixture is used to fill the trench. When finished, the soil level in the trench should be higher than the surrounding soil to allow for sinking.

No fertilizer is needed for hedge plants. Fertilizer will cause unnatural rapid and soft growth which is the opposite to the needs of a good hedge.

Weeding should be attended to throughout the year until the full width of the base of the hedge has been obtained. Watering is important until the roots have penetrated deeply into the soil and are able to find their own moisture.

The constant care and attention needed during the formative years will be repaid with a hedge that enhances the property.

Work for Week

Tubs and planters for balcony, sundeck or patio can now be filled with flowering annuals for summer, or with one tomato or squash plant (by end of month) for ornament and food. Give a little shelter from wind until plants are established.

Provide a climbing frame for peas of the edible pod type which may go to five feet even though listed as dwarf.

Berry fruits need mulching on surface with rough compost. Water before mulching if rain has not penetrated soil to root area.

Rhododendrons including azaleas can do with light feed of acid-type fertilizer as flowering nears end. Scatter at root area; water gently to dissolve, then mulch with one-inch layer wet peatmoss. Never dig around the root area of these plants.

Leaves of daffodils and other narcissi must be kept green until end of May to improve bulbs for next year. Water if necessary. Nip off tulip blooms as flowers fade; treat as for narcissi.

Remember to raise cutting blades on mowers to two inches as warmer weather develops. This allows shade for root area and sturdier growth, especially needed for new lawns.

Sidney Dancer Takes 1st

Victorians Tracy Curtis and Janice Hope, both of whom did well in the Victoria Festival, were first runners-up in the under 13 and under 11 classes respectively.

All three girls now have qualified to enter the Canadian championships to be held in July in Antigonish, N.S.

Farmers' Body Launches Suit

REGINA (CP) — The National Farmers Union began a legal action against Canada's two major railways Friday, citing inadequate service to Canadian farmers, a union official says.

Lloyd Stanhope of Moosomin, Sask., said the union had previously announced it planned to file the statement of claim as a class action. He said the suit was filed in Federal Court in Toronto by the organization's lawyers and seeks $690 million in damages:

"The . . . claim is that the railways have failed to supply adequate locomotives and rolling stock to move the required quantities of grain."

$1,000-a-Plate Dinner Fattens Fund

CALGARY (CP) — The tenderloin, covered with brandy sauce and stuffed with goose liver, might soon be forgotten. But organizers of the Calgary and District Foundation's "million-dollar" dinner felt assured Thursday night that the generosity of Calgarians would long be remembered.

As more than 700 well-fed residents of this booming city digested their $1,000-a-plate dinner, foundation vice-president Hayden Smith announced the value of the charitable organization's capital account had jumped to slightly more than $1.8 million.

Last June, it stood at $190,000, prompting Smith to say last week: "There are too many people in this community with short arms and deep pockets."

President Harry Cohen said Thursday the foundation "had gone nowhere in the 23 years" of its existence.

By comparison, the Vancouver Foundation has amassed $55 million, while the Winnipeg organization has tucked away $15 million.

Earnings from the five-course dinner were estimated at $550,000 — all of it going into the capital account, since dinner costs were completely sponsored.

About 45 persons and corporate sponsors paid the full, tax-deductible $1,000 for the meal, while another 150 couples took advantage of the bargain rate of $1,500 a pair. Forty-six eight-place tables went for $5,000 each.

More than 60 waiters and waitresses attended to Calgary's elite as they dined on caviar-topped hors-d'oeuvres, truffle soup, Alberta beef and a desert that combined strawberries, custard, brandy and cream.

Gordie Tapp, a former regular on the Tommy Hunter Show and a performer and writer for television's Hee Haw series, kept them entertained between courses with a string of ethnic jokes.

Singer Norma Locke and the Mart Kenney orchestra provided the music.

The foundation is a registered charity, incorporated in 1955 with a broad mandate "to assist, encourage and promote the well-being of mankind," and particularly the residents of the Calgary area.

The bulk of its money has come from will bequests, private and corporate donations and memorial funds. Its dismal growth led organizers to stage the high-profile dinner.

"Calgary, of all the foundations in North America, had the poorest track record of any," said vice-president Jim Fowler. "When you consider the affluence of this city, this is disgraceful."

Officials also blamed the slow growth on poor marketing. Fowler called the foundation "the best-kept secret in town."

Calgary oilman Carl Nickel was instrumental in the foundation's recent spurt of growth. Nickel, president of Conventures Ltd., turned over $800,000 worth of Conventures shares on behalf of the Nickel Family foundation.

Smith said in an interview the foundation had no immediate plans for distribution of its new-found wealth. The group would look to the San Francisco and Vancouver foundations for guidance.

The San Francisco foundation, one of the largest community foundations in North America with assets of $55 million, supports a wide range of projects in education, environmental studies, social services, culture, health and recreation.

Martin Paley, foundation director, told the dinner the San Francisco fund, too, had grown slowly in the first 20 years, but had jumped from $38 million in the last five years "and could double in size in another year. It's very unpredictable."

Foundation officials said it was unusual for a foundation to raise funds through a dinner.

"We have no intention of repeating it," said Fowler.

$21,504 Yearly to Policemen

WINNIPEG (CP) — City council has ratified a new one-year contract with the 1,100-member Winnipeg Police Association.

Under the new agreement, the salary for a first class constable is raised to $21,504 a year from $19,512 under the old contract.

The agreement provides a seven per cent increase over 1978 levels, effective Jan. 1, and a further three per cent from April 1.

Belize Bible authority to speak

Sadie Vernon of Belize, Central America, an exceptional Christian leader and highly respected social worker in her own country, will speak on Biblical authority for Christian social action as part of the 75th anniversary celebrations of the Victoria chapter of the Canadian Bible Society.

Vernon, renowned for her work in raising the consciousness of women in Belize, will talk at an open meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Oak Bay United Church at 1369 Mitchell and will speak again to a coffee meeting Wednesday at 10 a.m. at All Saints Anglican Church, 310 View Royal Avenue.

At the recent annual meeting of the Canadian Bible Society in Toronto, Chief Justice F. W. Johnson of Regina was re-elected president. Other officers of the society are Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson of Vancouver, the Rt. Rev. Harold L. Nutter of Fredericton, the Rt. Rev. Jesse E. Bigelow of Edmonton, Harry H. Edmison of Toronto and Rev. Herve Fines of Verdun, Que.

Dr. Kenneth G. McMillan has completed 22 years as general secretary.

The 75th anniversary was marked at the 1979 annual meeting and it was announced that to celebrate 75 years of service the society has assumed three special projects, each costing $75,000. A new translation of the complete Bible into Central Eskimo, a project which will take five years and cost $75,000, has started.

For the provision of easy-to-read scripture selections for new literates in India $75,000 is being requested. On Bible Society Sunday, May 6, a thanks offering for the 75 years of devoted service by the Canadian Bible Society was received.

The most significant aspect of Bible society work today is the unprecedented demand for the Bible. In 1978 there was a record scripture distribution in Canada with the circulation of more than 8 million Bibles, testaments, gospels and scripture selections in 85 languages.

In 2½ years, 335,000 copies of the Good News Bible have been distributed in Canada. World scripture distribution exceeded 500 million and showed a 25 per cent increase over the previous year. To meet the growing demand for the scriptures in some 1,660 languages the Canadian Bible Society is seeking to double scripture supply over a five year period.

To carry on its work, the Canadian Bible Society depends on the support of congregations of all denominations.

Virgin Mary honored in three-day services

A triduum, three days of special services in honor of the Virgin Mary, will begin Sunday, Mothers Day, in St. Andrew's Cathedral. The triduum will be preceded by a vigil mass at 5 p.m. today.

The speaker, Rev. Vincent J. Sampietro, plans to present the event in an ecumenical perspective, relating it to both the New Testament and recent theological reflections on Mary's role in the restoration of unity among Christians.

The theme of this triduum, Mary, Mother of Unity, suggests not only its timeliness but also its richness in relation to the mystery of Christ.

There will be three services daily, at 8 a.m., 12:10 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

At the first two services the eucharist will be celebrated and will include a homily by Sampietro, a Paulist missionary.

At the evening service there will be prayers, including the rosary, a sermon and benediction.

Confession will be administered before and after each of the daily services.

Topics of the triduum are as follows: vigil mass at 5 p.m. today and at all masses Sunday, The Virgin Mary, Model Woman and Mother; Monday, Mary, Mother of Unity; Tuesday, Mary, Our Spiritual Mother; Wednesday, Valiant Woman at the Foot of the Cross.

Samoan mission members to speak Sunday

Two missionaries to Western Samoa, Rev. and Mrs. Alvin Orchard, will be guest speakers at First Church of the Nazarene, 4277 Quadra, at 6 p.m. Sunday.

The service will include a description of the educational work in the field, with slides, music and preaching. Music will be pre-recorded from Western Samoa, a part of the world rarely visited by tourists.

The Orchards are home on furlough and holding services in churches across the United States and Canada.

Orchard graduated from Olivet Nazarene College in 1964 and in 1968 received his Master of Divinity from Nazarene Theological Seminary. Mrs. Orchard attended Bethany Nazarene College.

Orchard has served as president of the Samoa Nazarene Bible College, while his wife was secretary and did various activities connected with the school.

The Orchards have two daughters, Pamela Jean and Tami Lynn. They will live in Kansas City, Missouri during this furlough year.

Family Day service set

Garden City-Wilkinson Road United Church will have one service of worship on Family Day, Sunday, at 9:45 a.m. The sacrament of Holy Baptism will be held. Tannis Hendra will be guest trumpeter, Peter Bourne guest soloist, with the Light and Power group taking the main part of the service of worship. Special music will be presented by the Cantata Choir.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

We now live in the middle of the most far-reaching revolution in the history of civilization. The rate of change accelerates before our eyes. Events come faster than we can cope with them. We are frustrated in our attempts to assimilate the results of what Arnold Toynbee called "the marvellous and monstrous apparatus of Western technology."

Our technological ingenuity is outpacing our moral sensitivity and our social creativity. For instance, we now have in our hands the power to abolish all poverty and famine throughout the world, but we seem not to have the will to do so. We also have in our hands the power to annihilate ourselves —and we sometimes fear that we haven't the will to stop ourselves from doing that.

Fifty years ago a father could assume that his son would grow up into a world recognizably like his own. But children born this year will reach adulthood in a world quite different from ours. And imagination fails us when we try to picture the kind of world in which their children will love.

In all parts of our world there are ominous signs of failure of nerve. We are in danger of letting ourselves be overwhelmed by circumstance, circumstance of our own making.

This age of great achievement and expectation is also the age of great anxiety and despair. Terrible insecurities tear at our hearts and befuddle our minds, and we easily slip into moods of hopelessness.

Can the Church of Jesus Christ, out of the resources of its faith, speak helpfully to the fears and anxieties and insecurities of today and tomorrow?

The church, in its various communions and denominations, is caught in the current confusion and frustration. The trumpets of its leaders often sound flubby and quavering notes. And many of its people wallow in pious nostalgia, trying to use faith as a means of escaping life's turmoils and challenges rather than as a means of facing them and transforming them.

But pious nostalgia cannot prevent the breakup of many of the conventional orthodoxies and pieties. This ought not to engender despair in Christian hearts: orthodoxies in belief and practice where developed in the first place simply as instruments for protecting and expressing faith, and they have always been subject to change. Many of these instruments of faith have outlived their original usefulness and should be changed; many of them are now in process of being changed.

I am optimistic that during the next few decades the radical reformation of the church, which is now under way, will show that the church can hold firmly to its New Testament foundations and at the same time develop new and effective instruments for their expression in this revolutionary world. Many Christians, in all parts of the Church, are now showing willingness to accept the resiliency and the flexibility and the adventuresomeness of their biblical faith, and to take the risks to which that faith calls them.

United church givings fall short of needs

First United Church has issued an appeal to its congregation for funds after the first four months' givings this year fell short of expectations by about 7.5 per cent.

The financial report in the church's weekly bulletin states that congregational envelope donations for the first four months of 1979 are only about one per cent over givings for the same period in 1978.

"Our projected inflation factor (is) 8.5 per cent," the bulletin said.

"For this first one-third of the year, we should have contributed $10,000 more to be able to meet our budgeted expenses to date and provide for major costs such as insurance and parking lot taxes."

The bulletin also pointed out that Easter contributions for the missions and service fund amounted to $2,367, only 2.5 per cent over last year's donation.

Treasurer J.N. Bond said as the congregation neared summer "this seems a good time to pause and consider whether each of us has faced up to the need.

"We must keep First United strong financially so that its vital work in the congregation, community and the world can continue and . . . expand," Bond said.

Maori judge here at candidate meet

Native people of southern Vancouver Island have joined forces with Project North Victoria in sponsoring a meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in St. John's Church hall, 1611 Quadra, for the candidates of the federal ridings of Victoria, Esquimalt-Saanich, and Cowichan-Malahat-The-Islands.

Native people from various points south of Qualicum and from the West Coast will travel to Victoria that day to question the candidates regarding their understanding of native rights and concerns. They are gathering questions from their people to take advantage of this opportunity to ascertain the positions of the political parties represented.

Similar meetings are being held across Canada before the May 22 federal election. Native people are insisting that governments listen to them and be prepared to accept them as a distinct people with a powerful sense of their own identity and culture.

They are determined that past and present policies of government toward the original people of this land —policies which they and a growing number of Canadians feel are disastrous— must not be allowed to continue.

An observer at the meeting will be Judge Edward Durie of New Zealand, in Canada at the invitation of the Anglican Church to participate in its Partners in Mission program. He will be in Victoria for part of his orientation before proceeding to Eastern Canada for meetings with church officials.

Durie, a Maori, is a judge of the Maori Land Court involved in planning legislative change to better accommodate the distinctive needs of Maori poeple.

He is charged with establishing trust and co-operation for management of land and funds by Maori people independent of government control and in the hearing of land claims and complaints among Maoris. Later in his visit to Canada he will spend some time with northern native people.

A visit to Tsartlip School Monday has been arranged for Judge Durie. Later in the week he will travel to Vancouver to meet Judge Thomas Berger who in 1977 published his Report of the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline Inquiry. On Sunday, May 20, Durie will meet the core committee of Project North (Victoria).

X-Rays, Linked to Mongolism

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A form of abdominal x-rays given to a girl when she is young can double the risk of her having a mentally-retarded baby 10 years later, a pediatrics professor at the University of Western Ontario says.

The incidence of Down's syndrome, or mongolism, may be doubled in mother's who had several abdominal fluoroscopic x-rays 10 or more years ago, Dr. Howard Valentine told a genetics conference Friday.

Doctors have been concerned for some time, he said, that x-rays taken during the first three months of pregnancy could damage the early development of the fetus. But abdominal fluoroscope x-rays — in effect, a live x-ray movie — could affect an ovum many years before its development.

The doctor said all women as they get older face increased risks of having fetal abnormalities. Down's syndrome occurs in about one of 1,600 babies born to women under 30. By the time the mother is 40, the likelihood has reached about one in 100.

Valentine said evidence is still slim, but indications point to a higher rate of Down's syndrome among Roman Catholics who practice the rhythm method of birth control. Reports from Holland have suggested the increased incidence, he said.

The problem could be attributed to the the female ovum aging before its fertilization, he said. Infrequent intercourse may increase the risk of abnormalities in the critical body-building chromosomes at the molecular level.

Between 40 and 60 per cent of all rejected conceptions show existing chromosome abnormalities, Valentine told the conference.

"Be thankful the uterus knows best," he said of the 15 per cent of pregnancies that end in miscarriage. The earlier the pregnancy ends, the greater the likelihood of a chromosome abnormality, he said.

Cadillacs Recalled

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — More than 12,000 Cadillacs have been recalled in Canada to fix sticky accelerator pedals.

In the U.S., where about 360,000 of the 1977 and 1978 models are being recalled, sticky pedals have been blamed for 124 accidents, causing three deaths and 46 injuries.

Crest Slides by Winnipeg

WINNIPEG (CP) — The worst appears to be over for residents of the flooded Red River Valley.

The Red dropped several centimetres Friday at Winnipeg, indicating the flood crest reached this city Thursday, a day earlier than expected at about 30 centimetres below the predicted levels.

Winnipeg, protected by a large floodway that diverts the flood water around the city, is the last major community along the river before it disperses into Lake Winnipeg.

All along the valley the river is dropping, signalling the end to the worst flood to sweep the valley in almost 30 years.

"The worst is definitely over," said a spokesman.

"In the next week to 10 days all people in the flood area should be able to return home."

Meanwhile, the Manitoba legislature put all other business aside Friday to pass a special bill allocating $5 million to cover initial costs in cleaning up the mess.

Premier Sterling Lyon said funds were necessary to cover "flood control and emergency expenditures."

"At the present time, there are no firm estimates of the total flood costs," Lyon told the legislature as people were moving back into their homes in Emerson and Letellier, the first two towns along the Red as it enters Manitoba from North Dakota.

"It is unlikely that any (firm damage estimates) will be available until the water recedes."

Lyon said the government already has incurred fairly large costs in fighting the flood which forced the evacuation of an estimated 7,000 residents in the valley.

"As soon as the disaster assistance board compensation limits are set, then the claims can be processed."

An EMO spokesman said some of the 600 Canadian forces personnel stationed at towns along the valley to maintain dikes and provide security, will start withdrawing by Sunday.

1,200 Cuff Off by Ont. River

DUBREUILVILLE, Ont. (CP) — About 1,200 residents of this community are isolated as efforts continue to keep the flooding Magpie River at bay.

Further west, the provincial police closed Highway 17, the Trans-Canada Highway, after the White River flooded the roadway Friday about one kilometre west of the community named after the river.

Police were stopping all westbound through traffic in Wawa, although it was still possible to enter White River.

The Magpie River has already destroyed a wooden bridge leading to Dubreuilville, about 200 kilometres northwest of Sault Ste. Marie. Community residents dug a ditch Thursday to try to keep flood waters from destroying a second bridge.

Water continued rising and many residents were unable to go to work or attend school Friday.

In White River, Ken Collver, clerk of the town of 1,100, said the downtown area was under about 25 centimetres of water.

He said the river is being monitored and an evacuation plan has been prepared. About 25 per cent of the residents are affected by the flooding.

The river is rising by about one centimetre an hour and an evacuation may be necessary if the situation continues to worsen.

The Hudson's Bay Co. store and the Liquor Control Board of Ontario outlet were forced to close and the flood threatened other businesses.

The water level is slightly lower than dikes built to protect homes on the lakeshore but flooding is possible if winds are strong.

"The diking is in place and that's as much as we can do," said Morley Daiter, city director of planning.

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canada Post Office has apologized to the son of Frederick Philip Grove for putting a picture of another man on first-day covers honoring the Prairie novelist.

Per Holting, a spokesman for the post office here, said Thursday he was also advised by officials in Ottawa that the offending covers will be withdrawn from sale.

A. Leonard Grove of Toronto said earlier this week that he was "absolutely thunderstruck" by the mistake. The post office initially refused to admit it was wrong, but Holting said Grove was able to prove his point at a meeting with officials in Ottawa.

First-day covers are special envelops issued with new stamps and are of primary interest to collectors.

The covers in dispute also featured a likeness of Quebec poet Emile Nelligan.

Holting said there was no problem with two 17-cent stamps issued along with the covers. One is entitled Fruits of the Earth and the other Le Vaisseu d'Or — The Golden Ship.

Groundhogs Gnaw Top Secret Cables

OTTAWA (CP) — Subterranean saboteurs have invaded and almost destroyed a top-secret Canada-U.S. satellite project, and the Americans are not amused.

It seems that groundhogs at the nearby Shirley's Bay communications research centre have developed a sweet tooth for underground cables.

If the groundhogs' underground activities had gone undetected anything could have happened, says Hans Berger, manager of the centre's plant engineering services.

Last year the groundhogs had polished off all but the last two back-up cables that linked communications with "a multi-million dollar" satellite project shared by the two countries.

"If we hadn't been able to repair the damaged cables before the groundhogs got to the back-up ones, we could have certainly lost the satellite during communications manoeuvres," Berger said.

The satellite could have crashed to earth or become lost in space.

Berger would not elaborate on the satellite involved because it is a confidential project, but said the U.S. partners were upset on hearing that some Ottawa groundhogs love snacking on cables.

The Americans can rest easier, however. The centre has assigned their maintenance foreman to gun down the rodents with a .22-calibre rifle.

Satellite TV Antennas A Federal Experiment

EDMONTON (CP) — In a few weeks 100 isolated households throughout Canada will begin to receive CBC TV and/or radio via "satellite-to-home terminals."

Fifty homes will be equipped with individual satellite antennas 1.8 metres in diameter, while the other fifty will receive antennas 1.2 metres wide.

All the antennas will be individually linked to a signal converter and a regular television set for a two-year period, receiving signals from Canada's Anik B satellite.

The plan, approved by the federal government in 1974, will ultimately provide service to 900,000 Canadians who are presently inadequately served by electronic media.

A Saskatoon firm is completing the manufacture of the terminals at a cost to the federal communications department of $3,600 each. Once the home receivers go into mass production they are expected to cost less than $500.

David L. Garforth, CBC's manager of systems engineering, announced that the coverage plan should be completed by the fall of 1981 or spring of 1982.

McMillin — Horn

The Salvation Army Citadel, Victoria, B.C., was the scene of a lovely double ring ceremony at 4 p.m. on April 14, 1979, when Debbie Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Horn, became the bride of Mr. Ian Philip McMillin, third son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McMillin, all of Victoria, B.C. The saying of the marriage vows was solemnized by Lt. Col. W. Ratcliffe, assisted by Capt. J. Wilder. Throughout the ceremony organ music was played by Mrs. A. Leech.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was a vision of loveliness in her wedding gown of Chantilly lace and peau de soie. The lovely lace was featured on the stand-up collar, enhanced the fitted bodice and encircled the waistline, edged all around gown hem and long train at back. Lace appliques also adorned the gown's skirt; tiny pearls shimmered from the lace. Long slender sleeves had deep cuffs of lace, in a cape style over shoulders. A coronet of lace flowers held a fingertip length veil of illusion tulle edged in silk embroidery, and she carried a cascade of pink sweetheart roses, phalaenopsis orchids and baby's breath with a shower of loveknots of roses and baby's breath. For her jewelry, she chose to wear small cultured pearl earrings which matched those of her gown, and a gold watch, a gift of the groom. The bride was attended by her girl friend Miss Nellie Poskitt, as maid of honour, and Miss Nancy Tomlinson, cousin of the bride, and Miss Jody Horn, sister of the bride were bridesmaids. They were attired in identical floor length gowns with soft pink, mauve and white floral print on delicate blue nylon chiffon over silk with scoop necklines trimmed in white lace, and short puffed sleeves with matching lace trim. Ice blue ribbon sashes accented their waistlines. Flowergirls, Miss Christa McMillin and Miss Leah McMillin, nieces of the groom, looked ever so sweet in their matching floor length gowns which matched the other attendants except that the flowergirls' gowns had little stand-up collars trimmed in white lace and baby blue ribbon sashes accented their waistlines. The bride's attendants carried bouquets of pink carnations and white decorative mums with ribbon matching their gowns and wore matching flowers in their hair. All the bride's attendants wore silver crosses on fine chains, gifts of the bride, which accented their gowns. The mother of the bride was attired in a soft seafoam green floor length gown with sheer overlay stitched at bodice, flowing to floor length panels at back, bead and pearl trim throughout waistline and a wedding ring neckline, complemented by a corsage of Talisman roses, with deep green leaves and yellow ribbon. The mother of the groom chose a dusty rose floor length long sleeved gown, lace inset framing a V neckline, softly draped in front from an empire waistline to a full gored skirt and a beaded diamond trim at bodice, complemented by a corsage of red rosebuds with a green and white ribbon. The groom was handsomely attired in a navy blue tuxedo accented with a boutonniere of pink roses and baby's breath. His best man Mr. Mark Hallam, wore a navy blue tuxedo complemented by a boutonniere of pink carnation. The ushers Messrs. Graeme Weir and Richard Ko, wore matching navy blue tuxedos and their outfits were complemented by white pink tipped carnation boutonnieres. While the bridal party signed the Register, the soloist Miss Delaine Holden of Burnaby, B.C. sang "What is Love" and "Climb Every Mountain."

Reception followed at the Oak Bay Beach hotel, which was beautifully decorated with white bells, candles and carnations completing the table settings. Large baskets of flowers complemented the bridal table which was centred with the wedding cake decorated by the bride's mother. White candles added a warm glow to the setting. The newlyweds were piped in by Mr. Robbie Cross, who treated the guests with two other solo selections on the bagpipes during the evening. Mr. Fraser McAlpine, uncle of the bride, was master of ceremonies for the evening. He introduced the toastmaster, Mr. Ernest Bent Jr., who proposed a toast to the bride. Col. Wm. Ross of White Rock, B.C. said the blessing before a full course dinner was served, and the pianist, Mr. Dan Ellis, played softly in the background. Miss Delaine Holden favoured the guests with her beautiful voice once again by singing "You Light Up My Life" as a special request of the bride. Miss Holden also sang several other selections throughout the evening.

Before leaving the reception, the bride threw her bouquet which was caught by Miss Patricia Hallam and Mr. David Pollard skilfully caught the garter. Mr. and Mrs. McMillin left via air for their honeymoon trip to California. They wish to say a special thanks to Miss Janet McAlpine and Miss Carol McAlpine, cousins of the bride, for looking after the signing of the Guest Book. Also to Mr. Wm. Corbett for transporting of the flowers and also to thank their many friends and relatives who helped and shared in this memorable day.

For her going away outfit, the bride chose a short sleeved V-neck powder blue dress with a fitted bodice and all around knife pleated skirt. She carried a white coat, had white accessories and a white phalaenopsis orchid corsage. The newlyweds are making their home in Victoria.

They also need the structure and guidance necessary to develop personal life skills and appropriate social behaviours to enable them to function in the community. Since seizures and hyperactivity can be problems, staff should be prepared to deal with these. Staff should be familiar and comfortable with a variety of behaviour management techniques. They would be expected to work closely and effectively with the Ministry of Human Resources, other community resources and, with the social worker's help, the parents, in meeting the needs of these children. Some bookkeeping experience would also be useful. Please send resume including relevant experiences and references by May 15th to Doug Matheson, Ministry of Human Resources, 1627 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C. V8R 1H8. Phone: 598-5121.

why this valuable home at 36 Sylvan Lane hasn't sold long ago. When I look at the gorgeous view, look at the seclusion of nearly ½ acre (assessed market value $64,950. land), look at the size of the house (approx. 2900 sq. ft.) and consider that at the asking price of $129,500. the house is going for about $23. per square foot. I realize all it needs is a little intelligent imagination and a vibrant family to instill life into its empty rooms. If you haven't seen this, or if you've seen it before, come and take a long hard look. Phone GEORGE BLACKBURN at 598-3321 right now.

HOW TO WRITE

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Insurance Company Must Pay

TORONTO (CP) — An Ottawa man who had to quit his $27,000-a-year job with the Canada Council five years ago because he had gone deaf is entitled to disability payments of $1,500 a month until he is 65, the Ontario Supreme Court has ruled.

Mr. Justice Allen Goodman said Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada and the public service of Canada were wrong in saying Gerald Taaffe, now a free-lance writer, was not disabled and in cutting off his benefits after 24 months.

Goodman said it is up to the insurance company to show Taaffe, 51, is not disabled and not up to the writer to prove his disability.

The judge said Taaffe has been prevented by his hearing disability from engaging in any commensurate occupation for which he is reasonably qualified by education, training or occupation.

Pole to Pole . . . on a Bike

CALGARY (CP) — Ernest O'Gaffney plans to ride his motorcycle over both the North and South poles in a trip around the world that he hopes will raise $1 million for charity.

O'Gaffney, 42, of Hemet, Calif., is confident that he can complete the trip successfully. Earlier this year, the retired U.S. Marine colonel rode his bike east to west around the world in 79 days.

That trip broke one world record and set seven others which are awaiting official verification, he says. In the process, O'Gaffney raised $537,000 for orphanages in India, Pakistan and Afghanistan.

The two-wheeled adventurer anticipates no problem in the North, but "it's the South Pole that is the unknown quantity."

In the North, he explains, there are roads and sled trails to follow, whereas the South still has virgin territory.

O'Gaffney says the most difficult part of the trip will be political problems he might encounter in some countries.

On his last trip, a gasoline bomb bounced off his motorcycle helmet in Iran. He was caught in automatic weapons crossfire at the University of Istanbul.

O'Gaffney was in Calgary recently as part of a 60-day promotional tour across Canada and the United States to collect pledges for the trip, which begins in California in mid-June.

He hopes the pledges will total $1 million by the time he kicks off his journey.

Money collected is earmarked for the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation for research into an eye disease which leaves victims sightless by their early 20s.

O'Gaffney says it is difficult to estimate how long the trip will take, but estimates that after the first 90 days he should have covered all but the frozen northland.

From Los Angeles he will head south through Mexico and then on to Argentina. After crossing the South Pole he will head northward through Africa and Europe.

During the ride over snow-covered terrain, the motorcycle will be equipped with skis and a snowmobile track on the back wheel.

Fatties Have Appetites Cut

CARDSTON, Alta. (CP) — A rare operation by two Cardston doctors is drastically changing the eating habits of obese patients.

"I used to love eating, but I don't miss it at all," says Gordon Brinkhurst, 46, one of the first persons in Western Canada to receive a gastroplasty (stomach change) for the grossly overweight.

Brinkhurst's stomach was divided into two chambers. The first chamber is a small pouch that serves as a stomach. When it's full, Brinkhurst feels full and stops eating. The contents of this pouch drains through a small opening to the rest of the stomach and are digested.

"I've lost all interest in my food," he says.

Since the March 1 operation, Brinkhurst's weight has dropped 30 pounds to 240.

"I've been really overweight for 15 years. The reason is simply I don't burn off the calories I eat. I don't like to think I'm a pig, but maybe I am," he says.

Not any more. Brinkhurst sits down to lunch of a half-cup of chicken casserole. He eats a few teaspoonfuls, then leans back and sighs. He is full.

An orderly at the Cardston hospital, Brinkhurst asked Dr. John Hollingsworth whether there was some kind of operation available for his problem. He had tried weight clubs and special diets and nothing had helped.

With Dr. Burns Larson, Hollingsworth researched an operation that originated about 13 years ago in the United States and had been performed a few times in Eastern Canada. They travelled to California to watch the operation and interview patients. So far, they have performed the operation on four patients.

The operation is major surgery and Brinkhurst cautions that it is not designed to be reversed.

After the operation, patients supplement their meagre diet with vitamins and exercise to tone muscles and use energy.

Food must be chewed thoroughly before it's swallowed or it could block the tiny opening between the stomach chambers.

Pills must be taken in powdered or liquid form and liquids must be drunk between meals. If a patient drinks with his meal, food is washed through the opening and the appetite is not satisfied.

Those who have the operation can expect to lose about 60 per cent of their excess weight in 12 to 18 months.

Eventually the pouch will stretch to three times its size, allowing the patient to eat more than a few teaspoons of food at mealtimes.

FROM THE BOOKSHELF

"Bobby Fischer — The Greatest?" By Dr. Max Euwe, 202 pp, Sterling Publishing Co., $8.95.

An international Grandmaster at the age of 15, Bobby Fischer subsequently established the longest winning streak — 20 games — in the history of Grandmaster play. There is no question that Bobby was ONE of the greatest players ever. But Dr. Max Euwe, past Grandmaster and a former World Champion himself, analyzes Fischer and compares his style of play with many former greats — and comes out with the verdict that nobody has ever surpassed Bobby.

The book contains many well annotated games, and I recommend it to all budding chess players.

U.S. AMATEUR TEAM TOURNAMENT

This event, held in Cherry Hill, N.J., at the end of February, may not be long remembered for its play but may be for the startling names of some of the teams and for its having been played both in Antarctica and the Sahara Desert.

There were over a hundred entries, with four players each, and bearing such noble and imaginative names as the Marshall Bonecrushers, Katz and Three Dogs, the Vera Menchik Brigade (four women), The Filthy Fish, and The Square Root of Three.

Although most of the teams were from the East, some competitors came from as far away as Colorado.

If the team names can be considered the highlight of the event, the conditions of play were the incredible lowlight. The battleground was the brand new exhibition hall of an otherwise excellent hotel. It might as well have been an ice arena, for shortly before play began, extreme cold burst the heating pipes and, by Round Two, players could barely be distinguished as animate objects under layers of overcoats and blankets, an occasional mittened paw reaching out from the mass to make a move.

Trying to remedy this grotesque situation, the hotel then overcompensated by moving everyone to a ballroom which had been heated to such a degree that the thawing players quickly shed their blankets, their coats and their gloves. Before play ended, some had divested themselves of ties, shirts and undershirts as well and were playing bare-chested. Under such conditions, the Marshall Bonecrushers might have seemed likely winners (and the Vera Menchik Brigade considered as playing under a severe disadvantage). The winners, as it turned out, were the Macho Ornst of New York.

No-Name Steaks Hit Supermarkets

TORONTO (CP) — Two supermarket chains are offering no-name steaks to the barbecue crowd at lower prices because, they say, rising costs have pushed premium Canadian beef beyond most consumers' wallets.

David Nichol, president of Loblaws Ltd., said Friday at a generics council sponsored by the University of Toronto that only restaurants can afford premium cuts these days.

Many steaks "have been literally priced out of the average consumer's reach by runaway beef prices," he said.

Loblaws offered Friday shoppers beef tenderloin at $3.99 a pound instead of the regular $7.08 and rib-eye steak for $2.99 a pound, down from $5.38. The beef is range-fed Australian and New Zealand stock tenderized wth papaya juice for the Canadian market, which usually favors more tender meat.

The chain intends to add frankfurters and bologna made from chicken to its barbecue offerings for under $1 a pound within a few weeks, Nichol said.

Syd Rabinovitch, meat merchandising manager for Miracle Food Mart, said Friday that the Miracle stores started advertising no-name cuts about three weeks ago. But he said the beef is definitely of lower quality than the high-priced premium cuts.

Customers can save between $1.70 to $2.25 a pound on rib eye, strip loin and beef tenderloin cuts from milk-type beef (cows) or older Australian, New Zealand and home-bred animals, he said.

Miracle Recalled

FATIMA, Portugal (Reuter) — Hundreds of thousands of pilgrims converged on this shrine of the Roman Catholic Church today to celebrate the 62nd anniversary of the Miracle of Fatima.

The faithful in wheelchairs, on crutches and some crawling on their hands and knees poured into this small town where in 1917 three shepherd children said they saw a series of visions of the Virgin Mary.

CLASS OF '54 came back to the classroom of '79 at Oak Bay High Friday night and discovered that over the intervening 25 years, the desks seemed to have shrunk. Of the 99 students who graduated in 1954, 77 made it to the reunion — including two custodians from that period — to renew old friendships, recall youthful highjinks, and learn what happened to good old what's-his-name.

Double Standard Hard On CUPE: Hartmann

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Grace Hartman, president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), said Friday a curious double standard exists towards unions.

"No one even notices a strike in the private sector," she told about 500 CUPE delegates and visitors to the annual convention of the union's Ontario division.

"But if it involves public employees, such as the collection of garbage, then it becomes high profile."

Mrs. Hartman said a recent strike by 923 city employees here was an example of the double standard and the anti-union attitudes that prevail, especially against public service workers.

And she suggested that the more than 2,400 CUPE members in London try to toss out Mayor Al Gleeson at the next municipal election because of his attitude toward that union.

"His fondest dreams (for a strike) were realized," Mrs. Hartman said. "He wanted a fight and, like most people who go looking, he found one."

Private Medical Data Obtainable: StatsCan

TORONTO (CP) — Anyone with enough determination can always obtain private medical information about another person, says Dr. Joe Hauser, director of Statistics Canada's health division.

He told the Ontario royal commission on the confidentiality of health records that it is more difficult to get such information from Statistics Canada than from the institution that supplied the information initially.

"Anyone who is intent enough to get data can always get it" from local institutions, Hauser said Thursday.

The RCMP have approved Statistics Canada's security system, he said, and the agency's management staff know a five-year jail term may be imposed for breaching confidentiality.

Hauser urged Mr. Justice Horace Krever of the Ontario Supreme Court commission chairman, to resist any suggestion to restrict the flow of Statistics Canada information among provincial health ministers and health institutions.

A soon-to-be-released Statistics Canada report showing that a pill taken by tuberculosis patients is not cancer-causing is one instance in which the sharing of medical data was essential, he said.

Language Rights Enshrined: Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — Basic language rights would be included in a constitution that would be brought to Canada by a Liberal government after the May 22 election, Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday.

Expanding on his constitutional plans, the prime minister said language guarantees and basic human rights would be included in British legislation placing power over the Canadian constitution in Canadian hands.

The prime minister repeated that a re-elected Liberal government plans to recall Parliament within 30 days and propose a joint Commons-Senate declaration calling on the British Parliament to hand over to Canadians the ultimate power over the British North America Act, Canada's basic law.

This would be followed about a month later by a federal-provincial conference which would attempt once again to agree on a formula for changing the constitution.

He again said that he would allow two years for reaching agreement but if that failed, he would use a national referendum, asking the Canadian people to decide the issue.

The prime minister was winding up a week in which he has highlighted the constitution as a cornerstone of his election strategy in the dying days of the campaign.

Wearing a sober-blue suit and talking as if he were leading a seminar, Trudeau outlined what he said were the frustrations of constitutional reform in the last 50 years.

There have been 10 attempts to bring the constitution to Canada in that period.

Many provincial premiers will acknowledge that bringing the constitution home is a good thing but they demand something in return, he said.

"Isn't that blackmail ?" he asked.

He noted that in the field of education the provinces have control and Canadians know little about the different cultures in other parts of the country. The federal government has proposed having some rights in post-secondary education but the provinces rejected this.

Trudeau said he realizes the constitution does not grip many English-speaking Canadians as a major issue but it is seen as very important to French-speaking Canadians and even many ethnic groups.

He quoted Ontario Premier William Davis to support his contention that it is of great importance to the future of the country. Davis had told a February conference on the constitution that failing to bring the constitution back to Canada raised doubts in the minds of Canadians about the abilty of Canadian government to manage affairs.

He also responded to New Democratic Leader Ed Broadbent who has said the government should seek repatriation of Canadian resources before worrying about the constitution.

"Obviously he hadn't thought about this very much," Trudeau said. "I say that because Broadbent is an intelligent person and if he had thought about it he would have said something intelligent."

ELECTION 79

Hopefuls Fuzzy On Pot

TORONTO (CP) — About one-third of the candidates in the 24 Metropolitan Toronto ridings did not take clear-cut stands on the issue of legalizing possession of marijuana in a survey by a group promoting changes in marijuana laws.

A spokesman for the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws said 20 of 24 NDP candidates favored making possession legal and four did not respond.

Nine Progressive Conservative candidates supported the legal changes, six were not in favor and nine either did not respond or did not give an opinion.

Thirteen Liberals said they favored the move; 10 did not respond and one hedged the question, the group's spokesman said.

NDP Pins Hopes on B.C.

TORONTO (CP) — New Democratic Leader Ed Broadbent says he is fantastically optimistic about his party's chances of gaining new seats in British Columbia in the general election 11 days away.

He told reporters Friday he based his high hopes on the results of Thursday's provincial election in which Social Credit squeaked back to power over the NDP.

"I am very disappointed that my good friend Dave Barrett (provincial NDP leader) was not elected."

But he added that Barrett made remarkable gains getting 46 per cent of the popular vote.

Broadbent said a few hundred votes more spread across the province would have returned a Barrett government and "that shows the growth of the NDP in the province and what it stands for in British Columbia."

"We are going to make more gains federally," Broadbent said adding that the Liberals and Tories would loose seats. The NDP held two seats in B.C. when the election was called.

Broadbent balked at questions of what his demands would be if the Liberals or Conservatives formed a minority government after the election.

He said thay were hypothetical questions and he was out to form a NDP gvernment. "Why don't you ask that question to (Prime Minister) Trudeau or (Conservative Leader Joe) Clark."

Earlier this week, Broadbent said the NDP wanted action to arrest the erosion of medicare, to bring down prices and develop a national industrial policy in return for its support in a minority Parliament.

The NDP leader also attacked Trudeau's statement that he would call Parliament within 30 days of the election to deal with the issue of bringing home the Canadian constitution.

Trudeau's priorities are totally wrong and the NDP leader said his government would call back Parliament within four to six weeks to deal with unemployment, high prices, inflation and the long-term goal of regaining Canadian control over its own natural resources.

In a speech to the Empire Club, Broadbent roasted Clark saying leadership is a prime issue in the election campaign.

He accused Clark of changing his mind on several key issues due to the pressure of electioneering.

"The pressures of an election are real and there's no doubt about that," Broadbent said. "Those of governing a country as diverse as Canada are much greater."

IF: There is a Persian rug on the floor, what does that tell you about its owner? Probably that he is well off. Also, he'll be a secure person because a Persian rug is a good saleable item in these inflation ridden times. It is easier to sell expensive oriental carpets today in a sluggish economy than it was in the 1950s and 60s although the average price of an authentic Oriental carpet has greatly increased in recent years. An Oriental rug is an excellent hedge against inflation because its value increases constantly. The reason for this is the increased wealth and industrialization of Mid-East countries. Weavers and master artists are leaving their traditional work and are entering industrial employment. In addition the Shah of Iran had introduced compulsory education thereby effectively eliminating the employment of children in rug weaving says:

Ryan Slams BNA Plans

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Prime Minister Trudeau's promise to unilaterally patriate the constitution if rapid agreement cannot be reached with the provinces would, upset Canada's political balance and be doomed to failure, according to Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan.

At a news conference Friday, Ryan said any move to bring the British North America Act home from London without a prior agreement on its amendment would go against years of tradition.

He said if Canadians have not yet been able to agree on the patriation of the constitution, it is not because they do not want it or are indifferent to the question.

"It's because they haven't been able to agree on more fundamental questions," said Ryan. "To think that unilateral patriation will overcome these profound difficulties is quite simply to delude oneself."

The Liberal leader also dissociated himself from Trudeau's plan for the federal government to hold binding regional or national referendums if agreement on constitutional amendment has not been reached with the provinces after two years.

"If ever there was a question where agreement between the federal government and the provinces was essential, it is that of constitutional amendment," he said.

"In its most vital dispositions, the constitution has always been seen as being and remaining the provinces' business as much as the business of the federal government."

"This a not a game of nine against one. We must not forget that Quebec was a founding province."

Atlantic Canada's four Progressive Conservative premiers also joined voices Friday to oppose Trudeau's latest statements on constitutional reform.

John Buchanan of Nova Scotia said Trudeau's proposal was an "arrogant suggestion," while Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick said the idea would cause irreparable divisions within the country.

Angus MacLean of Prince Edward Island substantively agreed with his two Maritime counterparts, saying that in view of the importance of the subject, there has to be a national consensus before anything is done.

To Brian Peckford of Newfoundland, Trudeau was "ducking the real issues," which for Peckford are provincial control over rights to the fishery and offshore petroleum.

Buchanan said the referendum suggestion was an attempt on Trudeau's part to subvert the Canadian form of democracy and make this country a republic in the United States mold.

He said a negotiated constitutional reform agreement is in the works and should be completed before the BNA Act is brought to Canada.

To Hatfield, Trudeau's remarks were "the most devisive comments ever made in Canada," and said that bypassing the provinces in formulating a new constitutional system would send Rene Levesque home as "a conqueror."

Clark's Confidence Growing

ELECTION 79

'Best PMs Conciliate'

By PETER HADEKEL

OTTAWA — Buoyed by party polls showing he has already won the election, Conservative leader Joe Clark is campaigning like a prime minister-in-waiting.

Although he travelled thousands of miles this week from Vancouver to Yellowknife to Southern Ontario, Clark had little new to say to party supporters and toned down his attacks on Prime Minister Trudeau.

Conservative strategists are keeping Clark in a holding pattern until election day, trying to consolidate the lead they think they have over the Liberals in every province except Quebec.

Clark spent his time urging party troops to turn out enough votes for a Tory majority government and warning voters not to "waste your votes on the NDP."

While it was not exactly a triumphant week for Clark on the campaign trail, he drew large and sympathetic crowds wherever he spoke. And he has gained noticeably in confidence in the final stages of the campaign.

The Tory leader used his speeches to strike a prime ministerial pose and to rehearse the points he will cover in Sunday's nationally-televised debates with other party leaders. The message was clear at every rally: "Canadians want a change in the direction of their country and they're not going to get it from Pierre Elliot Trudeau."

Clark kept his campaign speeches simple and light on policy substance. He spoke in general terms about where he wants to lead the country and his remarks were often a catalyst for the anti-Trudeau feelings in his English-Canadian audiences.

Chants of "Trudeau must go" were heard almost as often as "Joe, Joe, Joe" at his rallies.

Clark wound up the week on a strong vote Friday, giving one of the best television interviews of his campaign. Appearing on CTV's Question Period, he was convincing and self-confident as he spoke about his vision of the country.

Given a boost earlier in the day when the prestigious Toronto newspaper The Globe and Mail endorsed the Conservative party in the election, Clark appeared supremely confident about his chances of forming the next government.

"I think that Canadians are primarily interested now in having someone who can bring strong people together and make things work in Canada," Clark said.

"For that reason I have tried to demonstrate during the election campaign my competence at bringing people together and at making things work. Because that is what I think probably concerns most Canadians most deeply at this time.

"One of the great changes that may result from a Clark government will be that there will be a different perception of what it means to be a Canadian," he said.

"Our identities here are local and yet the drift of national policy for a long time under governments of both parties has been to pretend that we had to have a common way of being a Canadian.

"We're too big a country for that."

Clark said his government would give up the notion that there is a common Canadian identity that fits Newfoundland as well as Alberta, encouraging instead a diversity of values.

Clark promised he would maintain the Official Languages Act, appoint Quebec senators to his cabinet if necessary and use the talents of French-Canadian public servants in his government.

He assured them that "the gains they have made under a French-speaking prime minister will be kept under an English-speaking prime minister. That might be one of the final proofs of this being their nation."

As an English-Canadian politician who has learned French and learned about Quebec, Clark said he sees his role as an interpreter of Quebec to the rest of the country.

"I believe at this point in the life of Canada, a new national government particularly headed by an English Canadian . . . can move the process (of dealing with Quebec) along more quickly and more convincingly.

"I just don't believe that the same old gang of Andre Ouellet, Pierre Trudeau, Marc Lalonde and Jean Chretien, charming as he is, are going to be able to stand down the forces of the government of Rene Levesque."

Clark left the TV studio having impressed journalists with his performance. It was an obvious warm-up for Sunday's TV debate, for which Clark will prepare extensively this weekend.

Get through the debate without any scratches, Tory strategists say, and the election will be sewn up.

Job-Cut Vow 'Unrealistic'

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark's campaign pledge to cut out 60,000 civil service jobs would miss the mark. The salaries and fringe benefits of a relatively few civil service senior executives are milking the coffers dry and these individuals are unlikely to get dislodged.

That's the opinion of two political scientists whose study of the most powerful federal civil servants his just been published as a book, The Superbureaucrats.

The problem is that, as head of a party that has been out of power for 16 years, Clark would need all the help he could get from Ottawa's top mandarins, say authors Colin Campbell and George Szablowski.

Yet the largest and costliest growth in the public service under Prime Minister Trudeau was in the senior executive category, which doubled from about 600 in 1968 to more than 1,200 in 1974, said Campbell, a professor of political science at York University.

Clark would face a serious dilemma during his first year in office, Szablowski said. He would want to replace a number of senior public servants who were loyal to the Liberal regime, but would need those people to teach him how the system works.

The authors call for greater public control of the bureaucracy by making high-level public servants accountable to Parliament.

If the Progressive Conservative leader became prime minister after the May 22 election, he would find it impossible to carry out his party's plan to reduce the size of the prime minister's office, the Campbell and Szablowski added.

"Unless he's a first-rate fool, he will not dismantle the prime minister's office," said Szablowski, a lawyer and professor at York University in Toronto. "In fact he will probably strengthen its advisory role."

Although the authors said they were not taking sides in the election, both said a change in government would be healthy for the country and for the bureaucracy.

NOW TORIES CLOSE GAP

TORONTO (UPC) — A new Gallup poll shows the governing Liberals are now only one point ahead of the Conservatives, who have a hefty majority in Ontario, which is expected to play a major role in the May 22 election.

The survey, reported late Friday, gave the Liberals 39 per cent of the decided vote, with the Tories unchanged from last month's poll at 38 per cent. The New Democratic Party slipped by one point, to 16 percent. Gallup researchers also said the number of undecided voters had dropped from 39 per cent to 11 per cent in one month. The survey showed the Tories were 10 percentage points ahead in Conservative-governed Ontario, where many experts predict the election will be decided.

It's The Pierre, Joe and Ed Show!

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau, Joe Clark and Ed Broadbent face off Sunday in a national television debate that will provide the only nose-to-nose test of the three federal political leaders in the May 22 election campaign.

A potential audience of six million will score the two-hour contest, and all three leaders plan to combat any pre-event jitters with quiet, non-political weekends.

(Other federal election stories on pages 67 and 68).

The scene is more hectic among the 60 or so television executives, assistants and make-up artists who are staging the show for the CBC, CTV and Global networks from the local CTV affiliate here.

Lecterns on the all-grey set have been bolted down so they can't topple accidentally when the Liberal, Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party leaders are behind them.

Three senior television reporters are worrying over the side-line role they've been asked to play on the show, saying they could end up looking like journalistic patsies.

Producers are scurrying to come up with an opening script for debate moderator David Johnston, 37, recently-named principal of McGill University in Montreal.

And television switchboard operators are gearing up for expected complaints from viewers who would rather watch such programs as the sit-com Three's Company, starring sex symbol Suzanne Sommers, or the historical drama I, Claudius. They've been pre-empted in Ontario by the prime time political special, which will be seen at 5 p.m. in Victoria.

Only viewers who watch French-language television or those with cable connections to the United States will be able to escape the debate.

Communications sage Marshall McLuhan, meanwhile, says the debate won't mean much anyway. What is said on television, he says, "doesn't much matter because the people appear so unreal."

That doesn't deter political strategists for the three leaders, who have been concentrating on television to sell their candidates throughout the campaign and who see the debate as a chance to score important points in advance of the final week-long drive for votes.

Planners in all parties have provided their leaders with detailed briefings on everything from clothes to posture, mulling over fine points of the three half-hour-long debates which will pit Clark against Broadbent, Broadbent against Trudeau and finally Trudeau against Clark.

Two at a time, the leaders will stand behind lectures less than three feet apart, trading shots, asking questions and making points while the third looks on.

There's a "heavy premium on interaction," says executive director Peter Herndorff of the CBC.

Moderator Johnston will introduce the show, give each leader a three-minute opening statement and turn to the panel of journalists if he feels the debate is bogging down.

Herndorff says the three

Shellfish Pollution Closure For Inlet

Six areas in the Saanich Inlet have been declared polluted and unfit for taking shellfish for the first time on record.

Federal fisheries officer Larry Duke says 90 per cent of the pollution can be blamed on faulty septic fields.

"The water condition hasn't changed overnight but probably built up over the years," Duke says, adding that older buildings and residences with faulty septic fields are the biggest culprits.

Two of the favorite spots for clam-diggers are among the six areas that had warning signs posted on April 25.

One is Mill Bay where the ban extends from Hatch Point southwards to the foot of Frayne Road in Mill Bay. The second is Patricia Bay, where the ban runs from a line between the western boundary of the Union Bay Indian reserve to the foot of Sangster Road.

The sixth area to be put off limits is Cole Bay. There the ban runs between McTavish Road and the small point of land 380 metres to the south of McTavish Road.

Dyke says the requirements are much higher for waters where clams and other bivalve molluscs grow, compared to waters used by swimmers. He says this is because clams and other shellfish siphon through "gallons and gallons of water" daily, building up concentrations of bacteria.

He says a similar situation at the Sooke River Flats several years ago was rectified by removing most of the cause of the pollution, faulty septic-tank systems.

"As an example, the Sooke Hotel spent a fair amount of money," Duke reports.

13-Kilometre Gas Backup

Associated Press

Gasoline lines spilled onto freeways and caused traffic backups up to 13 kilometres long Friday, as California's rationing plan was tested in the pre-weekend gas rush.

The 13-kilometre whopper outside Oxnard, 100 kilometres northwest of Los Angeles, was caused by a spillover onto Highway 101 from a line at a station that turned out to be closed.

It was one of the more spectacular tales of woe told by desperate drivers on the third day of the rationing scheme, which permits motorists to buy gas based on the last digit in their licence plate.

The rationing plan has been adopted by 13 of the state's 58 counties, but those 13 contain about 12 million of the state's 15 million motorists.

Meanwhile in Washington President Carter accused the House of Representatives of "political timidity" for turning down a bill that would have given him power to ration fuel if necessary.

An Associated Press spot check showed that some motorists will find it almost impossible to get gasoline Sunday. Other drivers will find it relatively easy. It all depends on where they live. end supply for visitors.

There have been predictions that the real crunch will come during the Memorial Day weekend.

Nine Die In Fiery Crash

QUESNEL (CP) — Nine persons were killed early today in a fiery two-vehicle crash about 48 kilometres south of this central community, RCMP said.

A car carrying five persons collided with a truck carrying four persons abut 1:30 a.m. on Highway 97.

Police said both vehicles exploded and caught fire.

No names were released. RCMP said the bodies ware severely burned, making identification difficult. All the victims were believed to be from the Quesnel area.

Bomb Game Kills 8 Kids

BEIRUT (AP) — Eight Lebanese children were killed and six wounded when a bomb they were playing with exploded in a southern Lebanese village, authorities said today.

The eight victims, ranging in age from 8 to 13, were brothers and cousins from one family, said a spokesman for the provincial governor in Sidon, administrative capital of southern Lebanon. The blast occurred Friday at the village of Babiliyeh, 12 kilometres south of Sidon and 50 kilometres south of Beirut.

The leftist Beirut newspaper As Safir said the explosive was a U.S.-made "cluster" bomb dropped by an Israeli plane during raids earlier this week on Palestinian targets along Lebanon's southern coastal highway.

Government officials in Sidon would not confirm or deny the newspaper report. However, they said Israel planes dropped cluster bombs during their recent raids in the south.

A Cure for Language Headaches

MONTREAL (CP) — If languages are your headache, certain "capsules" now on the market may ease the pain.

Amis MC 400 Translator capsules, each about the size of a postage stamp, slip into what its makers call the world's "first truly portable, hand-held computer" which can translates words and several complete sentences into three languages at a time.

"It's revolutionized travel," says Reg Scullion, Canadian distributor of the MC 400. "With it, you can go anywhere off the beaten track and you don't constantly have to track down the English hotels so you know what you're eating."

The MC 400 resembles an ordinary pocket calculator except for its keyboard display of both letters and figures. It holds up to three language capsules at a time, each containing a basic 1,500-word vocabulary.

More advanced capsules are planned to hold up to 25,000 words — or what Scullion estimates is 8,000 words more than the average college graduate can retain.

"We all know how tedious it can be putting together a sentence out of dictionary or a textbook," says Scullion. "With the Amis you enter a word or sentence, press a button and there you have the translation.

"There are 50 complete or partial phrases pre-programmed in the computer to speed up the basic communication process."

Commonly used phrases such as "Do you cash travellers' cheques?" and requests for directions appear across the gadget's tiny screen in blue lighting.

Other features include a hold button which prevent proper nouns from being translated and a search button to provide a review of double meanings.

Capsules are now available for six languages: English, French, German, Spanish, Italian and Japanese.

Scullion says a capsule for Russian now is being rushed into production because of a 1,000-unit order from NBC television for reporters covering the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

Plagiarism Stalks Harlequin Heroines

TORONTO (UPC) — The troubled world of the drugstore romance has washed over into real life with the announcement that Harlequin Enterprises Ltd. is suing an American competitor for allegedly plagiarizing five books and publishing them as its own.

Harlequin charged Friday that the course of true love in the pulp novel field had been disturbed by Kim Publishing Corp. of New York and one of its divisions, Macfadden Romances.

Documents filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York allege that Kim Publishing and Macfadden published the five books as "Original Macfadden Romances."

Harlequin said the five alleged plagiarisms involve the competitor's titles The Night Bird's Song, Debut of Love, Love's Tender Path, Light of Love and Blue Sea Interlude.

Harlequin said it has identified two other infringements — The Dark of The Moon and The Bermuda Sunset — which will be included in the suit.

Fred Kerner, vice-president of Harlequin, said in an interview the books were sold in both the United States and Canada. The alleged duplication of plots was discovered by the company's editorial staff in Toronto.

"We recognized plots that were very similar to plots we had done and checking into them we found them the same," he said. "It was a matter of reading both books and comparing plots."

Harlequin produces scores of new titles every year — almost exclusively romances aimed at female readers — which are sold in drugstores and supermarkets.

The legal action, started by Harlequin and its subsidiary Mills and Boon Ltd., calls for damages for copyright infringement, injunctions preventing further distribution of the alleged plagiarisms and impoundment of all copies, costs and attorneys' fees.

"Plagiarism is an act of violence to the creative process," the company said in a news release. "Harlequin will prosecute all persons involved."

Yugoslav Diplomat Getting the Boot

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto-based Yugoslav diplomat accused of harassing Yugoslav-Canadians was ordered expelled from the country Friday, the external affairs department announced.

The department issued a statement saying Mijat Tomic, vice-consul at the Yugoslav consulate general in Toronto, "had used his position in Canada to exert improper pressure on Canadians of Yugoslav origin in order to obtain information and to influence developments in the Canadian Yugoslav community."

The Yugoslavian embassy has been asked to ensure Tomic leaves Canada within seven days, the department statement said.

Jet-Hopping Scientist Carried Plutonium Powder in Suitcase

RICHLAND, Wash. (UPI) — A nuclear chemist violated federal law by packing deadly radioactive plutonium into his suitcase and taking it with him on a five-day cross-county convention trip in 1976.

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported in a copyrighted story today that Atlantic Richfield chemist William H. Zimmer stuffed packages containing 0.34 grams of plutonium — the world's most dangerous radioactive substance — into a suitcase and took it on several commercial airline flights before finally delivering it to Intelrad Tech Corp. in San Diego.

Intelrad officials asked him for the transfer papers authorizing shipment of the lethal material from the Hanford Nuclear Reservation.

"What transfer papers?," said Zimmer, who had 25 years experience handling radioactive materials at Hanford, according to the paper.

When he returned to Hanford to obtain the necessary papers, Atlantic Richfield discovered the violation, which broke at least 11 Hanford regulations, a federal report said.

The nuclear chemist, now employed by a nuclear contractor in Oakridge, Tenn., was given the choice by Atlantic Richfield of resigning or taking a 90-day suspension without pay.

Zimmer, 49, took the 90-day suspension and then resigned.

Transporting the material on commerical airlines is a violation of federal law and the plutonium, also used for making bombs, was not properly packaged or marked as radioactive material, said the federal report.

The plutonium was powdered, which is most dangerous form to humans, but was closely contained in lead foil and high-impact plastic vials, said the report.

Cup to Arsenal In Fiery Finish

LONDON (CP) — Arsenal orchestrated the most stunning finish to an English Football Association Cup final in years today with a last-minute goal that beat Manchester United 3-2.

Arsenal, last year's beaten finalists, appeared to be cruising comfortably with a 2-0 lead and three minutes remaining in regulation time when the roof fell in.

Centre half Gordon McQueen strode into the penalty area to sidefoot home in the 87th minute and 60 seconds later Irish international Sammy McIlroy wriggled through Arsenal's shaky defence and his blocked shot rolled past goaltender Pat Jennings for a sensational equallizer.

But the excitement was far from over.

Meanwhile, in Glasgow, the Rangers' hopes of completing the second part of an impressive soccer treble were thwarted at Hampden Park Saturday when they were held to a goalless draw by Hibernian in the Scottish FA Cup final.

The replay is at Hampden Park on Wednesday.

Last season Rangers completed the hat-trick of Scottish soccer titles — League Cup, Scottish FA Cup and league championship — and were favored to complete the second part of that treble this year.

Blaze Reactor Threat

GARCHING, West Germany (AP) — Fire swept a nuclear research laboratory outside Munich early today but firemen prevented the flames from reaching radioactive materials and a nearby experimental reactor, authorities said.

The six-hour blaze threatened to radioactive material stored in metal containers inside the laboratory but authorities said monitoring showed that no radioactive matter escaped.

The fire was in a research building operated by Munich Polytechnical University and the Max Planck Institute for Plasma Physics in Garching, just north of Munich.

Police cordoned off the site as firemen tackled the blaze and nuclear teams monitored the area for possible radioactive leaks.

Got a call the other day from Victorian Doris Bergbusch who wanted me to help her find five kids. But the story runs a little deeper than that.

You see, she hasn't lost them. It's just that Doris would like to interest five young people aged between 12 and 16 in learning a spot of gardening and reaping the vegetable benefits, as it were.

With a $200 "seed money" grant she has received from the Inter-Church Association to Promote Social Justice in Canada, Doris plans to run the first urban agricultural self-help project in Victoria this summer.

The five youngsters taking part in the project should come from families on Welfare or with low incomes. They will attend classes on gardening, go on field trips to farms and other places and then get practical experience by growing their own vegetables in their yards or on municipal property. If you're interested, you should call Doris at 382-3032. And, as she doesn't have a vehicle, she would also like to hear from anyone willing to drive them on the field trips.

This is, of course, a pretty small-scale start. But it is just that — a start. It's a pilot project which it is hoped will grow and bloom into a new awareness not only in Victoria but across Canada.

An awareness, that is, of the importance of agriculture.

"I agree with the B'hai people who say that agriculture is the world's highest calling," explains Doris who warns that unless young people have direct experience with the soil they cannot identify with today's food problems.

"We have larger and larger cities now and the children who live in them have no idea of what it takes to make plants and food grow," she says.

Sharing in the belief that a country, a province or even an area within either of those, can be self-sufficient providing available land is used to produce food, Doris Bergbusch was involved in a cross-Canada inquiry into community food systems done recently by the People's Food Commission.

"We know that when people reach a certain level of living, they want to stay there or improve," says Doris. "They don't want to look back at the people who are less fortunate. Yet something must be done to feed more people better. We're flying around the moon and there are starving people on this earth."

Hearings have been held by the Food Commission across the nation into all aspects of farming, fishing and food preparation and a report is expected to be released soon.

As an interesting spinoff to this, Doris Bergbusch produced a report entitled Eating Off Vancouver Island. In it she compares the eating habits and health of people in 11 nations of roughly the same land area of the Island but with vastly contrasting populations — nations like Belgium, The Netherlands, Taiwan and Haiti.

It's a fascinating study and one which shows we certainly could be doing a lot more toward becoming self-sufficient in food than we are doing right now.

One point that is made in the report — and one which few people today probably realize — is that some historians feel that in Indian days the population of Vancouver Island may have been twice what it is today. And that the pollution-free land and sea provided amply, and with good variety, the nutritional needs of the people.

In her final recommendation, Doris points out that we are inundated with magazine articles telling us contrasting things about eating and nutrition. And she says what is needed are more nutritionists who are able to counsel the different types of people in Victoria and elsewhere on the Island.

"I would like to have well-trained people who can quietly give dietary advice to a mother and to a family," she explains.

Most people, I'm sure, would agree that more should be done here to encourage the growing of fruit and vegetables on Vancouver Island so that we do not have to rely forever on California for our needs. But some of these people, I'm equally sure, would be a little shocked at a few of the suggestions contained in the report.

Like the lovely sketch of the Legislative Buildings (done by University of Victoria fine arts student Patty Krisman) with a garden planted smack in the middle of the legislative lawns and a sign warning 'Please Don't Pick the Vegetables.' And underneath the sketch is the caption:

Church lawns, cemeteries, even golf courses could be used for growing food. Perfect lawns are a bore. True peace comes from loving God more.

It plugs into cigarette lighter and spots a radar trap up to five miles away — but police fight back

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Ever since they came on the market three years ago, radar detectors have posed something of a dilemma for police in the province.

The only sure-fire method of beating detector-armed motorists has been by using aircraft patrols.

But now, RCMP have found another way.

Staff Sgt. Alec Marchuk, head of the RCMP traffic division in the Lower Mainland says a new type of radar unit has been developed which may well put the brake on the high-flying motorists.

Unlike ordinary stationary radar sets which send out a continuous stream of beams, the new units are only activated when the target car comes within beam range, normally a distance of about a quarter mile.

A motorist with a detector in his vehicle has been able to flout the speed laws because the detector is able to pick up the beams from as far away as five miles. It emits a loud buzz or beep, giving the wary motorist plenty of time to adjust his speed before he reaches the radar trap. With the new sets he will have virtually no time to react.

Marchuk says the units are in use in the Lower Mainland; eventually all sets will be replaced throughout the province.

He says the advent of the detector put a serious crimp in the police officer's ability to curtail the speeders on the province's highways.

"It's really become a major concern to us," he says.

Last summer, police air patrols over Highway 401 through the Fraser Valley noted 86 per cent of the motorists caught travelling at speeds greater than 125 kmh were subsequently found to have detectors in their cars.

More recently a survey of motorists caught doing between 130 to 150 kmh on Highway 99 leading to the border all had detectors.

Not surprisngly, most of the offenders were driving expensive, high-performance vehicles. But a number were salesmen and couriers fighting tight time schedules.

Police have no idea how many detector-equipped vehicles there are on the roads.

Estimates range as high as 20,000 in the Lower Mainland and about 500 on southern Vancouver Island.

John Young, owner of Cal-Van Auto Supply in Victoria, says he's sold several hundred over the past three years.

The detectors, bearing such trade marks as Fuzzbuster, Super Snooper, Radatron and Micro Eye (the only Canadian-made unit), are priced anywhere from $88 to $298 in Victoria.

But Young says that's a small price to pay for a motorist facing possible licence suspension through amassing a collection of speeding tickets.

The provincial government has been examining the detector problem and there is a possibility of tough new legislation being brought in at the next session of the Legislature.

Frank Regan, deputy superintendent of the motor vehicle branch, says a report was presented to the transport minister last fall.

Regan could not comment on the report's contents but other sources indicate it recommends, among other things, prohibiting the use of detectors in B.C.

Several American states and the provinces of Alberta and Ontario have already outlawed the devices.

Regan says such laws have been highly effective in making the detectors disappear from the dashboards of vehicles. But, he adds, there is growing doubt the laws have, in fact, curtailed the use of them.

A recent report by the Ontario ministry of transport pointed out motorists are resorting to ingenious methods to conceal detectors. The devices have been found hidden in fog lights and secreted behind grills. There's only a limited number of possible places because to function properly the devices have to have an uncluttered view of the road ahead.

Regan says the answer isn't so much prohibiting the detector's use as it is finding a way to regulate sale and manufacture.

And that is really a federal matter.

But even if sales were banned in the province, there is a feeling motorists would likely just go somewhere else to buy them.

Young says he's sold a number to Alberta residents. He's even sold one to a man from Italy where police are just now beginning to use radar to curtail speeders.

Federal Election Advance Polls

Advance polling for the federal election began at noon today.

Polls are open until 8 p.m.

Stations for the Esquimalt-Saanich federal riding are Reynolds Senior Secondary school at 3963 Borden for Saanich, Esquimalt Recreation Centre on Fraser for Esquimalt and Saancha Hall for Sidney and North Saanich.

Advance polling continues from noon to 8 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday.

Supreme Court Removes Saanich Indian Barricade

The B.C. Supreme Court Friday granted an injunction ordering the removal of a barricade blocking a road on the Tsawout Indian reserve leading to a commercial campground in Central Saanich.

Band chief Louis Claxton said the barricade of logs has now been removed allowing traffic to pass.

It had been erected by the family of band member Albert Pelkey Sr. on Monday to protest the band council's failure to resolve a land problem.

The Pelkey family contend a portion of their land is taken up by the road and have requested compensation in the form of other lands.

Band chief Louis Claxton said the problem has been brewing for at least six years but the Pelkeys have always asked that a small lot which has been assigned to another family be turned over to them in compensation, something council could not do.

He said the barricade was used as a leverage by the Pelkeys to get their way and saw it as an attempt to embarrass the council.

He denied there were any political overtones despite the fact elections for a new chief will be held the middle of next month.

Claxton said the family has now asked to meet with the council to work out a compromise.

"We think they are willing to come to a good, sensible settlement," he said. "We're hoping to settle it peacefully."

Moped Rider Killed in Crash

Fredrick Andrew McLellan of 4283 Gordon Head was pronounced dead on arrival at Royal Jubilee Hospital at 9 p.m., a half hour after the mishap.

Saanich police said McLellan was thrown about 25 metres and his moped dragged under the front of the car a further 100 metres down the road where it burst into flames.

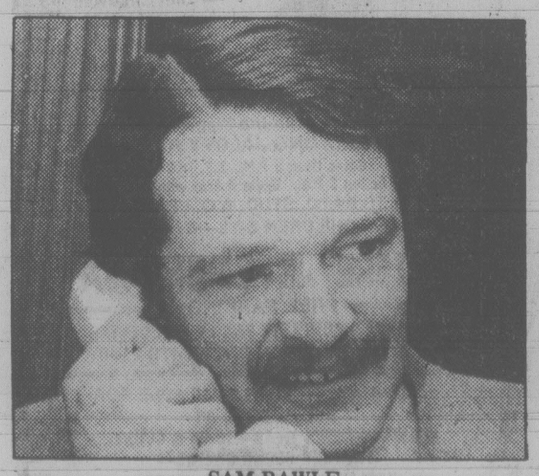
The driver, whose name has not been released, was taken to Saanich police headquarters for questioning. A spokesman said today it is probable charges will be laid, but declined to elaborate.

Don't Let My Dreams for City Wither: Bawlf



SAM BAWLF
. . . eight year task half done

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Provincial Deregulation minister Sam Bawlf today expressed concern Victoria would become content with a few token efforts to preserve its heritage and would demolish the rest of its history under highrises and shopping centres.

"I had planned to do a number of things for the capital city and then move on," he said. "It appears I will be moving on sooner than I expected."

Moving on doesn't mean leaving Victoria although he expects to spend some time in other cities as a consultant on urban planning and transportation.

Victoria remains his first love and he expressed disappointment that he was leaving the job half-completed.

"I looked upon it as an eight-year task."

On his shopping list for the next four years, he said, were the following things:

—The convention centre should be completed and operating as a year-round Victoria cultural hall as well as a meeting place.

—Some effective use must be devised for the Ocean Cement waterfront site, which is currently a parking lot.

—The south shore of the Inner Harbor should become an integrated terminal for jetfoils and seaplanes.

—Laurel Point Inn hotel will be doubled in size.

—Work on restoring the Crystal Garden likely will be completed by September.

—A new waterfront hotel should be contructed across harbor as soon as the tank farms can be removed.

Bawlf said he was not surprised by his election defeat — he knew the NDP was running strongly in the riding — but he was keenly disappointed.

"I hope it was not an indication that Victorians did not support my efforts to restore the city's heritage. I don't feel so badly for myself but I worry what will become of the city if someone reverses the efforts at restoration.

"Often it seems like the city takes one step forward and then two steps back."

Born in Winnipeg (where his grandfather, Nicholas Bawlf, founded the Winnipeg Grain Exchange with R.B. Bennett) Bawlf came to Vancouver at age three.

The family fortunes had disappeared during the depression and Bawlf decided on a career in urban development after graduating from University of B.C.

Ten years ago he came to Victoria on his honeymoon and fell in love with the city. He has lived here ever since.

In 1972 he was elected Victoria city alderman in his first try for office and became chairman of city planning. He was re-elected in 1974, topping the poll, and became chairman of finance.

It was in this capacity he quarrelled with the NDP government over its lack of consultation with the city on development of the capital region.

So he entered provincial politics in 1975, topping the poll, and became chairman of the provincial capital commission, in charge of Victoria's development.

He also became minister of recreation and conservation. Then Premier Bennett gave him a one-year mandate to get B.C. Ferries in order because of continuing labor problems and scheduling difficulties.

At the end of 1978 Bawlf requested and got permission from Premier Bennett to carry out a two-year program of deregulation, aimed at streamlining government departments and reducing red tape.

"I was excited by the job. I am basically an innovator, not an administrator. That is why I moved on from B.C. Ferries after one year. I like to keep moving."

He said he has no plans to return to politics.

Leaders in Debate

A two-hour political debate featuring Pierre Trudeau, Joe Clarke and Ed Broadbent will be broadcast Sunday, May 13, on channels 2, 6 and 8 at 5 p.m.

The ground rules are designed to encourage informal exchanges among the three national leaders, with a minimum of procedural restrictions. After an opening statement by each man, the program will be presented in three, 30-minute segments.

In the first round, Clark debates with Broadbent; in the second, Broadbent faces Trudeau; and, finally, Clark debates with Trudeau. The format then allows four minutes for each speaker's closing remarks.

The issues discussed will evolve mainly from questions posed by three Ottawa correspondents: David Halton (CBC), Bruce Phillips (CTV) and Peter Desbarats (Global).

GARY DIXON, JAYCEES PRESIDENT

Jaycee President's Message . . .

On behalf of the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce I would like to welcome you to the 33rd annual Victoria Exhibition and Jaycee Fair. It has been the privilege and pleasure of the Victoria Jaycees to be able to bring this annual event to Victoria. Without the support of the citizens of Victoria and all the people who help make up the Fair, we would not be now celebrating 33 consecutive years.

The Victoria Jaycees belong to Junior Chamber International, the largest organization in the free world dedicated to the betterment of young people. Membership in the Victoria Jaycees is open to any young man between the ages of 19 and 36 who has in mind the goal of self improvement. If you are looking for this type of challenge I cordially invite you to come out and give us a look-over. See any of the Jaycees at the Fair or call our office, 383-4521, between 11:00 and 3:00 daily.

On behalf of the Jaycees and our affiliate, the Victoria Jaycee-ettes, I hope you have FUN AT THE FAIR.

While Fairs seem built for kids, there is no upper age limit to a "kid". And the Jaycees would like to make sure that all the elderly in Victoria have fun at our Fair.

Admission to the Fair is free, anytime during the Fair. Just show your Pharmacare card at any of the entrance gates and COME ON IN.

Of Special interest to you is the free headliner shows in the Memorial Arena each evening at 8:00, and the matinee on Saturday, May 19, at 4:00 in the afternoon. We feature a fun filled show over an hour long that will make you happy, and keep you happy for the next week.

The best way to get to the Fair is to come by bus. The Lake Hill bus runs by the Quadra Street entrance — just ask the driver to let you off at the Jaycee Fair.

We're sure looking forward to seeing you.

There will also be a photo session and for more details on this exciting event keep listening to VI-90.

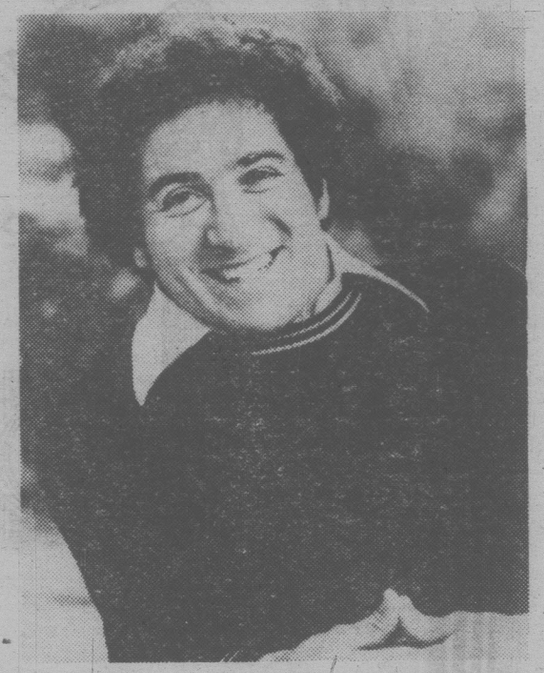
More Than 100 Exhibitors at Exhibition

In the Memorial Arena and Victoria Curling Club the Jaycees present over 100 exhibitors. Our Exhibitors will be demonstrating, selling, presenting, supporting and sponsoring just about everything imaginable. From vacuum cleaners to encyclopedias; from mops to vegetable cutters; from craft displays to radio stations; candy makers to bathtubs . . . they'll all be there.

Our Exhibitors come from Victoria primarily, and these businessmen and organizations have something interesting and exciting to tell you about their business or organization. We also have Exhibitors from all across Canada and the United Sates (if they can get here without gasoline). As in the past, many new products are unveiled at the exhibition and several products available only at the Fair are shown. And for those of you who, over the years, have bought mops . . . he'll be back selling refills again!!

JAYCEES PRESENT HEADLINER SHOW IN ARENA



An annual event of the Jaycee Fair is the headliner show in the Memorial Arena every day of the Fair. This year we have produced a show that is just over an hour long and will appeal to almost everyone who comes to the Fair. The Show times are 8:00 each evening and a Saturday matinee will be featured at 4:00 on Saturday, May 19.

Our feature entertainer this year will be Eddie Mekka. Eddie is more popularly known to us all as "Carmine Ragusa — The Big Ragu" on the hit television show, Laverne and Shirley. At the Fair you won't meet 'Carmine' . . . you'll meet Eddie Mekka . . . and Eddie is much better at singing and dancing than Carmine is!! In his shows he leaves no doubt that he has an acute case of hero worship. In the course of his act, he pays respectful tribute to Gene Kelly, Tony Bennett, Anthony Newley, and the recently departed Charlie Chaplin. The amazing thing is that Mekka makes each and every song his own and undoubtedly the day will come when a newcomer is going to be emulating Mekka.

Our Master of Ceremonies for the Fair will be Mike Caldwell. Mike is well known in the entertainment circuit and will be introducing all our acts. We have a very unusual act this year in Madam Louise and Her Parisienne Doves. The colorful doves do an act that is not limited to just the stage, so you'll have to keep your eyes open . . . and your head covered.

SEE "THE TIPKE OFFENHAUSER" . . .

This "Indy 500" Car Cost Over $75,000!

In the Curling Rink the Jaycees present an act that is bound to please most of the male population of Victoria, and certainly a large percentage of the female population as well.

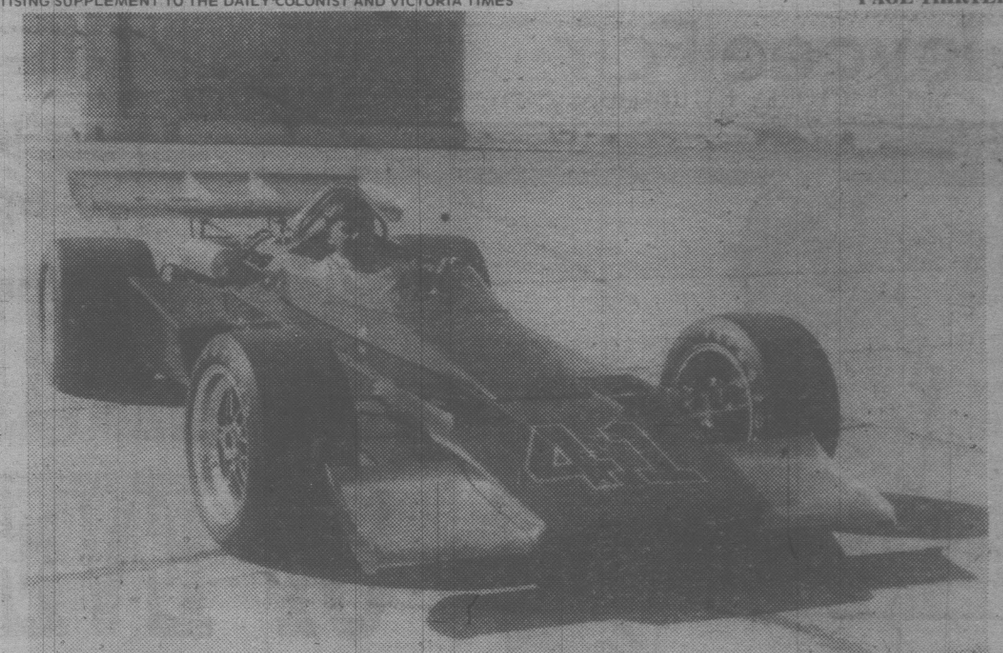
Treat number 1 is "The Tipke Offenhauser", an Indianapolis 500 race car. The car we are showing cost over $75,000 and was designed and built by Jim Tipke. Tom Sneva drove this car in the 500 race recently. Its specifications are fantastic — turbo charged Offenhauser engine — 161.3 cubic inches — 75 gallon fuel tank (at how much a gallon!) — it puts out 8.50 horsepower at 9,000 RPM and that should be enough power to run our midway!

Treats number 2 and 3 are Virve Reid, Miss Playboy for June 1977 and Missy Cleveland, Miss Playboy for April 1979. Both Playmates will be in attendance with the Tipke Offenhauser. In addition to spending many hours at the Fair both Playmates will be doing a number of promotions for the Fair during their week here in Victoria. We hope that you can get out and meet these two lovely Playmates and make them welcome to our town.

Listen to VI-90 for full details.



"Los Argentines" — Gauchos, are next!! The gaucho fury of Lost Argentines, winner of the coveted Las Vegas "Best Act Of The Year Award" are here to perform for you. Los Argentines explode on stage to fiery rhythms of South American indian drums . . . jingling spurs . . . flashing knives . . . whirling flame-covered boleadroas (bolos) . . . clashing spears . . . and frenzied choreography. Wrapped in pulsating light, electronically lighted by fiercely pounded drums, bolos clicking, horse-like rhythms and the Gauchos' savage screams!! There's more . . . but you'll have to come to the Fair's Headliner Show to see it.

Comedy too. We present "Willy Keo — the Diving Buffoon". Willy has found a new way to pursue the sport of diving . . . no water in the pool. Will he live to the end of the Fair?? I think so.

For the children we will again be presenting special entertainment on their own stage. David Wilson, a talented ventriloquist will be our star feature. And as a special feature for the children the Victoria City Police will be presenting their Safety Bear. For times, check the schedule of events on the last page of this flyer. The stage will be in the Memorial Arena, north end, mezzanine level.

We believe that we've got a fun, fast-paced and entertaining show for you. Remember, it's at 8:00 each night and it's free to Fair patrons.

For the first time ever, participation by Palm Dairies and the Provincial Government (Information Branch) will be featured.

The Provincial Government Department of Agriculture will occupy a booth in the Victoria Curling Club. This Booth will appeal to all members of the public! Palm Dairies have consented to donate gift certificates for their products, for correctly naming the articles in the Kiddies petting barn.

Again this year we are proud to feature the South Malahat 4-H Club who will man and participate in "Old McDonald's Farm."

For the first time ever the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Victoria Exhibition Society will make available through the University of British Columbia School of Agriculture a Scholarship in the amount of $250, for any member of the South Malahat 4-H Club, who wishes to further a career in Agriculture.

The Vancouver Island Rabbit Breeders will hold a competition Thursday through Saturday in the Curling club. This show is sanctioned by the American Rabbit Breeders and the judge for the competition will be Gordon Fry from the state of Kansas. (It should be understood by the public that there are no Canadian Rabbit judges available in the province.)

Come One! Come All!!

JAYCEES VOLUNTEERS PUT ON FAIR

This Jaycee Fair, as with the past 32, have been put together by members of the Victoria Jaycees. All volunteers. Planning for this Fair started well over a year ago and countless meetings and hours have been spent by a committee of 18 Jaycees and Jaycee-ettes in order to bring you this entertainment. During the Fair all members of the Victoria Jaycees and the Victoria Jaycee-ettes put in countless hours at the Fair and we are assisted by our wives; past Jaycees; Jaycees from other units in B.C.; friends and others who get "Fair fever" and can't stay away. Without this support the Fair wouldn't be . . . our hats off to the volunteers.

Barbara Hershey Does Hollywood Hustle

By JAY BOBBIN

In Canada and in the United States, a lovely and abundantly talented young actress is garnering acclaim for the role that she deems to be one of the most challenging in her career . . . that of the pacifist spy Madeleine in the multi-part miniseries "A Man Called Intrepid," presented in America on NBC and in Canada on CTV. Her name is Barbara Hershey, and she has become something of a fixture in television and theatrical films during the last decade.

Born and raised in Holywood (she attened the legendary Hollywood High School), Barbara first came onto the acting scene in a 1960s TV Western "The Monroes," which told of the adventures of five orphans in the Old West. She transferred to movies shortly thereafter.

Those who viewed the recent repeat telecast of the Doris Day-Brian Keith movie "With Six You Get Eggroll" will remember her as Keith's teenage daughter. Among the viewers that evening was Barbara herself. Asked in a telephone interview how she felt about seeing it again, she responded, "The same way I felt when I made it . . . I was embarrassed! What else can I say?"

Happily for the attractive actress's self-esteem and overall career, several of her subsequent roles have been more memorable. She was one of the four youths in director Frank Perry's highly acclaimed "Last Summer." She was the sole star of "The Baby Maker" in 1970, and she claims that "I was not prepared for how wonderful it felt . . . I loved the responsibility of it."

After playing the title role in the now-famous Martin Scorsese's "Boxcar Bertha," she left active work for a couple of years to raise her child. Her relatively recent return to TV-movies has yielded fine performances in "Just A Little Inconvenience," "In The Glitter Palace" and "Sunshine Christmas." She found her role in "A Man Called Intrepid" especially intriguing, though, for several reasons.

"She (Madeleine) was the first real-life character I've ever played," says Barbara. "She was a pacifist acting in a time of war. In the entire story, the most interesting thing to me was not the actual war itself, but rather the war going on inside the people . . . their own personal battles. Madeleine had a violent one, with her commitment and ideals pitted against her emotions." This includes a reference to the emotional decisions her character must make after she becomes intimately involved with a fellow spy, portrayed in the drama by Michael York.

Hershey as caurageous Madeleine

"In reality," she continues, "spies were you and me and the man at the grocery store. To me, it's so much more interesting if they're real people. It has more meaning if they ARE frightened and lonely. That seems much more courageous to me, to take that stand, than if they're some unfeeling, supercool sort of suave spy."

Being involved in the multi-million-dollar production, which was filmed on location in Montreal, England and Norway, brought Barbara a great deal of pleasure. "I loved working with the English crew and actors. They're so willing to discuss each other's parts, and that helps the overall process." She also enjoyed being surrounded by suave Englishmen York and David Niven (who, she revealed, actually WAS a spy during World War II). "They were unbelievably kind and very helpful.

Thinking of other roles she has gotten particular satisfaction from, the actress refers to "Just A Little Inconvenience," in which she played a woman romantically involved with an amputee. "I guess that was one of the first films to really deal with a handicapped person overcoming the problems of his condition . . . it makes me feel good to have been involved with a story that mattered." Barbara finds the making of TV-movies to be fascinating, even though she has been cast as a love interest more times than not. "I don't mind being the love interest, but if that's the sole excuse for the character, then it's pretty uninteresting for me."

Another film she is very enthusiastic about is the forthcoming "Stuntman," co-starring Peter O'Toole and Steve Railsback and aiming for a fall release date. "That is the most demanding part I've had. O'Toole plays a movie director, and I'm his actress." The movie-with-in-a-movie motif of the film causes Barbara's character, an Austrian woman, to age from 17 years of age to nearly 80. It's a movie in which nothing is as it seems . . . even the title's a little misleading. "Every time you see my character, she's different."

When questioned about any other sort of role she'd like to play, Barbara responds, "I'd like to play a real cad right about now. I haven't played one for a while. As soon as I play a certain part, I want to play the exact opposite." That's a testament to Barbara Hershey's expressed preference for a wide variety of roles. She's not certain of her next assignment at this point, which worries her just a bit, but she'll undoubtedly bring a rare charm and beauty to the role . . . be she cast as a cad or not.

To Twirl or Not to Twirl

BY JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — If this is "The Waltons," it must be Thursday. If this is "Little House on the Prairie," it must be Monday.

That's how CBS and NBC want the viewer to feel, just like in the old days before the networks began to play 52-pickup with their schedules — and before ABC was the dominant network in prime time ratings. ABC will continue to take a bolder approach and scramble its schedule.

As for the content of new shows in the fall 1979-1980 television season, it is what former CBS Television president Bob Wussler characterized when pressed as "more of the same."

From Buck Rogers, most recently of movie fame, to Trapper John, once of "M-A-S-H," from Benson (late of "Soap") to an updated Frankenstein sitcom, almost every one of the 20 new shows that the three networks announced with such fanfare, and will promote at great expense, owes a debt to the past.

In scheduling, however, ABC has taken an aggressive position, moving some of its top shows out of place — shifting "Mork £ Mindy" to Sunday night and breaking "Laverne £ Shirley" off from "Happy Days" and moving it into Thursday night.

CBS, on the other hand, is aiming for program stability. All but one of its old favorites will return in their familiar time slots — the exception is "The Jeffersons," moving to Sunday night.

CBS has left Monday, Thursday and Friday intact in the upcoming season and has made only minimal changes on Sunday. NBC also has attempted to maintain the status quo by shifting only two of its returning shows, "Diff'rent Strokes" and "Hello, Larry."

With "Laverne £ Shirley" gone from Tuesday night, CBS will try to make inroads with a kid-oriented show called "We're Cruisin'."

NBC Entertainment president Mike Weinblatt agrees that ABC "has taken a big gamble, breaking up it schedule. It's daring. It could work but it's a very high risk."

He admitted that NBC had done its share of bait-and-switch programing in recent years, but said he believed the network now was back to trying "to keep stability and build continuity of viewing — a philosophy we have not been most consistent in following recently."

As he pointed out, aside from moving two shows, returning programs such as "Little House on the Prairie," "CHiPs" and "Quincy" would be back at their old stamping grounds.

"It's not that we had no good half-hours," Weinblatt said, adding that NBC was ordering several half-hours for later scheduling.

But the NBC brass has backed off from its admittedly too fast pace of introducing new shows last February, many of them not ready for airing.

"Now we looked at each time period," Weinblatt said, "and tried to take a slower, step by step pace, analyzing very carefully, as a surer way to get an audience.

"We particularly examined 8 o'clock on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, where we are up against very strong half-hour or hour comedy — 'Happy Days,' 'Eight Is Enough' and 'Laverne £ Shirley.' We felt we had to go a different route or we'd be stuck, sitting there with 20 shares (shows attracting only 20 percent of viewers) or lower. That's why we've gone in for adventure and light adventure as most likely to work against this competition."

That means "The Misadventures of Sheriff Lobo" on Tuesday and "Buck Rogers in the 25th Century" on Thursday. On Wednesday NBC believes it has a real winner — not a theoretical one — in "Real People."

"Diff'rent Strokes" and "Hello, Larry" were moved from Friday to Wednesday because NBC believes "Strokes" is a contender for Top 10 in the Nielsens. Friday, a low viewing night, could hurt its chances.

Philosophy aside, half-hour comedies are the building blocks of television — CBS's Daly calls them "the heart of successful network comedy" and has added three new ones to the CBS schedule. By next winter, NBC will follow suit.

"If this is The Waltons, it must be Thursday — that's how the network wants the viewer to feel."

Milner Has New Role in the Community

By SUZANNE CHONEY

DEL MAR, Calif. — A policeman on television's long-running "Adam-12" series, actor Martin Milner takes his role here in this wealthy coastal community as seriously as he did in the squad car.

A resident of the city within the last year, Milner recently was named president of the Del Mar Beachfront Property Owners' Association, which is working with the city to settle the matter of beach encroachment.

Milner's house is one of those along the ocean, and he is concerned that the city deal fairly with the property owners. The city contends some of the property owners have built patio decks, walls and ice plant banks beyond their property lines, and that those encroachments will have to be removed to provide more public beach access.

Milner started attending council meetings a few months ago, speaking up in behalf of the property owners. Then at a meeting of the property owners, he was nominated for the board, and named president.

"I was going to refuse," he said. "So often when someone in my profession gets involved, the fact that I do what I do gets in the way, and it looks like I'm a dilettante."

They moved to Del Mar, north of San Diego, after living for seven years in inland Fallbrook, where the family had 24 acres of avocados and lots of open space.

One thing they didn't have that they enjoy in Del Mar is the beach.

"It's a nice little community, and it has a beautiful beach," said Judy.

At 47 Milner retains his strong features and look of credibility as the kind of guy who could play Pete Malloy — one of the two officers in "Adam-12", the series created by Jack Webb, who also fostered "Dragnet".

Having appeared as a bachelor accompanying George Maharis in his travels in the "Route 66" television series for four years, and as a regular on the "Life of Riley" and "Stu Irwin" shows, Milner looks back on his role in "Adam-12" as his favorite. The show ran for seven years, ending in 1975.

"I liked the statement the show made," he said. "It narrowed the bridge of misunderstanding that existed between law enforcement and the general public."

Milner said he often received letters from "cops in little towns" saying how much they appreciated the show. And, often the shows were used as training films for police officers.

"It wasn't fluff, and it did the public some good," he said. The show even had a representative from the Los Angeles Police Department as an adviser, checking scripts for accuracy.

"We tried as hard as we could to make the show entertaining," Milner said. "A lot of police work is paperwork, and we tried to minimize that part."

Since "Adam-12", Milner has kept busy with television movies and plays.

Most recently, in the television movie "Little Mo", he portrayed young tennis star Maureen Connolly's first tennis teacher.

He is happy to be free of the regular drudgery of a television series, saying, "If I wanted to work all the time, I couldn't be here."

Born in Detroit, Milner lived in Seattle and went to high school and college in Los Angeles, where he started acting at age 9.

Unlike many who saw television evolve in the '50s, Milner is not nostalgic about the past.

"We have a tendency to look at the good old days," he said. "But we have to remember, there was a lot of junk. As good a show as 'Playhouse 90' was, it was good one out of three shows, usually."

"My wife has a theory that you need to shake your life up occasionally by moving," he said, looking out the wide ocean window of his living room. "I don't know, though. This sure is a beautiful place."

Martin Milner

SPOTLIGHT ON STARS

By RUTH THOMPSON

Where and how does a television show start?

If, as in the case of Bruce and Carole Hart (she co-produced some of Marlo Thomas's major epics) you already have a track record, you can get your newest concept — a teenager trauma titled "Sooner or Later" — to an NBC programming chieftan like Paul Klein.

If he likes it — and he did — you also get a green light. You also take a gamble, but you love it.

Bruce explains: "We have both a financial and an esthetic commitment. Carole and I have been co-writers in the past, as again in this. But this was the first time I have directed. She is the producer."

Their task, their hope, is to tell the story of a middle middle-class 13-year-old from Yonkers, N.Y., (played by Denise Miller of "Fish" and "Makin' It"). She lies and says she's 16 and attracts an "older man" of 18 (Rex Smith), the local rock heartthrob, and finds that fibbing gets her into a tight spot. Nothing hopeless, though.

Denise, says Carole, is such a good actress that she and Bruce overlooked the young lady's potential as show-cased in "Fish" where her Brooklyn patrois and gum-chewing came across as for-real. "We needed a gentle intelligent type," which — after 600 auditions — turned out to be Denise.

Heartthrob Rex was scouted for his singing and his look. "He'd never acted before but luckily he turned out to be a natural," says Carole, who also believes that landing this role may have changed Rex's course from punk rock toward mellower sound and better money. His upcoming album is less raucous, Bruce adds. Bruce, by the way, did all the lyrics for "Sooner or Later," which airs next Sunday (March 25) and costars Barbara Feldon, Judd Hirsh, Lynn Redgrave and Morey Amsterdam.

Cicely Tyson isn't giving up drama. No indeed. But at least with the movie "Airport '79 Concorde" she's stepping into modern times as a tormented mother flying her young son across the Atlantic to Paris for a heart transplant.

And after all, why not a shift to nowadays? After what happened a couple of weekends ago in Monaco what's left for her to prove with period pieces?

Cicely, we remind you, as the star of "A Woman Called Moses," copped a statuette at the International Televison Festival of Monte Carlo (for portraying Harriet Tubman during and after the Civil War) as Best Actress . . . and that means worldwide. (Charles Vanel of France was named Best Actor. As 'The Ropers' Move On

Audra Lindley Spins Into Second success

Audra Lindley and Norman Fell

By DAN LEWIS

HOLLYWOOD — For more than a dozen years, Audra Lindley toiled in one flop Broadway show after another, 14 in succession; she loved every minute of it. Then she ran into bad luck, a couple of hit shows; she hated it.

Miss Lindley explains this strange reaction:

"Hits meant long runs. I didn't like long runs. You can go crazy with them — doing the same thing night after night." She resented her 14-month run in "Take Her, She's Mine," which was followed by "Spofford" with Melvin Douglas.

But long runs in theater and television are different arenas. Television success is more to Miss Lindley's liking.

For three seasons she has been a co-star on "Three's Company." This spring, she and Norman Fell, who plays her husband, have been spunoff into their own limited series, "The Ropers." The test run garnered impressively high ratings.

She enjoys doing television, especially playing Mrs. Roper, the frizzy redhead with the blatant sexual overtones. Fell plays her frumpy, unmoved husband.

"It's a fun show," she says of "Three's Company." "So many people go to work feeling miserable, but I'm very lucky. A lot of actresses my age have been forced to retire because there are no roles for them. Here I am, going from one series into another, in the same role."

How does she explain the success of "The Ropers"?

"I don't understand it," she confesses, "except that we (she and Fell) had the advantage of some three years on a hit show. So the public came to know us. Most spinoff series star people who were in the roles for only one or two performances before they went into the spinoff."

There is irony in the success of "The Ropers" in that, generally, the critics were unenthusiastic in their reviews.

That doesn't bother Miss Lindley.

"Anyone who thinks of himself as a critic, right off he's putting himself down if he likes situation comedies," she contends. "Sitcoms are beneath them (the critics) to like a show of this genre. The reviewer for one of the trade papers called it 'pure art.' He was reviewing for the trade, not for himself."

Asked her reaction to the new series, she responds, "I like it very much because I accept it as it is. A hit series gives you tremendous popularity. You get better recognition from television than any other media. It's an extraordinary stroke for an actor to get a series. Brings in all kinds of things. Look at Jane Fonda. She's won an Oscar, but now she says that she wants to do television because she wants wider recognition."

Miss Lindley is a convert to television. She wasn't really interested, she insists, when she first got a call to do the pilot for "Three's Company."

"They wanted me to do the pilot on a Sunday, but I was doing a play at the Huntington Hartford Theater," she recalls. "So ABC bought out the matinee performance, refunded ticket money to those who paid for the performance. I was flattered, although I really wasn't interested in doing the series."

But once she got involved, she knew "Three's Company" had success written all over it, and she also knew there would be a spinoff for "The Ropers."

She's careful now about being typecast. "I did 'Bridget Loves Bernie,' and played the girl's mother, a sort of dippy blond type. So then I got calls for all the dippy blond roles that came up."

When the Roper character surfaced, she wanted to make her different. So Miss Lindley put on a red wig, wore an oversized kaftan and big shoes.

When she's on hiatus, she picks things to do very carefully, looking for the good roles, not necessarily the big ones.

Off the series, Miss Lindley is a liberated spirit these days. Recently divorced from actor James Whitmore ("It was a happy divorce," she declares), she's moved into a luxury apartment.

She and Whitmore have five children and four grandchildren.

She laughs, and reports, "I talk to the kids every day, almost.

The woman who grew up in Hollywood, then moved to New York with $200 in her possession, declares, "I'm a New Yorker at heart. I always thought I'd be a star in theater. It was my dream, to act on stage. That's when you're young. All those ideals and fantasies. Then you mature and get your feet on the ground and realize that, in this business, you can be big this year and down the next year. People disappear so fast in television."

Crosby's Career Froths Higher and Higher

By DAN LEWIS

There may be fewer calories in that certain beer that Norm Crosby has been touting in television commercials the past year, but it surely has fattened his bank account.

From the single commercial, Crosby's career has skyrocketed.

His nightclub price has gone up considerably. For the first time in his long career, the veteran comic, whose stock-in-trade has been humor based on malapropism, has signed a contract for Las Vegas Hotels (the Hughes chain). Crosby has been a fixture in Las Vegas for many years, but always on the come line — never with any agreements for minimum.

Now, he has an eight-week pact with the Hughes hotels, and already has appeared for 16 weeks, which, Crosby reports, has tripled his income in that city of crap tables and roulette wheels.

"This has been the most exciting spurt in my career — a rebirth," Crosby exults. In normal conversation, contrary to his stage image where he emasculates the king's English, Crosby is quite articulate as he discusses his career's boom.

"I had reached a comfortable level," he explains. "I was doing all the television variety shows and went on Carson's and Dinah's show regularly, and I worked regularly in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe. Everything was solid."

Then came the commercial (Natural Beer) in which he extolled the virtues of a product with fewer calories that the customary brew. The first commercial quickly became popular, and so Crosby was offered a second one by the same company.

"I did both of those for scale," he recalls. "The result was terrific. For me, it was great. I was getting exposure seven days a week, on all three networks, and at all time. I was in there during specials, major sports events."

The benefits began to multiply. Crosby says the sales for the product went up 45% in the year. The company came to him with a big deal.

NORM CROSBY: Hot TV Property

It also led directly to a hosting spot on a syndicated variety show, "The Comedy Shop," which has just been renewed for 26 weeks.

"I'm getting other offers, too — all from the commercial," he believes. "A series will come about. When you get hot in one area, everybody comes looking for you. I've had offers for network series. But I'm not hungry. I've waited this long, and I can wait for the right thing."

Meanwhile, you can hardly turn anywhere without seeing Crosby's image, either on television, or billboards or in magazine and newspaper advertisements as the beer company steps up its campaign.

"Wherever I go, people come up to me and say how much they like the commercials. You know, the commercials have won a half-dozen awards," he reveals.

"I don't have to take the non-essential career bookings," he asserts. "I can spend more time at home (originally from Massachusetts, Crosby lives in Los Angeles) with my two boys. They're 4 and 9 years old, and it used to be I would have to take them with me, and they would live in the hotels, if I wanted to spend time with them."

It bothered Crosby to raise his kids in hotels so he bought a second home, in Las Vegas, where he spends most of his nightclub working time.

"When I had them in the hotels, the executives were always buying them gifts — like $200 train sets, and $150 toys," Crosby complains.

As for the success of "The Comedy Shop," Crosby contends that it does well because it is an easy format, for the comics and the viewers.

"No one does more than three and a half minutes," says Crosby. "So, if you don't like one comic, you don't have to watch him very long. Also, the show is worked out so that the viewer can move away from the set any time, come back and not feel as if they have missed anything. The show works because there is no involvment — no plot. Just five comics each week who are mostly new faces to the television audience. It's a fun show, and we're giving a lot of kids a chance to get a piece of film and national exposure at the same time. There aren't shows for the new talents anymore."

Dick Cavett with Robin Williams

Out-of-this World Interview

What happens when an extraterrestrial force overcomes the urbane and witty Dick Cavett at a loss for words?

On May 15 and 16, "The Dick Cavett Show" is invaded by Robin Williams, the star of ABC's "Mork and Mindy." This is Williams' first talk-show appearance, and it shouldn't be missed.

Dressed in a wild Hawaiian print shirt and baggy beige trousers, Williams looks, at least, the quintessential of California cool; at most, he could be a vistor from another planet.

The usual Cavett-visitor Ping-Pong match of conversation is trumped by Williams as he improvises and jokes through the first half hour. Cavett has a list of questions for the brilliant young comedian. But the questions are twisted or unanswered.

A Russian accent, an Indian imitation and slips into Orkan gibberish switch Williams' English into a mad rush of laughter-invoking jokes.

Williams can't sit still for a minute. He dashes about the studio, plays with toys that Cavett thoughtfully placed on the set and makes cracks about the studio audience.

Cavett perseveres with the mad comedian, though. Undaunted by unanswered queries, he gleans answers, of a sort, to Williams attitude to stagefright, instant fame, his idols, his improvisational technique and his up-coming moving, "Popeye."

Since both Williams and Cavett have classical backgrounds — Williams spent three years at the Julliard School in New York, and Cavett has Shakespearean training — they embark on an improvisational interpretation of Shakespeare with a current-events twist.

Although Williams has the bard by his tongue, Cavett keeps pace. The ensuing skit could split the sides of a Supreme Court judge.

Although this is Robin Williams' first year in the limelight, his rare versatility and originality are talents that can only grow stronger. For the millions who were unable to see Williams live in his New York appearance, this two-part stint with Dick Cavett gives a more intimate view of Williams than a whole season of "Mork and Mindy."

ACTING MOTHER

"My daughter is like 'Eloise at the Dorset'," jokes Blythe Danner as she revels in the pleasures of a visit to New York. The blonde, blue-eyed actress with the distinctively raspy voice started out on the New York stage. Many films and television specials later, she's visting from California with her television-producer husband and two young children.

She discusses her recent projects and reveals that she's very selective about what she accepts. Modestly, she says, "I'm lucky in that I'm not that well-known. I'm able to go back and forth and do lots of different kinds of women."

This year Blythe did "Too Far to Go" for NBC, a feature film and the upcoming (May 16) CBS comedy. "You Can't Take It With You."

She calls "Too Far to Go," in which she plays a middle-aged housewife going through a divorce, her swan song to ingenue roles. Then smiles and admits the subsequent role of Alice in "You Can't Take It With You" is another ingenue part.

Blythe describes the play as "very funny! great humor."

These days Blythe's choice of projects is limited by her two children, a son, 3½, and a daughter, 6½. They are the biggest productions in her life.

INTRODUCING THE ADVENT/1

The Advent/1 is a smaller, less expensive version of the most popular and most imitated speaker in North America: the New Advent Loudspeaker. It uses the same woofer and tweeter as the New Advent, but in a smaller cabinet.

The results are nothing short of amazing. Its smooth, rich, wide-range sound sets new performance standards for its price range. It literally out-performs speakers selling for three times as much. Before you spend more than $169. each on new speakers, be sure to hear the new Advent/1's.

The impressive low-profile exterior, finished in mixed horizontal, vertical and diagonal channel siding, and with double brick chimneys and shake roof, presents a pleasing modern facade which would harmonize well into any urban or suburban setting.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Robert Reid of Ajax has become interested in fruit jars and wants some tips on how to collect them.

I had assumed that by now everyone knew all about fruit jars and exactly how to collect them, but Mr. Reid sounds like a young man and his letter is a reminder that new generations of collectors are constantly coming on stream and have to find out everything for the first time.

On several occasions I have referred to this as the golden age of Canadian collecting — golden because not everything has been discovered, not everything has been taken into collections, by no means everything is known and it is still possible for a collector to fasten onto entirely new aspects of collecting and do some authentic pioneer work.

I suspect that this is no longer possible as far as fruit jars are concerned and Mr. Reid will find himself treading some well worn paths.

● Stick to Canadian jars. There are hundreds, maybe thousands of different makes, sizes and designs — enough to keep you busy for years. The only American jars you are likely to find will be so common as to be worthless.

● Regardless of rarity, hang on to all pint-size jars you can find. They are generally scarcer than the quarts and half gallons and are attractive to collectors because they are more easily displayed — and if they are more attractive they are bound to be more valuable.

● Get a book. Chapters on fruit jars appear in most books on Canadian Glass but what you need is a comprehensive check list which describes and illustrates all the known variations. The best book I have seen on this subject is The Canadian Fruit Jar Report by John Barclay of R.R. No. 2, Kentbridge, Ontario, N0P 1V0. It cost $15.00 a couple of years ago and is probably more expensive today — that is if it is still in print.

By variations I mean all the permutations of sightly different wording embossed in the glass, different styles of lettering, differences in the same trademark.

You need a book too in order to learn something of the history of the fruit jar industry. The common jars were made by large successful companies. Glass makers who went quickly out of business left only a few samples of their wares — and it is these which are the most valuable.

You need to be able to recognize machine made jars as opposed to hard blown jars. You learn to keep an eye open for matching lids — essential in the most perfectly collectible jar.

Canadian fruit jars are becoming more and more expensive and your only protection is knowledge. A good book helps and the advice of another serious collector would be invaluable. This is no longer an innocent market. Your chance of finding a Beehive jar in a garage sale for 50¢ is remote. On the contrary, the new collector is faced with the worse of both worlds. — those who are knowledgable assume that all fruit jars are valuable and hopefully offer their Crowns and Balls at absurdly inflated prices.

The golden age of fruit jar collecting ended when the last cellar had been exhausted of its treasures. Of course there is always one more cellar with its dusty shelf of goodies but experienced collectors have combed the backwoods with great thoroughness and it is reasonable to assume that virtually all the good specimens are now part of the fruit jar market.

This does not mean that fruit jars are no longer worth collecting, only that you are unlikely to buy one for $1 today and sell it for $50 next week. But today's $50 jar should still be worth $250.00 a century from now.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, R.R. No. 1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

Looking At Stars

Well said. Even before the TV film's first airing (Tuesday night, April 17 on CBS) his performance had so impressed the Time-Life producers and David Susskind that they've signed Kevin for three more movies.

Yet after he'd auditioned, he rushed out of the studio rather than wait for the verdict. The producers ran after him . . . but down the wrong corridor. "It was very emotional. I was a little messed up. Apparently so were they because nobody spoke." Kevin got the word by phone when he got home.

Kevin says his break proves an actor should never be too proud to test for a role . . . also to use his ingenuity and do a little more than was asked.

"The two scenes they assigned didn't show much about me beyond what they already knew of me as Crocker in 'Kojack.'" But "Transplant" is the drama of a real man who gambled on a donor heart to replace his diseased one. "My wife Susan Greene and I flipped for one part of the script especially, so I asked to do that scene, too." And that's the one that did it.

Novel Sinks Under Weight of Two Authors

Two suspense novels from the west coast this week; one as good as the other is awful. First, the bad news: Hambro's Itch, by Howard Robens and Jack Wasserman, is one of those books that make anyone who has ever aspired to be a writer marvel anew at the vagaries of the publishing industry.

The publisher responsible for foisting Hambro's Itch on the innocent public is Doubleday. Doubleday Canada Ltd. is a wholly-owned subsidiary of its U.S. parent and has been in operation in this country for over 30 years. Last year it published 18 Canadian titles, which is a pretty good record for a branch-plant firm.

But it's hard to see what Doubleday's editors were thinking of when they allowed Hambro's Itch to appear in its present state. Reorganized, pruned, rewritten — well, maybe. One of its authors (Robens) is a high school science teacher; the other (Wasserman) is a "free lance writer and editor." Between them they've produced a book which reminds one of that old joke about a camel being a horse that was designed by a committee. It's ironic, because what the novel still needs is a literary version of that well-known Hollywood institution, the script doctor.

There are some moments in Hambro's Itch that rival Three Days of the Condor. But they're lost in a sea of prose that has rephrased cliches bouncing around in it like flotsam. The beginning of the novel is especially weak. Here's Robens and Wasserman telling us a lady is dead: "Closer examination will reveal a person in form only. The unique set of organizing principles that expressed itself in the vital substance of Violet Beauman has sometime previously ceased to be, and what remains is a largely nonfunctioning collection of tissue and accretions. Their arrangement now is a mere parody of a young woman."

Hambro's Itch is about said Violet's mysterious death and the efforts of her fiance, Martin Albarez, to track down her killer and, more importantly, to uncover the plot behind the mysterious destruction of her "largely nonfunctioning collection of tissue and accretions."

Albarez, naturally, is like a cross between Robert Redford and Superman. His antagonists are a group of megalomaniacs bent on mass genocide. What with dastardly machinations, grubby sex and florid prose to contend with, Redford-Superman has a tough time of it. Not to mention the hapless reader.

Finally, as if all that weren't enough, Robens and Wasserman have seen fit to relate their story in a manner that resembles a jigsaw puzzle at the moment of opening the box. Readers who clench their teeth and struggle bravely on to the last page will be rewarded by the discovery that an important piece is missing.

* * *

Icequake, by Crawford Kilian, on the other hand, is a professional piece of work. With U.S., U.K. and Canadian paperback rights already in the bag and movie rights "currently being negotiated in Hollywood", the book seems destined for major success.

Set in Antarctica in 1985, Icequake describes the effect of a massive quake on the inhabitants of a scientific research station. It's another "disaster" story, but unlike the typical disaster epic it holds reader interest on human as well as technological and factual grounds.

Kilian's characters are not all that "round", but at least they're convincing. At times they're even capable of humor, as in this exchange between lovers: "Poor old Pen. That's the worst sunburn I've ever seen." "Yours is almost as bad." "I know. We must look like a couple of amorous pomegranates."

The icequake itself is effectively described: "(she) saw flints of light far down in the darkness, a suggestion of something moving, and realized after a moment what it was: the waters of the Ross Sea, open to the sky for the first time in a hundred thousand years . . ."

The quake's immediate effect on the station is to set it adrift in a sea of other ice islands, all bound for smash-up against a ridge of hills beneath the Ross Sea. The presence of a CANDU nuclear reactor as the electricity generator for the station helps add to the suspense.

Icequake's a winner because it deals with a world-shaking event in concrete human terms. The research needed to write the story is always evident, but never obtrusive. This gives the reader the happy feeling that for Crawford Kilian, producing a good story was more important than advertising his own cleverness. Would that all writers of science-based fiction felt that way.

Flights of Fancy to Escape Their Fate

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Here are two American novels that are both, in part and in their own ways, concerned with the notion of flight.

The title character of William Wharton's first novel is, to put it mildly, a fancier of birds: pigeons at first, which he and his friend Al feed on the city streets, and then canaries, for whom Birdy eventually builds a home in his bedroom.

As Birdy's fascination with his friends grows — and he is enthralled particularly with their ability to fly, which he tries more than once and in a variety of ways to imitate (all unsuccessfully) — the extent of his separation from the species to which he genetically belongs becomes clear to the reader:

"I wish," Birdy muses, "I could . . . be born again as a bird. I wish I could live in that nest and be warmed under Birdie's feathers and be fed by her and snuggle with my brothers and sisters. . . ."

Birdy's friend Al, with whom he shares this narrative, is also a lonely boy; and though he tries to assuage his loneliness by indulging frenetically in all the "normal" activities expected of him, his sense of isolation is at least as great as Birdy's.

Wharton manages very ably, then, to render these two boys' struggle against their fate; and surely one of the most touching aspects of that fate is the tentative sharing of it that animates at least a part of these lives.

Wharton isn't as sure, though, when he advances some slick psychology to account both for his characters' oddities and what might be called our general situation.

One can only presume, from what Wharton offers us, that Birdy is hooked on birds because his mother is "a bitch", and that Al's devotion to wrestling stems from his hatred of his father. True enough all that may be, but the simplistic presentation of these parents and the dynamics between them and their children mitigates against a more profound understanding of the bind they have all found themselves in.

And so with our understanding of our common fate:

"What's crazy?" Al asks. " . . . We all have our own private craziness. If it gets in the way of enough people, they call you crazy."

And Birdy comments:

"Maybe crazy people are the ones who see things clear but work out a way to live with it."

Although Al tries to bolster his idea with a one-dimensional rendering of an Army psychiatrist, we aren't convinced, even if his remarks begin to touch a truth we can respond to; and as for Birdy, he should remember — if he knows — that the essence of craziness is precisely the inability to live with what you see so clearly.

By that standard, then, both Al and Birdy are, it turns out, as sane as you or anyone else might be.

Chamber Music is the recollections of Robert's wife Caroline, who met and married the composer in the 1890s; but only now, when she is 90 years old, does she allow herself the freedom to write frankly about her life with Robert — and just as frankly about her life with Anna after Robert's death, which finally frees her.

With great simplicity (a relief from the prolix prose usually offered us) Doris Grumbach paints a masterly portrait of what remains, in essence, the fate of any woman married to a man of talent — or, as is implied, any man.

Caroline, who married Robert because ". . . he looked very much as I remember my father looked, even to his ears . . .", leads a life of almost unbearable loneliness as her husband pursues his short and brilliant career. Grumbach is extremely adept at indicating just the sort of man Robert is. Though not in any conscious way a cruel man, he manages always to suggest that he lives on the assumption that "everyone was going to his destination."

And Caroline, poor Caroline, who is remarkably free of self-pity, has been roped in for the ride — not, of course, without a modicum of consent from her.

But Caroline is not without intelligence herself. This comment, for example, might be made by any woman about any man:

". . . there was a deep, unfathomable alliance among men of talent (which made) it impossible for women to enter their consciousness except in a curiously negative way. Remove our services . . . and our absence is commented upon."

Caroline, however, never does remove herself, serving Robert faithfully instead until he dies in an outrageously ironic way that will probably offend every male reader of this book.

How Caroline eventually uses her freedom will also, again, almost inevitably fan the fires of rage that seem to burn in most men's hearts; and though one may not agree entirely with Grumbach's political beliefs, one's admiration for her courage and clarity must take precedencehere: Chamber Music is a sonorous work reverberating with depths that are well worth listening to.

BIRDY, by William Wharton. Random House. $11.75.

Columbia: More Than Old History At Stake

By DONALD WATERFIELD

Pearson (at podium), Bennett and Johnson at signing ceremony

The conflict of Neil Swainson's title occurred during negotiation of the Columbia River Treaty and was between the governments of Ottawa and Victoria. Dr. Swainson's book is an encyclopedic account of the Canadian contest and the treaty between Canada and the U.S. to establish flood-control in Canada on the Columbia and its tributaries for the advantage of the U.S. and the sharing of downstream benefits.

To provide flood-control Canada had to build dams and partially empty their reservoirs in spring in order to impound the summer flood which it then releases slowly for American use in the "critical" or dry winter months. This winter release is an exceedingly valuable source of power for the U.S.

Powerful

It must be appreciated that though relatively short, the Columbia is the most powerful river in North America. It has considerable flow and 2,655 feet of fall from Columbia Lake to sea level. Before Mica Dam was built in Canada, Coulee Dam in Washington was the biggest of its kind in the Western World. Big though it is, when the Americans were building Coulee in 1944 they realized that the dam could usefully hold only 5 million acre-feet of water in June, perhaps a quarter of the river's flow in that month. And Roosevelt Lake, as the reservoir is called, extends to the Canadian border. While the dam was under construction the Americans asked the Canadian government to consider providing some flood-control.

In 1944 Canada had no market in the West for a big block of power such as the half million or more kwy she might expect as her share of downstream benefits and was remarkably slow in surveying the river. In 1951 the U.S. asked Canada for permission to build Libby Dam on the Kootenai (a tributary of the Columbia) in Montana and to flood 42 miles into Canada to accommodate Libby's pool. The Canadians refused.

In the late 'fifties Premier W. A. C. Bennett realized the great financial rewards possible in the production and sale of electric energy and he encouraged the Swedish industrialist, Axel Wenner-Gren, to generate power at the proposed dam site at Portage Mountain on the Peace River.

In 1959 Ottawa finally released its engineering report on the Columbia together with suggested sequencies of dams that would provide the 8 million acre-feet of flood-control the Americans wanted and about 15 million acre-feet for downstream to make power in which Canada could share. Mica was included in all the sequencies. Although it is credited with only miniscule flood-control, Mica was considered an essential storage and power producer. Few lived in its reservoir and no one objected. But about other dams and the disposition of the downstream benefits which Premier Bennett wished to sell, there was tremendous argument between Ottawa and Victoria (a euphemism for Mr. Bennett), hence Dr. Swainson's "Conflict."

The Americans didn't come into the fight. Since the suggested treaty allowed them Libby and provided 8 million-acre feet of flood-control, they were satisfied, but they were exceedingly anxious to get some flood-control, fast. Perhaps anticipating Canadian protection, they had built extensively on the flood plain on the Lower Columbia, inviting trouble from a flood such as the 1894 one or even the smaller flow of 1948. In exasperated impatience they threatened in 1960 to provide their own flood-control even if it did cost $710 million. It is uncertain that a mere $710 million would have built dikes to withstand a major flood or have provided much downstream benefits, but the threat may have impressed Canadians. General Eisenhower was about to retire as president and Prime Minister John Diefenbaker rashly signed the treaty in Washington on January 17, 1961. And then Mr. Bennett refused to sign.

Since the treaty included the High Arrow Dam favored by Mr. Bennett, Ottawa was surprised the premier would not co-operate. But he was in an awkward bind. He wanted Peace Power and had encouraged Wenner-Gren; and while he could not immediately use Portage Mountain's million kilowatts, he could in seven or eight years when they became available, but he could not at the same time absorb Canada's share of downstream benefits. He wanted to sell them to the Americans, but they had enough of their own; also Ottawa was reluctant to sell any power.

Jubilant

In Attorney-General Robert Bonner and Lands Minister Ray Williston the premier had an astute lawyer and an extraordinarily capable assistant. In 1961 he expropriated both the B.C. Electric Co. and Peace Power, gaining both a captive market and a supply. Then, as Dr. Swainson relates, he turned his talents to selling 763 hypothetical megawatts of power from the downstream benefits for the full current market price to the Americans. Amazingly, he did it. It took three years but he sold his benefits for $254 million American cash in a 30-year sale. He was jubilant, as well he might be. And then the huge enterprise turned sour.

Dr. Swainson's book is on the treaty and he shows little interest in the power sale. But for Canada the treaty is the power sale and the flood payments. The flood payments were supposed to be placed in a mysterious sacrosant trust as compensation to the province for the loss of over 40,000 acres in valley floors for Arrow, Duncan and Libby reservoirs; and they may have been.

There are some benefits left in the second "half" of the 60-year treaty but they degenerate so rapidly that they are worth only about a quarter as much in the year 2000 as in 1973. As the premier said, "We missed on Columbia."

Could we have secured a better treaty? Even without the advantage of hindsight, yes. We were under no compulsion to have any treaty. Dr. Swanson wistfully recalls that the Puget Sound Utilities Council offered to build Mica in exchange for its downstream benefits.

You cannot have a tribe of miners and lumberjacks negotiating a complex treaty, but since we democratically allowed the Columbia River natives to speak at public hearings for water licences and at the Parliamentary External Committee deliberations in Ottawa, after the treaty was signed in Washington, D.C., after decisions had evolved into a law of the Medes and the Persians, when the submissions of the western visitors had to be disregarded, we might have heard from them earlier.

Greedy

Francis Bartholomew and Richard Deane both submitted that we be less greedy. Deane, with 24 other engineers backing him, suggested that only Murphy (a low dam) and Mica be built. Bartholomew, highly qualified and experienced, spent a year writing his brief. He suggested at Ottawa that we build Mica only "at somebody else's expense."

Dr. Swainson, a member of the UVic political science department, compliments his readers by assuming they already know something about water and he does not bother explaining to them what to him is obvious. Why is water worth less with quantity? Why is first added worth more than second added? Why do downstream benefits degenerate, rapidly, with time? Even if the benefits do degenerate, is flood-control worth less in the future? Surely not. Why then did Canada settle for $69.5 million Canadian (half the estimated value in the 'sixties) for all time ". . . for as long as the flows in the Columbia River in Canada continue to contribute . . .", as the treaty says?

Is the Columbia River treaty all old history and of interest only to students? Definitely not. Within four years Canada may, under the treaty, divert 1½ million acre-feet from the Kootenay into the Columbia. This is physically easy and will be profitable after Revelstoke Dam is operating, but at the same time it will disastrously reduce the economics of Libby and will probaby preclude the construction of a power dam in the U.S., on the Kootenai below Libby.

Once again B.C. will hold a potentially valuable hand. It will be interesting to how we play it.

'Ghostly, Gothic, Magical, Unreal'

By JULIAN REID

"Fantasy is hobbit-forming."
— Publisher's Slogan.

Indeed it is. Ask any bookseller, and he will confirm that this oldest of literary genres is currently re-establishing itself as the newest of publishing phenomena, with sales soaring triumphantly skywards like a cloud-climbing dragon. J. R. R. Tolkien led the way and now, in his wake, the public's appetite for "grown-up fairy-stories" seems well-nigh insatiable.

For the eager newcomer, the resulting proliferation of titles is apt to prove as daunting as it is tantalizing. After all, fantasy has always been the most various and protean of all literary categories, serving often as not as a kind of last-ditch grab-bag for the offbeat and the stubbornly unclassifiable. Few readers develop a taste for all of it; and without some sort of preliminary orientation, the uninitiated will soon find himself bogged down in a nightmarish morass of deceptive publishers' blurbs and glossily misleading covers.

Which is why Franz Rottensteiner's The Fantasy Book (Oxford, $10.50) should prove a timely addition to the budding enthusiast's library. For this briskly informative, though rather superficial, survey is, so far as I know, the only comprehensive overview currently available of all the multitudinous territories covered by what the subtitle briefly sums up as "the ghostly, the gothic, the magical, the unreal."

Uniform in format with the same author's The Science Fiction Book, but somewhat less egregiously opinionated, this comprehensive study is at first glance merely another lavishly illustrated picture-book for the move-your-lips brigade. The text, however, is actually quite substantial, though perforce inordinately brief.

ALLEN
. . . schnook's fable

Since less than 50,000 words are available to treat more than 200 authors — ranging from Horace Walpole and Edgar Allen Poe through William Morris, Sax Rohmer, Franz Kafka and H. P. Lovecraft to Tolkien, C. S. Lewis, and Ursula K. LeGuin — it goes without saying that Rottensteiner's coverage is more noteworthy for its breadth than for its depth. Still, though his somewhat snobbish approach may not appeal to all readers, it should at least provide promising leads for deeper explorations into the genre.

The Year's Finest Fantasy (Longman, $11.75) introduces an equally timely new series edited by Terry Carr. While not quite up to the standard set by the same compiler's excellent annual selections of The Year's Best Science Fiction (perhaps because there is a great deal less short fantasy available to choose from), the ten stories included here are nevertheless a generally rewarding lot — and offer a revealing cross-section of current activity in this incredibly wide-ranging genre.

My favorite is Woody Allen's "The Kugelmass Experiment", a New Yorker fable about an intellectual schnook (Jewish, of course) who has an affair with Flaubert's Madame Bovary, no less! It edges out, by a nose, "Manatee Gal Ain't You Coming Out Tonight," Avram Davidson's marvelously atmospheric evocation of life in that nonexistent last bastion of Empire, the Central American colony of British Hidalgo.

No fellow devotee of "the arcane, erudite world of Avram Davidson," as Michael Kurland aptly describes it in his Foreword, will want to miss The Redward Edward Papers (Doubleday, $8.50). Here are a round half-dozen inimitably Davidsonian creations, including the horrific "Dagon" and such bracing shots of wry-and-tonic as "Sacheverell" (a talking monkey, not an errant Sitwell), "The Grantha Sighting" (a Close Encounter of a decidely absurd kind), and "The Singular Events That Occurred in the Hovel in the Alley off Eye Street" (set "in 1961" — remember? — "the year the dragons were so bad").

By contrast, alas, Clifford D. Simak's The Fellowship of the Talisman (Random House, $11.75) is all too easily pigeon-holed: a distinctly hand-me-down sword-and-sorcery adventure-romance, set in a characteristically dreary pseudo-Medieval England besieged by assorted decidely evil spirits. Despite some effective scenes of wonder, horror and divertingly tongue-in-cheek whimsy, the plot is silly and the pacing tends to drag. It's pleasant enough, I suppose, but very derivative.

As for Blind Voices (Longman, $11.75), it's something else again. This first (and, alas, only) novel by the late Tom Reamy is a flawed and ultimately disappointing performance — but don't let that put you off. For this is one of those rare books that has real magic to offer, and bone-chilling horror to boot. Not to mention real people, portrayed with insight and compassion, and a beautifully rendered period setting which brings vividly back to life a small Kansas town in the summer of that truly apocalyptic year, 1929.

Herein you will be treated to an exhibition of Haverstock's Traveling Curiosus and Wonder Show — a magic show that really is magic, for once — peopled with such hauntingly human/inhuman monstrosities as Tiny Tim and the Minotaur, not to mention the dreary albino, Angel, "the Magic Boy who can do anything." And herein, in prose shimmering with intensely repressed eroticism, you will follow and participate in the interweaving fates of three fresh-budded young adolescents, Francine Latham, Rose Willet, and Evelyn Bradley, mismatched friends who share the common misfortune of being drawn unwittingly into the grotesquely enhancing realm of Dr. Haverstock and his menagerie of living wonders.

Above all else, Blind Voices embodies the vital essence of what (to me, anyway) high fantasy is really about. Of all the miscellaneous branches of literature, fantasy-fiction is the one best suited to encapsulate, in Avram Davidson's eloquent summation, "our dreams, our visions, our fancies, our hopes (lost and found) (and forlorn) . . ." Which is explanation enough, I think, for the current resurgence of interest in this age-old genre

Another Jaded Amis Anti-Hero

By ANTHONY JENKINS

Kingsley Amis' latest anti-hero, Jake Richardson, is like "lucky" Jim Dixon, grown older and sour. Where Jim, the junior lecturer, jumped through hoops trying to satisfy the academic system and dodged students who might find him out, Jake, the Oxford Don, tries to do as little as he can get away with and finds his students unconcernedly illiterate. It's the difference between the Fifties and Seventies.

The Amis narrator still makes snide interior comments as he encounters eccentric fools and predatory females, but the jaundiced wit is now just as likely to be directed outwards against the social malaise that surrounds him. London crawls with Arabs, post-war architecture destroys the spirit, buses are late, telephones don't work, and students regard anything before 1950 as the Dark Ages. Jake's life is a daily obstacle course of petty annoyance aimed solely at him.

Bleak though this may sound, the novel bubbles with nippy scurrility. Amis has always viewed sex as singularly ridiculous. And the premise here is that Jake, at 59, isn't what he used to be.

Having had two failed marriages, his third needs first-aid at the hands of a sex therapist, a diminutive Irishman; Amis has scatological fun with the "sensate focusing" sessions and outlandish gadgetry which are supposed to boost Jake's fading libido.

But the main target for the Amis barbs is our present debasement of the English language. Jake, with Amis behind him, is always turning dead words over in order to make them say what they used to mean. He has a keen ear for the fraudulence of Americanese, and pseudo-scientific jargon, the twisted vowel, or the lazy phrase.

Despite the suggestiveness of the book's title, Jake's real "thing" is that he hates women, even though he's used them for years. I've always felt that Amis himself has never had much time for humanity, except for the sport he derives from their unappealing traits. Consequently, I prefer those of his books which depend on plot, like the ingenious The Alteration. However, in this novel he does have a built-in reason for his lack of compassion, and he is able to deal Jake a body blow or two while allowing him large dollops of male piggery:

"Jake did a quick run-through of women in his mind . . . their concern with the surface of things . . . with seeming to be better or right while getting everything wrong, their automatic assumption of the role of injured party in any clash of wills, their certainty that a view is the more credible and useful for the fact that they hold it, their use of misunderstanding and misrepresentation as weapons of debate . . ."

There is a sense of deja vu, too, about James Plunkett's Farewell Companions. Its first pages remind one of James Joyce in Portrait of the Artist . . . especially since they unfold poetically through the perceptions of a young boy. The comparison is inevitable, but not in any way diminishing. Plunkett is a major Irish talent.

The novel centres upon the childhood and adolescence of Tim Mcdonagh, his two companions, Brian and Des, and their respective girl-friends. But it is just as much about Ireland, its mystic past, felt still in the landscape around Dublin, and its embittered present. The three boys find that life is already shaped for them by political and religious passions which began before they were born, and the novel records their attempts to break free or come to terms with this legacy.

Against that background, Plunkett follows Tim's developing personality from the late Twenties up to the end of the Second World War. His narrative is paced superbly; it's as though one has lived through that time span, experiencing Tim's frustrations and his eventual sense of loss as his companions go their separate ways towards their own answers.

The "feel" of Dublin resonates around these lives. As a capital city, it is relatively small; religion and politics invade its every corner. There are passages of lyrical release, in the mountains or by the sea-shore, which only accentuate the tightness of the city, the old hatreds which tear through families and separate generation from generation.

Yet in the final pages, which echo the opening paragraphs to form a patterned frame around the novel, there is a poignant sense of reconciliation and acceptance. "So much time is spent in dredging up the past" that the older generation have formed their fierce hatreds upon dead slogans or fading flowers laid beside the browning photographs of the martyred. But for the young there is hope that the post-war world will lead to new opportunity or that the past can be turned to good.

JAKE'S THING, by Kingsley Amis. General Publishing. $12.95.

Barabara Pym's novels take us back to a pre-war world that never was. She has been called a latter-day Jane Austen, but her wit is far too genteel for that. What she does is to exaggerate her characters to the point where life round the cosy village-green tilts toward the surreal. If one must drag in Jane Austen, they are stories seen through the eyes of her Miss Bates.

"In this novel, two maiden ladies, of indeterminate age and woolly education, knit socks and sweaters, help at church teas, assist at lantern lectures. The elder Miss Bede has loved Archdeacon Hoccleve for 30 years and can' help resenting his wife, though she chides herself for such thoughts. Her sister is a collector of young curates, though she keeps a string of valetudinarian gentleman at her beck and call.

I suppose that even in 1950, when it first came out, the novel had a nostalgic appeal, a lost innocence that could never have been quite like this. Reprinted now, the book seems gently absurdist: Miss Pym has ah ironic way of uncovering the accidental connections made by befuddled minds.

Yet beneath the good humor, the quotations from the poets, the characters with literary surnames, there lurks a genuine sympathy for the sort of people who live off the tid-bits of the daily routine and for their cheerful need to love, however hopelessly, "some tame gazelle."

Wildlife Samaritan

By HAROLD HOSFORD

Only the most callous of us can be completely indifferent to the plight of a sick or injured animal. On the other hand, only the strongest among us would take on the task of nursing such an animal back to health. Joan Ward-Harris is one of the latter.

Undeterred by a lack of knowledge on even the most basic needs in administering to sick animals, she taught herself. Undeterred by the fear of heart-breaking failures, the certain fate of those who take up this challenge, she rejoiced in the gratification of success when it did come.

And undeterred by the implications of her commitment that every wild animal she cared for would be returned to the wild, able to provide for itself, she freely gave the hours, weeks and months of her life required to reach that goal.

Creature Comforts is Joan Ward-Harris' account of her experiences with her patients. It is a story, or series of stories, set in the highlands northwest of Victoria — at Ravenshill, the home of the author — in which the principal characters carry names like Archimedes Dooley, Higi, Cervus, Vixen, Admiral, and Mr. Bentley.

Archimedes Dooley was a tiny Saw-whet Owl with a damaged wing; Higi, a baby Red Squirrel that fell from its nest; Cervus, a Columbian Black-tailed Deer that arrived near death one day and which, after recovery, wandered in and out of the author's life for several years; Vixen, a raccoon, who after being given back her "wild" life had to be deported for being what she was — a predator; Admiral, a grand old male Canada Goose who, after having several ladies in his life had to settle for celibacy; and last but by no means least, Mr. Bentley — the Ward-Harris' dachshund who, despite occasional disgrace for being himself, suffered the parade of wild patients with a stoicism becoming his breed.

But Creature Comforts is more than a simple recitation of facts and events related to each of the author's "cases." It is also a revelation of the special kind of relationship that can develop between a human being and a wild animal, a relationship that often transcends understanding by all but those who have experienced it, and a relationship that demands a heavy emotional price.

Unfortunately, as so often happens in accounts of this type, the author's emotional commitment to her subject results in some rather anthropomorphic interpretations of what she sees — interpretations that are sometimes at odds with current knowledge. But, on the whole, these are minor distractions which should not be allowed to detract from what is otherwise a thoroughly enjoyable book.

A Big Novel Headed for Best-Sellerdom

By JOHN LEONARD

Walter F. Murphy, professor of jurisprudence at Princeton University, is the author of such books as Congress and the Court, Elements of Judicial Strategy, Comparative Constitutional Law and Wiretapping on Trial.

The Vicar of Christ is not such a book. It is 335,000 words of ambitious and commercial fiction. It is also a city — the sort of city in which a reader wants to get lost and wander around and think and pray.

In fact, it is three cities: War, and Washington and Rome. It is three institutions: the Marine Corps, the Supreme Court of the United States and the Roman Catholic Church. And it is written from the points of view of three witnesses: a gunnery sergeant, a Supreme Court Associate Justice and a member of the College of Cardinals. There is actually a fourth witness, a journalist with a tape recorder, who keeps his mouth shut while interviewing the other three; I take him to be Murphy's tribute to the square of the Gospels, the right angles that try to contain a transcendent truth.

"The Vicar of Christ" is Declan Walsh, born an Irish-American in a family of diplomats, brought up in Mussolini's Italy, to become, in the United States, a student and professor of law and political science. His career is interrupted by the Second World War, in which he is a second lieutenant in the Marines, and by "the police action" in Korea, where he is an heroic colonel. His heroism earns him an appointment as President Harry Truman's military liaison, after which he is off to the Vatican to agitate for papal indulgence in the Far East peace talks. A Republican president sends him back to the academe in Michigan as a dean.

But Walsh, having written a best-selling book about his experiences in Korea as well as many articles on jurisprudence for the better sort of scholarly journals, is not only rather wealthy, but also emphatically ambitious. He contemplates, as a Democrat, running for the Senate against a Republican who is old and vulnerable and knows where the various bodies are buried. Walsh is dissuaded by an appointment to the Supreme Court as chief justice, in which incarnation he will be an activist — on behalf of minorities and opposed to both capital punishment and abortion.

However: His activism takes too much time away from his marriage to Kate, who was his student and drinks too much and who dies. Walsh, remembering the death of a friend in Korea whom he sacrificed for the sake of his battalion, quits the court to become a Trappist monk. The church will find him in his monastery when it needs a simple pope. The simple pope, having been a dean, a marine, and a chief justice of the Supreme Court, will not be so simple. He will raise hell with the Curia, as a pacifist and an ideologue.

The machinery here occasionally creaks. Walsh — driven and doomed and the kind of noble noodle that seems to have been abolished by a resolution passed at a committee meeting on whether modern fiction ought to be allowed to fantasize about tragic heroes with Achilles' heels, clubbed feet in sweat socks — is dim. He evades his witnesses by disappearing into absolutes — and an extravagant passion or an angry remorse. He wants to conquer God and establish social justice, as though they were hills in Korea. He dies of hubris, which is unfashionable.

Of the witnesses, the least satisfactory is the associate justice, who pretends to a fastidiousness of culture with which either he, or Murphy, is unacquainted. I do not believe him. He need not have been both effete and puerile. His conniving is a cartoon. Perhaps Murphy is settling an intellectual score, trying to do in a Northeast Brahminism so etiolated as to have become a husk, not a character. Novels require flesh. Even Harvard and Yale have flesh.

And Walsh, or Pope Francesco, is more interesting alive than dead. To murder him may satisfy the urges of myth; but it lacks spontaneity. It is theologically willed.

Nevertheless: The Vicar of Christ is a novel about institutions, and it understands institutions at a time when most of us think of them as places to which other people are committed. It is about greed and desire and ambition, when most of us are frightened mice. It dares tragedy, when most of us muddle and rationalize and can't sleep at night because we think we are creeps. It may not be a graceful book — the book is Irving Wallace into the communion wafers and of the chalice of sacramental wine — but it delivers the goods; it makes us think.

It also divides itself up into sections by the poems of Cbigniew Herbert, a Pole whose splendid portrait is so far unavailable in the U.S. If, to keep in touch, you require yourself to read at least one best-selling novel a year, The Vicar of Christ is the one. It has the grace to click.

Strip's Hottest Private Eye

By CATHY BOOTH

NEW YOURK — Idle Vegas gamblers who chanced upon film crews in the glitter city last fall figured tall, dark and handsome Robert Urich was shooting a run-of-the-mill toothpaste commercial.

These days, the star of ABC's hit series "Vega$" gets a police escort to his dressing room to ward off fans eager to watch the strip's hottest private eye, Dan Tanna, at work.

"It's getting ridiculous. There are crowds wherever we go," Urich says, laughing in amazement. "We do lots of dialogue in my T-bird in the show. But now when we're driving along, they interrupt to yell at me, 'Bobby, Bobby, want a beer?' "

Urich — a product of the "Structured Catholic middle-class steel town" of Toronto, Ohio, near Pittsburgh — sheepishly admits to loving every minute of it.

"From what I've heard the ratings are awfully good," he says, grinning, "and after all, that's what it's all about, isn't it? Got to sell our toothpaste."

Based on the ratings, the 6-foot-plus actor is selling plenty of toothpaste for ABC in his Wednesday slot. "Vega$" consistently placed in the top 20 shows this season and during the last week of January, it took an impressive 44 share of the national audience.

Urich, who got a bachelor's degree in radio and TV communications at Florida State University and a master's in broadcasting at Michigan State, has plenty of opinions about — and input into— the show.

When the producers wanted a slickly dressed Las Vegas detective, Urich gave them what he calls the "definitive Dan Tanna": blue jeans, blue work shirt and suede vest. His Tanna may be a smooth operator with a penchant for swinging his fist first, but he's also a milk-drinking straightlaced softie at heart.

He also complains: about weak story lines, about being on too late for the younger crowd, about the "dreadful" opening credits, about the jazzy theme music and most of all, about Tanna's red T-bird. ("Be sure and tell 'em that. I H-A-T-E that red T-bird. You can't drive it fast or do anything in it. I should have a red Trans Am or even a Jeep. But that red T-bird is a real puff of a car.")

What Urich isn't complaining about are the 15- and 16-hour filming days and the money.

He remembers struggling along on $150 a week selling radio time at Chicago station WGN some 10 years ago. A one-night acting job as an Israeli soldier for a Jewish bond benefit convinced him (and the audience who thought the young Czech man was the real thing) that he should pursue his ambition to act.

"I was reading for a part in 'The Rainmaker' and I didn't know it, but he was there. All of a sudden I heard a guy say, 'Hm, good looking young man. Get him out of here.' Then he laughed," says Urich, doing a perfect imitation of Reynolds' guffaw.

Once in Hollywood, he subsisted on guest appearances on "Marcus Welby," "Kung Fu" and "The FBI" (he had five lines before David Soul punched him out). He landed as a regular on "S.W.A.T" for two years and on "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice" before becoming the romancing tennis pro on "SOAP." In 1973, he appeared in "Magnum Force" with Clint Eastwood.

Now married to actress Heather Menzies (of TV's "Logan's Run") and the father of a 2-month-old adopted baby boy, Urich is careful to point out that his polished Dan Tanna image is, after all, manufactured.

He admits to being "rather shy around pretty ladies" and, contrary to Tanna's fighting ways, says he hasn't been in a fight since he was 10 years old.

"I took the 'Vega$' job because it offered lots of opportunity for humor, but at the same time I could be a tough guy and do some action scenes," he says. "It's fun to be James Bond and jump over buildings. And, hey, they pay you money too!"

He recalls driving down Wilshire Boulevard in Hollywood one day recently when some "crazy guy" jumped out of his car and started pounding the windshield of his car.

"Tanna would have cooly stepped out of his car, drawn his .357 Magnum and, with a smile, said, 'Hi, you want to stop that?'

"Me? I roll up the windows and drive away as fast as I can."

Doing Well

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian radio shows were among 64 winners of the Ohio State University awards competition for excellence in broadcasting.

The five Canadian winners are Ideas: Friedrich Wilhell Nietzsche (1844-1900), A Blind Eye to Murder, As Dance the Flame and Harry Somers's History of Music in Canada, all produced by the CBC; and Write On, by the Ontario Educational Communications.

Views of Asia on PBS

Travel posters depict the East as a mysterious land of ancient temples, terraced rice fields, Bali dancers and giant pandas. News stories tell of another, more contemporary East with multiple races, multiple faiths and unique political systems — new nations seeking new identities. Both views are accurate, but neither tells a complete story of the varigated societies of Asia.

Now, the premiere of the new "Views of Asia" television series offers Americans a broader picture. The series of six one-hour documentaries illustrating the forces that have shaped present day Asia debuts Thursday, May 17, on PBS.

Producer, writer and host John Temple guides viewers through the natural beauty of the Asian lands as he uncovers the historical facts and the stories, myths and legends. There's a headhunter's village in the Philippines, a Hong Kong opium den filmed during a narcotics squad raid, a Chinese cemetery where the tombs are as big as houses, floating markets, psychic surgeons and the stilt houses of the water people.

"Views of Asia" is more, however, than a unique and unusual tour not readily available to Western tourists. It is a series that looks behind the scenery to explore religious persuasions, including the enormous influence of Islam; the economic bases and the dominant role of the Chinese businessmen and entrepreneurs; the sociological structures and the loss of traditional values to Western beliefs; and hybrid political systems such as "guided democracy".

Based primarily on John Temple's "Asian Insight" television series and book, "Views of Asia" provides in-depth coverage of a wide variety of Asian societies: Indonesia, Thailand, the Philippines, Malaysia, Hong Kong, Singapore and China's Inner Mongolia.
